For the BRIDE

When wedding bells chime and you walk down the aisle, lovely and beloved, that hour of breathtaking beauty is enhanced by bridal fashions reflecting all the radiance and romance, the joy and promise of happiness ever after.

Delicate ensemble sevorthe-less is fashioned for easy care since it's drip-dry sarka nylon tricot. The A line sheetie gown is topped by a colorful robe with hand-smocking detail on the bodices of both gown and robe.

Take Regular Time For Home Manicure

Busy fingers that pound typewriter keys by day, wash dishes at night, and on week-ends, help wallpaper a room, need care to keep their fresh-ness.

You can keep your hands lovely for only a few cents a week, and less than an hour of time, in a good do-it-yourself-program, that can be handled while you're under your home hair dryer.

To remedy discolored nails, professional manicurists use hydrogen peroxide. Get a small bottle at the dime store, and using a cotton swab, remove dis-colorations.

Then dip fingers in warm, soapy water to soften the cuti-cles, which then can be pushed back with a swab. Clip hang-nails with cuticle scissors.

Manicure time is ideal for applying a hand cream, espec-ially in areas where hangnails are likely to develop. Good, too, for incipient cracks in dry fing-ers.

While the hand cream does its softening job, dip a swab in the peroxide and clean under the nails. Afterward, dry any excess hand cream with a warm towel, and put on nail polish if you wish.

Hand care is a must for the busy young bride, up to her elbows in house and office work. A quick repair job on one scratched nail can be made with a cotton swab dipped in polish remover, without disturbing the polish on the other nails.

Wedding Trip Needs Planning

Planning a wedding trip should be a joint endeavor for the engaged couple long before the wedding day comes along.

Surprises, if not downright jolts, are sometimes in store for the two when they first begin to figure, "Where shall we go?"

The hardy, Appalachian climber is in for a shock when he finds his bride-to-be doesn't crave the solitude of a moun-tain cabin, but wants instead to go to a lively spot where she can show off her prowess of clothes.

There can be an embarrassing moment, too, when the man in question is forced to admit he gets seasick on any size vessel, even a gigantic, floating hotel No cruises for him.

Apart from personality differ-ences over the honeymoon spot, there's the practical matter of a budget to consider. With homemaking days soon to come, there are major investments to be made, so no skitter how lovely the thought, an expensive trip is out of the question.

Time is a factor, too. Young student couples consider them-selves fortunate if they can have a weekend honeymoon in the city, with the joys of room ser-vice, visits to galleries and shops, and casual city strolling being completely satisfying.

But for those able to take a two-or three- week junket, it's good sense to enlist the help of travel agent for specifics. He can guide the couple through the intricacies of first class family plan versus economy flight; will make all the book-ings at hotels, and suggest sight seeing trips for the area.

If your wedding is planned for June, with an accompanying summer honeymoon, it's imper-ative that travel reservations be made early. The whole world, it seems, is on the move, which means that the people who would like to go about unsched-uled, no longer can at popular vacation times.

PAKISTAN GUILTY

NEW DELHI (AP)—The UN observer team in Kashmir has held Pakistan guilty of crossing the cease fire line Feb. 21 and firing on an Indian patrol, re-sulting in the death of 12 Indian border policemen, a defence ministry spokesman said here Sunday.

Silver Makes Welcome Gift

When in doubt as to what gift to choose for the young bride, many well-wishers trad-itionally turn to silver, because it's beautiful and long-lasting and because there are attractive silver gifts in every price cate-gory.

Business friends of the bride's father may go all out on a sil-ver tea or coffee service, but dollarwise, far down the line is a host of useful gifts, particul-arly in silver serving pieces.

These servers often lead a double or triple life, a boon to the young hostess who can use a cold meat fork not only for its original purpose, but to serve platter salads. The sugar spoon can widen its usefulness to be used to serve sauces and jellies. A pickle fork doubles also as lemon fork and butter pick.

Fashion favors mothers at the wedding, who now can find dresses that are highly-styled. Left to right: The overblouse takes to lace, and for post-wedding functions, can be slipped over a suit skirt; a long gown of blue crepe, with two side kick panels of lace; a silk linen with an easy jacket over a cap-sleeved dress.

Wedding Dress Designed for Future Wear

Time was, when a girl's wedding dress was nostalgically retired to a box in the attic, and never again worn.

Today's bride, however, envisions herself not only radiant at the altar in wedding white, but going on through the year to dances and parties in the very same gown — with a few subtractions.

Designers cooperate by dreaming up dresses that can shed their trains, and dispense with their lace jackets for a social existence.

The slightly flaring sheath is a very popular choice, since it has a detachable train. Other long gowns have low, square-cut necklines, covered up for the wedding with bolero lace jackets, and ending in three-quarter sleeves. The jackets are reversible, and can be worn buttoned down the back for the ceremony and turned frontwards for other occasions.

Even the ballerina - length gown for an informal wedding is likely to boast its own jacket, and later on be used as a cocktail dress.

The shimmer of yards of gleaming white fabric is effective enough for many young brides. If there is adornment, it is subtle. Quiet insets of lace and tiny pearls may be scattered down the skirt, and the jacket may pick up the design. One very young-looking gown has tiny bows of the same fabric sewed on one seam from waist to hem.

If the gown has no train of its own, it is likely to dip and flare in the back, but with less fullness of fabric than in the past.

LARGEST BUILDING

The largest office building in the world, in which 29,000 people work, is the Pentagon, built in Washington to house the U.S. government's war offices.

Gift-Givers Deserve Thoughtful Thanks

Thank-you notes often are spoken of again and again without the consideration they deserve. The girl who waits to win and influence a new friend (her husband's) and forever consent the esteem of her old friends will seriously apply herself to this chore.

Even if a bride-to-be may have to snatch odd moments out of hectic preparations, it is well to send her thank-you notes for shower gifts as soon as possible following the shower. This leaves the decks cleared for prompt notes of appreciation for wedding gifts within about three weeks after the wedding trip.

Simple, undecorated notepaper is preferable. Neither a printed thank you or a printed message of thanks on the paper is in the best of taste. This conveys coldness and lack of real appreciation, a rather hurried, something-to-be-gotten-over-with attitude.

Notes of thanks need not be long but should be personal, warm, and sincerely appreciative. For example, such as: Dear Mr. and Mrs. Smith,

John and I are enjoying the salad bowl and servers very much. We have used it almost daily since returning from our trip. I don't know whether you knew but John is an old "salad pro," and your lovely gift makes his tossing especially delightful.

We both want to express our deep appreciation for your thoughtfulness and we expect to use your present to us with great pleasure for many years to come.

Our best to you both.

Most sincerely,

Mary N. Bates.

Letters of thanks should not be signed "Mary and John Bates." Mary expresses John's appreciation but signs it herself.

The important point is that the thought and effort behind the gift be all made worthwhile by the tenor of the bride's note to the donor, no matter the size or value of the gift.

Hostess at Coffee Break

The office coffee break has made inroads into many offices and proves to be one of the most casual and inexpensive ways to entertain.

If the young bride is a newcomer in a housing project, or has taken up residence in college quarters for married students, she may want to get acquainted with some of her neighbors without going through the elaborate motions of a genuine party.

A knock at the door, or a last-minute telephone call is enough of an invitation. The menu is simplicity itself: a coffee ring, Danish pastry, or fruit muffins, and lots of freshly-perked coffee. The ingredients for the kaffee klatch can be set up on the dinette table, on a bridge table, or the top of the hoffet.

Incidentally, if the young bride feels she should not be the first to make the gesture toward friendship, she would do well to forget stringent etiquette rules of the past. If home a piece of cake wrapped in a napkin, or else individual squares already prepared and boxed.

break invitation. If you like the looks of the young woman you met on the elevator, introduce yourself, and invite her to drop in.

You can go on to a closer friendship from there if you wish, or keep it pleasantly casual.

Cake Cutting Procedure

Back in medieval times, the traditional cake-cutting ceremony was performed with a swash-buckling gesture, by means of the groom's sword.

Today, the sword has been replaced by a beribboned knife, but the tradition remains.

The bride usually holds the knife in both hands, with the groom placing his left hand over hers. They cut a slice from the base tier of the cake, and break and eat it.

Then the cake is cut for the guests, starting with the first tier, and cutting back to the edge of the second tier.

Laundry Shortcuts Help Bride

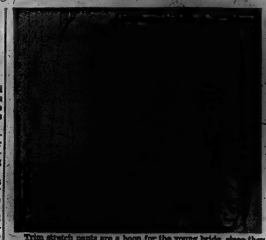
Dunking your drip-drys and keeping your white gloves in top condition is probably the extent of your laundry efforts when you're single.

But the sudden switch to laundering for three — you, your husband and your new home — can all but overwhelm a young bride.

There are, however, methods and shortcuts that simplify laundering and at the same time keep a peak of cleanliness.

Letting clothing or household care slide is not only inconvenient, but can actually be harmful, because dirt allowed to remain definitely can damage or weaken fabric. Unless spots and stains are treated as soon as possible, they may become "set" and impossible to remove at all.

Make sure that you have ample laundry hampers or bags for storing soiled items until you can launder them. For convenience sake, keep machine washables separate from hand washables. To safeguard delicate lingerie and sheer hose, use a plastic-lined bag so they won't get lost or tangled at the bottom of an all - purpose hamper.



Save the descriptive labels which come with washables so that you can follow manufacturers' instructions as to water temperatures, washing methods and ironing procedure required. A small metal card file, similar to a recipe box makes a handy container for such material.

Maintain a regular washing schedule. Many women find it helpful to do a little hand laundry in the bathroom basin every evening. But actually, there are very few things which can't be machine washed safely. Even lace-trimmed lingerie and other sheer items can be tucked in a washer, if done properly. Encase delicate items in nylon mesh bags to protect them during machine washing from roping, twisting or catching. Use only a short (three to five-minute) cycle in warm soapy or detergent suds. Synthetic fabrics do not absorb dirt but become merely surface soiled, and thus wash quickly. The quick-drying properties of synthetics are well known.

Drip-drying clothing successfully requires some "hand pressing." After arranging a freshly laundered garment on a hanger or other drying aid, stretch and smooth seams, pleats, collars, lapels and trimmings. If "where to drip" is a problem, there are many tricks to stretch space: for example, use one or two large cookie sheets to catch water and keep it off the floor of your "drip-drying room." A length of plastic film, covered with layers of absorbent newspapers, also protects surfaces from drip damage.

An assortment of clip - type hangers, inflatable plastic hangers and a drying rack or extension pole to set in or over the bathtub or shower stall help to make the most of available space. Shaped hangers are ideal for blouses and dresses, while clip-type hangers or clamp skirt hangers are best for skirts, shorts and slacks.

One important step in successful laundering is often overlooked: pretreating. This is particularly necessary for synthetic fabrics and for cottons which have been treated with special finishes. Once soil lines build up at such susceptible areas as collars, neckbands, cuffs and hemlines, they are virtually impossible to remove, even by drastic washing methods. Scrub such soil lines gently with a soft brush dipped into thick soap or detergent suds. Allow the suds to remain for five to 10 minutes to "dig in" and loosen the dirt before laundering as usual.

Trim stretch pants are a boon for the young bride, since they can be dressed up for evening with a striking wool print overblouse, or combined, for more casual wear, with a sleeveless overblouse and striped turtle neck pullover. The blend is of wool and sakis nylon.

Differing Attitudes May Irritate

Sociologists who have researched the happiness stories of hundreds of married couples point to similarity of background as a key to marital smooth sailing.

But in the early days of marriage, it's very likely that the small differences not the larger attitudes is daily living, that come as a surprise.

Day people, who greet the dawn with chirps of joy, find themselves married to night people, who groan with pain when the alarm clock goes off, and sin chipper beyond belief for the late show.

Punctual people are tied for life to non-clock-watchers.

The absent-minded one, who can't find her glasses — or car keys or the dog's leash or the shopping list — is matched to an inexorable remember-er, who can't see why others forget.

Spontaneous men of the clap-you-on-the-back variety arrive on the home threshold with a pair of unannounced guests, to the despair of their wives.

But we must admit, these differences need not rock the marital boat. They may cause a few early ripples of surprise, but after all, you wouldn't want to be married to someone exactly like you, would you?

HEADS SCOUT GROUP

STRATFORD (CP) — W. B. Kay, Toronto, was elected president of the Provincial Council of Boy Scouts at the council's annual conference Saturday. He succeeds John B. Wrigley, of Toronto. Vice-presidents include D. M. Deacon, Unionville, R. C. Hilborn, Preston.

White most brides get many linen items as wedding and shower gifts, there are likely to be a few unmet needs.

To fill the gaps watch advertisements for sales. Also special notice might be given to those ads which mention slightly imperfect sheets, pillow cases, blankets and towels. The flaws are often unnoticeable, usually nothing more serious than a tiny crooked hemline.

As to colors in linens, a girl hasn't any choice (unless she has engineered one) when gifts arrive. She can, however, use discretion when she goes on a buying spree of her own. Things to be considered: Is she living in a rented apartment where present colors in towels, for instance, might not suit future domiciles? And then, too, there was the bride of a year who said, "Why did I get those big pink roses? My ideas have changed entirely."

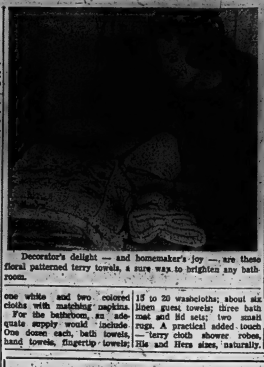
Sheeting material is a personal choice of course. Muslin is lower in price. Percale is higher weight for washing.

An old rule for number of sheets and pillow cases is still a sound guideline — six sheets per bed. That is, two on the bed, two in the laundry and two for emergencies. Each bed will require two winterweight and two summerweight blankets. A comforter and an automatic blanket are nice extras. Other bedding needs — two bedspreads, winter and summer; plastic zip-on mattress covers and cotton mattress pads.

Place mats are found in cottons or the finest linen with matching napkins; colorful plastics or woven straw. Suggested stock for the beginning homemaker: Six or eight plastic or woven place mats and a dozen vari-colored napkins; six linen or cotton mats with matching napkins. For the table cloth minded girl, add one white and two colored cloths with matching napkins.

For the bathroom, an adequate supply would include: One dozen each, bath towels, hand towels, fingertip towels; 15 to 20 washcloths; about six linen guest towels; three bath mat and lid sets; two small rugs. A practical added touch — terry cloth shower robes, in which to blow up on other topics of disagreement.

He is sympathetic with young couples who haven't the experience or maturity to operate on a restricted budget. "It's not easy to postpone buying the things you want, or to hang on to the old car a little longer."



He points out that friction is likely to develop if "the couple wants to duplicate the standard of living in the two homes they have left, rather than being patient enough to start married life on a much simpler level.

"Realistic discussion of money matters before marriage is most vital for teen-age couples" he comments. "Mutual goals must be arrived at. The two of us pastry shells. A molded gelatin fruit salad and lots of coffee completes the menu.

You can plan your shower around one category of gifts: china, glassware, kitchen utensils, lingerie, etc. Or a more general shower, with the guest bringing the gift of her choice.

Crinkable light-weight suit of rayon twill is perfect for resort wear. Overblouse and jacket trim are of silk tweed.

Decorator's delight — and homemaker's joy —, are these floral patterned terry towels, a sure way to brighten any bathroom.

Discuss Your Finances

Attitudes toward money, as much or more than the absence of it, can cause an incredible amount of friction in the home of the newlywed couple, says a social worker.

"Money is made up of emotional components. A relaxed, mature couple can share it without resentment. Each can save and spend without reproaching the other. For them, money is a positive emotion, expressing a free, faith and benevolence."

But money may be utilized negatively, he says, to give vent to hate, hostility, spite and ignorance. "The husband may be a tightwad, so his wife retaliates by overspending when she has a chance. Or she may be counting heavily on his getting a raise and when he doesn't, she'll take it out on him by not getting supper."

He points out money is one of the easiest subjects to fight about because it is so tangible and current. The management of available funds may be the actual area of disagreement, or the dollar sight may serve as an escape hatch in which to

Entertain Over Brunch

Finding a convenient day to give the young bride-to-be a shower may be difficult if her close friends are all job-holders.

In such case, a Sunday brunch, served buffet style, can be a relaxed time to fete her.

Arrange two tables, one for the buffet, another for the gifts.

Keep the menu simple, and of a one-dish variety, such as a creamed casserole to be served on pastry shells. A molded gelatin fruit salad and lots of coffee completes the menu.

You can plan your shower around one category of gifts: china, glassware, kitchen utensils, lingerie, etc. Or a more general shower, with the guest bringing the gift of her choice.

Mix-shaped meat loaf teams up with a quickie vegetable scallop dish for an easy supper. The upside-down cake can be prepared in advance too.

Casseroles Easy on Budget

Hurry-up meals are a necessity for the young bride who is bread-winner as well as cake-chef, three quickie menus do not make.

And contrary to popular belief, you don't have to cut deeply into the food budget or be uninteresting fare.

Some prior thought is necessary to make such menus attractive, but the thinking can take place while the breakfast dishes are being washed, or on the bus trip home from the office.

Many last-minute meals can be prepared a few days in advance, and housed in refrigerator or freezer till needed.

Texas-style casserole: Start with a can of chili con carne (or two, depending on the number of hungry people). Lightly grease a casserole. Make layers of the following ingredients — from bottom to top, in the order of their appearance: chili; a sprinkling of dried minced or flaked onion (fresh or frozen chopped may be used, of course); another sprinkling of chopped green bell pepper; corn chips, a well-covering layer but not overly thick; then an excessive amount shortly too much moisture from chili; grated or small pieces, sharp yellow cheese. Repeat this sequence of layers and dot the top with butter or margarine. Bake in moderate oven until heated well through, about a half hour, or until cheese is bubbling and beginning to brown.

Noodle casserole. In a mixing bowl put cooked noodles, measuring about a cup before cooking, then season with salt, pepper, a rounded tablespoon of flour, a tablespoon of dried minced onion, and about a quarter teaspoon of thyme; add pink sausages cut crosswise in small pieces (four will do, but more can be used); stir; pour over a can and a half of milk and two tablespoons of vegetable oil; mix well; put into greased casserole; top with cracker or bread crumbs dotted with margarine or butter; splash about a third cup of milk over the top. Bake in moderate oven until bubbly and beginning to brown, in 30 minutes. Buttered twisted noodles are nice for this one or elbow macaroni. Leftover meat cut in small pieces may be used in place of sausages. With beef, substitute basil for thyme and with lamb, use rosemary.

Corned beef special: In a mixing bowl, combine hash, three-quarters cup of milk, about a tablespoon of steak sauce (more if you like it hot), two tablespoons ketchup or chili sauce, a tablespoon of minced onion if desired. (there is some in the hash already), a quarter teaspoon of basil or marjoram or try a healthy pinch of both. Mix well. Place in greased casserole. Top with generous layer of bread or cracker crumbs and dot with margarine or butter. Sneak a layer of your favorite cheese under the crumbs if you like. Bake in moderate oven 20 to 25 minutes or until top is crusty and bubbly.

Hamburg special: Season pound of meat with salt, pepper, a quarter-teaspoon of the herb of your choice (basil, marjoram, oregano), a tablespoon of steak sauce; stir in one egg and a half cup of canned combination vegetable juices or tomato juice. Mix well. Press a little less than half of the meat mixture into oblong or circle shape approximately a half inch thick in a lightly greased baking pan. Mix a package of prepared stuffing according to directions — stir in an egg, one tablespoon minced onion, one teaspoon celery seed or two teaspoons dried celery flakes. Add more water if you like a moist stuffing. Spread stuffing on meat in the pan. (With two pounds of meat use the entire package. With one pound bake remaining stuffing in a small casserole.)

Pat out remaining meat mixture and place over top of stuffing. Seal top layer of meat to bottom by pinching with fingers around edges. Pour more of the vegetable juice over all and bake in moderate oven about forty - five minutes or until meat is brown. For a touch of color and zest, sliced ripe tomatoes, thinly sliced dill pickles, or sliced onion circles (or a combination of any of these) can be placed across the top of the stuffing before sealing with top layer of meat. Tomatoes, pickles, or onions can be sealed inside layers of meat without any stuffing at all. Either way this dish provides a surprise.

Budgeting Dollars

Working out a budget for sound financial living often seems to be a formidable task which can result in friction, if not downright quarrelling between the new bride and groom.

The categories themselves aren't complicated; salary, housing food, clothing and so on.

But when it comes to the more ticklish matter of deciding where to enter certain spending, there's need for a flexible approach to budgeting, and above all, a definition of terms.

Is dinner out, or a dinner party at home, to be charged to food, or to entertainment? What does the personal allowance should mean? Newspapers, cigarettes, or lunch on the job?

Where to put what isn't nearly as important as mutual agreement on the situation.

Next step is to rough up your budget under as few headings as possible. Banking authorities agree that if you have more than seven or eight headings, your budgeting will probably break down from the strain.

"Housing" can mean rent or mortgage payments, repair allowances, heat, light, and all the elements involved in operating a home.

"Clothing" can be a lump heading for clothes for both husband and wife, and can also include dry cleaning, any laundry done outside the home, shoe repairs, and the like.

"Entertainment" will cover movies, dinners out, and the usual forms of relaxation, but you may wish to broaden the term to include a sum set aside for a vacation, equipment for any sports activities and hobbies.

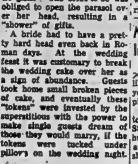
It will take a bit of trial-and-error bookkeeping before the budget allocations for a newly-married couple are made smoothly. After all, their past experience has been as single people, and many times, still under the parental roof without any worries over things like mortgages.

But after several months of money management, the couple can work from actual budgeting to forward looking estimates of expenditures, and the budget then becomes more realistic.

Showers Based On Custom

Modern brides reap sizable harvests of "loot" at the traditional bridal shower.

And many have come to feel this is only fair because in their single days they gave to their friends who preceded them down the aisle.



But still there is a sentimental side to the custom, and most brides enjoy the party atmosphere and being surrounded by their close friends at this great moment in their lives. The gifts are an added bonus.

One legend which falls how the bridal shower originated concerns a Dutch girl who fell in love with a poor but charitable miller who gave most of his flour to the needy. Because the girl's father did not approve of the miller, he refused to give the girl her dowry, necessary to set up housekeeping, unless she married a wealthy farmer.

Townspeople who had been aided by the young miller joined together and donated small gifts to help the couple. When amazed together and "showered" upon the girl, the gifts exceeded the value of the dowry she was suppose to receive.

But the term "shower" was not coined until the 1890's when someone conceived the idea of filling a Japanese paper parasol, then a popular fad in interior decoration, with little gifts. The bride-to-be was obliged to open the parasol over her head, resulting in a "shower" of gifts.

A bride had to have a pretty hard head even back in Roman days. At the wedding feast it was customary to break the wedding cake over her as a sign of abundance. Guests took home small broken pieces of cake, and eventually these "tokens" were invested by the superstitious with the power to make single guests dream of those they would marry, if the tokens were tucked under pillows on the wedding night.

Brides also had rigorous going in the 14th century in Europe. Wedding guests scrambled to obtain the bride's garter, for reasons of good luck. The disheveled brides finally took to throwing a stocking instead, made the event less wearing on the brides. They can just toss their bouquets today, and the girl who catches one is supposed to become the next bride.

Orange blossoms, now attached to the bridal veil or carried in her bouquet, were thought by the Saracens to insure happiness and good fortune.

And the reason wedding gowns are white is that in early Rome the color signified joy. Later, the connotation of purity was tied in.

Most of the customs connected with marriage have grown out of the bride and groom's three phases: capture, purchase and finally the marriage for love.

For instance, from the days when brides had to be captured comes the term "best man." He was the most alebodied of the groom's friends who actually caught the bride as she ran away. Other friends who aided in the chase were called "groomsmen," today's ushers.

From the same phase came the forerunner of the "honeymoon." After the bride was caught, she had to be hidden from kinfolk out to rescue her. After a length of time, usually two weeks, the groom felt confident they had given up looking and gone away, and it was safe for the couple to come out of hiding.

"Giving the bride away" harks back to the days when fathers looked upon their daughters as commodities to be sold.

And the bridal veil stems from the same period when the bride's face was covered until after the business contract was secure. Then the bridegroom had the chance to lift the veil and gaze for the first time upon the face of the wife he'd bought.

Pastels, for formal or informal weddings, lead the spring procession for members of the bridal party. The long, shepherdess gown has a gentle flounce at the bottom of the skirt, otherwise hangs straight. Time is one of the colors favored for the short, informal dress, which is banded with lavender ribbon at hem and neck, and has a tiny back bow and long streamers of the same ribbon.

Makeup Important In Studio Picture

Proud as you may be of that perfect tan you've acquired, it's likely to be a detriment when you have your summer wedding pictures taken.

"A sunburned bride is murder to photograph," says Michael Stanley, who has photographed hundreds of brides in his studio adjoining his wife's bridal shop.

Even for less tan brides, he recommends using a much lighter pancake makeup than usual.

"There must be balance in total makeup," he comments, "because over-emphasizing eyes or lips or skin detracts from the whole effectiveness of the picture."

The wedding photographs Stanley usually takes are three-quarter length, with the bride-to-be in a sitting position. Such a picture, he says, will always be attractive, since style changes in the gown's skirt are not detectable.

Because his photographic customers have been coming to his wife's shop from four to six months prior to the wedding, Stanley finds the girls usually quite relaxed when they pose.

But if they're not, I strike up a conversation about anything but their wedding."

Clever Budgeter Concocts Gadgets for Convenience

Although hardware stores are loaded with all kinds of marvelous gadgets for better home organization, it's possible for the inventive young woman to create a number of do-it-yourself conveniences herself and from practically nothing.

To store paperbags, take a wire coat hanger, bend it way down from the hook, then turn it up about halfway from the bottom. The folded bags can slip neatly over, and then be hung out of sight in a closet.

To make refrigerator cleaning easier, spread plastic food wrap on the bottom of fruit and vegetable drawers. Then you can fold up and toss away debris, without having to scour the bins.

Use plastic wraps too to cover mixing bowls and mixers, for storing bread and rolls to keep them fresh, and to house lettuce. Be sure, however, to store the lettuce unwashed, otherwise it wilts.

Save olive and jelly jars complete with tops for storing leftovers. Thoughtful manufacturers now put liquid measurements on some jars, so they can also be used for cream sauce and salad dressings.

Need a clothes sprinkler in a hurry? Punch six small holes in the top of a covered jar, and you're all set.

Wallpaper makes an excellent valance for a kitchen window when you don't want to shut out the light by using curtains. Or make a cloth valance out of a remnant.

Turkish towels, in addition to serving their original purpose, can be whipped into bathroom curtains or dressing table skirt.

Kitchen Shower Boon to Bride

To give her big gift, a dozen friends can each contribute a few dollars toward it. In addition each guest can bring a small kitchen tool as an extra present. This way the bride will have the fun of opening a lot of packages and her kitchen will be stocked with some extremely useful aids to good cooking.

ELECTRIC APPLIANCES

Toaster — Our choice would be one that both toasts and bakes; it's streamlined and doesn't take up too much space. The bride can bake a meat loaf, casserole dish or dessert in it, and she'll use it endlessly for reheating foods. These toaster-ovens are also perfect for English muffins, biscuits, rolls and brown-and serve breads.

Mixer — A large stationary one is a good choice, but if the bride's kitchen is small, one of the excellent sturdy portable electric beaters will fill the bill.

Skillet — The temperature dial on this modern utensil can take the guesswork out of some of the bride's cooking. Electric skillets can be put to many uses and are attractive to serve from.

Blender — The groom as well as the bride will enjoy using this appliance for mixing drinks and many kinds of food preparation. A coffee grinder and ice crusher are blender auxiliaries that the bride might acquire later.

Coffeemaker — This handsome appliance will be wonderfully useful when the bride entertains.

SMALL KITCHEN TOOLS

Rubber and metal spatulas come with wide and narrow blades; one of each width, two rubber and two metal, would make a fine gift. Once the bride starts using these she'll know she can't get along without them in many steps of food preparation.

Kitchen shears are handy to be used constantly by the bride. The sort that look like ordinary scissors (without a spring at the handle) are easiest to handle and do everything from mincing parsley to cutting cloth.

A small hand juicer is a convenience, because small amounts of lemon and orange juice are called for so often in recipes. An attractive stainless cooking board and a small sharp knife are a perfect accompaniment.

A little whisk-type beater that can whip up an egg or a little as a quarter cup of cream is perfect for two-cooking.

A small ceramic mortar and pestle that may be used for crushing both garlic and herbs is easier to clean than a garlic press. These mortar and pestles are available at pharmaceutical supply houses and some specialty housewares shops. As a gosling, a bride would probably appreciate a miniature French lettuce basket in which to store garlic.

Ice cream scoops — a bride might be presented with a small and large size. There's also an up-to-date shovel-type scoop with which the bride (or the groom) could remove hard-frozen ice cream without really trying.

A set of wooden mixing spoons — the bowls of these come in various sizes, and the handles in various lengths.

Small rotary-type graters for cheese, nuts, parsley. Also flat small graters and shredders for lemon and orange rind, fruits and vegetables.

Measuring cups and spoons. Supply a set of metal measures (¼, 1-3, ½ and 1 cup) for dry ingredients. Also a 1 pint glass measure for liquids. A set of metal measuring spoons (¼, ½ and 1 teaspoon plus 1 tablespoon) come with short or long handles and may be hung.

Pastry set — a pastry cloth, sometimes called a canvas, and a rolling-pin cover come together; to start the bride off right, add a ball-bearing rolling-pin.

Kitchen timer — even if there's a timer on the bride's kitchen range, an extra one will be useful.

Kitchen knife — a cook's knife with a long wide blade tapering to a point is a must in a well equipped kitchen.

Refrigerator dishes. The bride will probably never have too many of these. They come in various sizes in sturdy glass or plastic or luxurious stainless steel.

POTS AND PANS DEPARTMENT

This list of some of the basic kitchen utensils may also be used in choosing shower gifts for the bride.

A functional and handsome tea kettle. In our opinion, those that come with a wide cover are most useful.

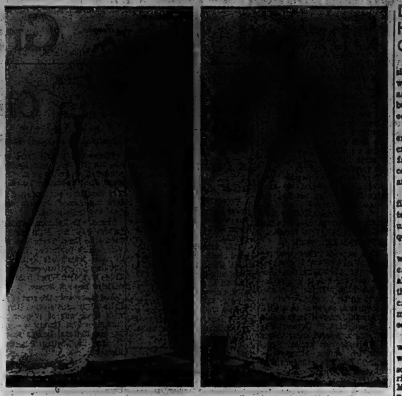
Mixing bowls — these come in metal, glass or pottery in sets of three or four.

Saucepans and skillets may be had together in starter sets. If saucepans are bought individually, remember that a 1 quart and a 3 quart size are those often recommended for a bride. Deep skillets with tightly fitting covers are extremely useful and the 8 and 10 inch sizes are good for a bride.

Cake pans — two 8 and two 9 inch round layer-cake pans (home - made - from-scratch and will be perfect for the bride's cake-and-ice cakes. Two square cake pans, one 8 and one 9 inches, will also prove endlessly useful.

Casseries — A 1 and a 2 quart, with covers, will provide for everyday and company dishes.

A double boiler — of 2 quart capacity.



Muffin pans — choose two nesting six-cup pans rather than one 12-cup pan. Paper cupcake pan liners come in colors and can be tucked in with this gift.

Pie plate — A 9 inch size is a good choice; if it is of ovenproof glass it can be brought to the table. Six ovenproof glass custard cups that can be used for baking and for molding gelatin dishes could accompany the pie plate.

Soufflé dish — if the bride is interested in French cooking, she would appreciate a traditional white pottery soufflé dish with straight sides. The size could be 1 or 1½ quart.

TO LAUNCH ROCKETS

PARIS (AP)—The French National Centre for Space Studies will launch two rockets from a site in south Iceland in July, a centre spokesman said. Reykjavik sources said the rockets would go up 250 miles to study th. Van Allen radiation belt.

Hide the Clutter

In a young couple's usually cramped living quarters, the problem of storing two sets of possessions plus assorted household goods is often insurmountable.

Studio apartment dwellers have no access to attics and rarely to cellars, since the old-time cellar has probably been converted into still more studio apartments.

To avoid a feeling of claustrophobia, a course in camouflage is highly recommended.

Along with the hideaway bed is the hideaway chest, offering seating space when needed, and storage space for all kinds of possessions inside.

Wicker baskets accustomed in the summer to go on picnics can stay bravely out in the open and become hiding places for letters, clippings, even books, if the shelves are overflowing.

Storage boxes originally intended for housing blankets can house anything: summer clothes, sports equipment, shoes and the like.

Piles of magazines as yet unread can be hidden behind the framed wedding pictures, instead of sprawled across a coffee table.

Wastebaskets can be pressed into service for hiding places. If real desperation sets in. And inexpensive paper transfer files, made attractive by wallpaper coverings, can act as gadget collectors.

TOY DRUM

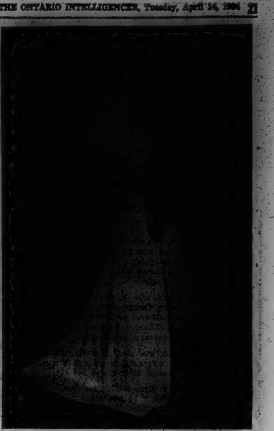
A drum owned by the University of Texas, measuring 35 feet 8 inch in circumference, is mounted on wheels and towed by a tractor.

Decorating the Honeymoon Cottage

If you want to avoid being a slave to your house, you'd be wise to consider the practical aspects of upkeep before you buy a stick of furniture, or select a rug.

Fortunately, the manufacturers are on your side, and have created all manner of furniture finishes, carpeting and wall coverings that thrive on a soap-and-water bath.

By the skillful use of synthetic fibers, they have designed materials that look delicate to the untrained eye, but respond quickly to a brush-over.



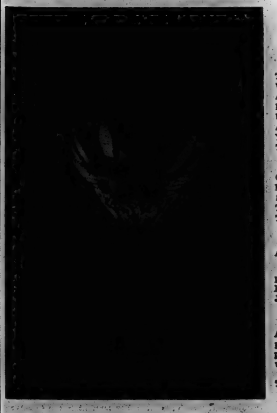
Such upholstery fabrics are woven to look like damask, brocade, tweed and even velvet — all thoroughly washable. Ditto, the rug offerings. Small rugs can be dropped in the washing machine, larger ones shampooed right on the floor.

With the same ingenuity, wallpaper manufacturers offer washable papers and vinyls that sometimes even simulate luxurious silks and grass cloths. Many vinyls, vinyl-impregnated papers and coated fabrics can actually be scrubbed with a well-lathered brush. These are particularly appropriate for hard-use areas like kitchen and bathroom.

Never before have draperies gone through such a thorough pretreating in their home factories. Not only are many wash-and-use, but they also are likely to have a special finish which resists fading, wrinkles, stains or moth damage. To save even more maintenance time, decorators suggest hanging several separate fabric-width panels instead of the traditional two-width ones. The decorative effect will be the same, but narrow panels are easier to take down, wash and rehang.

When draperies don't need ironing, just hang them damp after laundering, stretching seams and edges, and letting them dry in position. If you feel later they need a bit of touching up, simply pull the ironing board up to the window sill and press the hem right there on location. And if you take the precaution to hang them longer than sill length, they'll stay cleaner much longer.

Floor coverings offer far more washable variety too. Many couples put down easy-to-clean vinyl in an interesting tile or mosaic pattern, and use small scatter rugs on top of the tile in key areas, such as in front of the fireplace, underneath the coffee table or in front of a conversational grouping of chairs.



Sweeping train, carefully hooked under a lace bolero, adds glamor to this gown de soie gown in off-white. The neck is high, the back Watteau.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The smallish man who favors the Sam Snead type of headgear told me last that barring World War Three, an earthquake or the Bay of Quinte waters rising 200 feet, he anticipated 1964 would be one of the best golf years heroabouts.

George Reinex, who stage-manages and produces the Bay of Quinte Country Club Annual Golf Drama, is not given to wild-eyed predictions. He is a student of golf and its conditions. He is not only a good golfer but is highly rated as a course conditioner.

He brought the "new nine" to playing status in a time that under similar circumstances but similar courses would be considered a record achievement.

George is not given to long speeches. He would not stand a chance if he was tested for a spot on a political filibuster squad. Nor when he does talk does he sheer from the nearest housetop or minaret.

So his opening 1964 address to the press was brief. That under some elaborations to his inaugural statement which was terse and to the point.

"The course will be open for play Wednesday," (tomorrow, that is.)

Then he elaborated, "For members and greens fees players only."

He hastened to add an important point. "The regulated times for ladies, junior and student players comme into effect as soon as the course opens."

This, he explained, was absolutely necessary on account of the increased membership. This was "sliced" considerably last year due to the fine efforts of membership chairman Don Stratton and his efficient platoon.

It is expected that "opening day" will bring out, weather permitting, the largest curtain-raising number of golfers in years.

The golf bug is no respecter of persons or weather. It "bit" hard and it bit early this year. In some cases the clubs came out of the winter mothballs, while the Auld Lang Synes were still echoing in the halls of New Year's Eve parties.

The springtime weather of the past few days has not only given George and his well-trained troupe of course conditioners the opportunity to ready the fairways and greens, but it also brought out the golf-itched addicts.

Not a few have been at the course getting in some pre-season practice licks. Now, as the bridegroom said, the preliminary fun is over, and the golfers must abide by playing rules and regulations.

With the exception of a few wet spots on the old nine, the course is drying up fast, George told me. "It wintered well and there was little kill."

It was seeded in the first week in April and fertilization has been completed. Greens cutting started on Monday.

As was noted in this column the other day, some 400 Carolina spruce and maples have been planted along the fairways for hazard and decorative purposes.

So with the "Away we go" sign out bright and early tomorrow morning, the Club's boss let off on what should be a milestone season.

It has the benefit of clubhouse improvements made last summer, with president George O'Brien intimating that more are in order this year.

Win Four In Row

Marlies Oust Baby Habs

TORONTO (CP) — Three goals in three minutes and four seconds of the third period cracked Toronto Marlboros to a 6-4 victory over Montreal Junior Canadiens Monday and their first Ontario Hockey Association Junior A title in six years.

Marlboros won their fourth consecutive game of the best-of-seven series after a 5-5 tie in the opener.

Leftwinger Andre Champagne emerged as the star of the finale, converting Wayne Carleton's rebound at 16:32 of the third period to cash a goal that gave Marlies a 4-4 tie, which would have earned them at least one point and the title.

Then he intercepted a loose puck at his own blueline and sk-ted close in on an open net for the clincher.

Montreal goalie Rocky Farr, who played brilliantly for the Habs, was attempting to get off the ice in favor of an extra forward when his teammates lost control of the puck.

Carleton added another for good measure with four seconds remaining.

Montreal capitalized on sloppy work in goal by Gary Smith to earn a 2-2 first period lead, with Andre Boudrias, Bob Charlebois and Jacques Lemaire the mi-ers.

Mike Walton and Jim Mc-Kenny connected for Marlboros and the teams exchanged goals in the second, Don Liesemer scoring for Montreal and Peter Stemkowski cashing the Toronto marker.

Marlboros next meet the winner of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A finals between Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds and North Bay Troppers for the afl - Ontario title.

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Waterloo Siskins advanced to the Ontario Hockey Association Junior B finals Monday, defeating London Nationals 4-3 in the seventh game of their semi-final series.

Wings Call Up Dillabough ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Leafs Spread Glory Gravy Around

By DAVE REITS

TORONTO (CP) — Wanted: One crystal ball in workable condition; phone Sidney Abel, coach, Detroit Red Wings. Urgent!

Abel is willing to trade a lot of used hockey equipment for one big item—a slip of paper bearing the names of the Toronto Maple Leaf stars in tonight's Stanley Cup game.

What Abel and other National Hockey League coaches don't like about the Leafs is their inconsistence—no one player is co-operative enough to be the hero in every game.

As the Wings learned in their 3-3 first-game loss Saturday and as Montreal Canadiens will attest after their seven - game semi-final series, any one of several innocent looking Leafs is likely to skate off the bench and start trampling over the opposition.

In their eight playoff games so far this spring, five different Leafs have had multiple-goal nights.

Dave Keon eliminated the Canadiens by scoring three goals in the seventh and last Thursday night. George Armstrong had two against Detroit Saturday, and Don McKenney, Frank Mahovlich and Bob Pulford have all had two-goal games.

Whose turn might it be tonight? Abel would love to know so he could instruct his players to give that Leaf a little extra attention.

SAFE TO PICK HOWE

Rival coaches enjoy an advantage over Abel in that they usually have a pretty firm pregame idea about Detroit's star. Gordie Howe is the best so often that he eliminates the guesswork.

The defensive formula for playing against Detroit is no secret: Watch Howe, check Howe, get in front of Howe, take a few side glances at Alex Delvecchio and Norm Ullman and then watch Howe again.

The Howe-watching job is so immense that manager-coach Punch Imlach of the Leafs has decided it's no task for one man.

Imlach started off Saturday night by assigning pugnacious Eddie Shack as Howe's stroll jacket, but the big Red Wing quickly shed his manacles by bouncing Shack off the glass, goading him into a penalty and then scoring while SHACK was in the box.

The Toronto coach was feeling his oats after Monday's practice when he announced that any Leaf left winger could handle the job from now on.

"What the heck," said Imlach in somewhat more colorful phrasing, "any of my lines can handle Howe. It'll just depend on who's out there. Don't forget Howe was on the ice Saturday for all our goals."

. . . And for his own," someone was unkind enough to remind him.

HAS SIX GOALS

Howe has scored six goals and six assists in eight playoff games, second only to Ullman who had two devastating three-goal performances against Chicago Black Hawks.

But the Leafs like to spread the gravy around. Armstrong, McKenney, Mahovlich, Keon and Pulford all have three goals, and Red Kelly and Andy Bathgate two apiece. It's Abel's tricky task to forecast which one is most likely to add to his total tonight.

The Wings decided to get away from it all Monday and took a bus tour through the Niagara Peninsula. For the Leafs it was skating as usual because, said Imlach, "I'm in business. I'm not running picnics."

Both teams had somewhat of a picnic Saturday until beefcakes like Bob Pulford of the Leafs broke up a Detroit power play to score the winning goal with two seconds remaining.

The Leafs, who defeated the Wings eight times and tied them three times during the 14-game season, promise stiffer work tonight. Imlach said Monday both teams were obviously tired after their tough semi-final series.

EXPECTED LETDOWN

Abel agreed. "That was the kind of a letdown I expected after the Chicago series. But this club has had to get up before and I expect they'll be ra-ing to go by Tuesday."

Toronto is expected to use defenceman Larry Hillman again in place of Carl Brewer who suffered a painful chest injury in the last game against Montreal. Dr. Jack Kelly also describes Brewer's ailment as a rib separation.

Only change in the Detroit lineup is the addition of left winger Bob Dillabough from Pittsburgh, called to add to defense m u s c le. Centre Alex Faulkner, who was used for only part of one shift Saturday, will sit out tonight's game to make room.

Commercial Softball League

Prefers Senior Status

The Commercial Softball League announced at a meeting last night that an effort will be made to restrict the loop to senior age players and teams.

League president Don Smith said that when three minor teams had attempted to enter at an earlier meeting, most of the loop's mainstays had been "more than a little unhappy" with the prospects of the organization turning into a minor softball league.

Two of the three minor teams were present at last night's meeting and were told that it was unlikely they would be permitted to enter.

"This league was formed with the idea of giving lesser players and older players who still had enough interest to play, a place to play, not as a proving grounds or a stepping stone for minor players", said Smith.

He said that at the present time there are four older clubs showing definite interest but one or two of them had indicated they would not enter the league if the minor teams were admitted.

"There is a place for all these veteran players now and with four or more teams we would see that the talent is spread evenly to form a well-balanced league. We want it made clear that any of these over junior age players will most welcome and asked that they contact some one like Jack Whiting, myself, Don Wood, Gerry Genereaux or Dave Feeney", Smith said.

Another league spokesman felt that if there are now three minor entries ready to play, surely a fourth could be found and a league formed. "This would be better for all concerned", he felt.

The Commercial league at present has not had its election of officers for 1964. Last year's executive has Smith as president, Gerry Genereaux as vice-president and Don Wood are secretary-treasurer.

The league hopes to name at least four definite starters within the next two weeks.

Wynn Clouts First Homer

Colts Dump Cincy In National

By MIKE RATHET

Associated Press Sports Writer

"There was a little extra reason for this one," said Houston pitcher Ken Johnson. "You mean Jim!" someone asked him.

"I thought about him right before the game," Johnson said. "All the fellows did."

There was Johnson, pitching a two-hit ball for eight innings before his friend. There was Hal Woodeshick protecting the lead in relief. There was Nellie Fox stroking a key two-run single. There was Jim Wynn lashing a decisive two-run homer.

And there were the rest of the Colts—their shirt sleeves striped with black out of respect for teammate Jim Umbricht—opening the National League season Monday by beating Cincinnati Reds 6-2.

Umbricht died of cancer last week. The opening day pitching assignment went to Johnson, Umbricht's roommate on road trips last year.

The Colts provided Johnson with a 6-0 lead, tagging Reds starter Jim Maloney, a 23-game winner last season, for three runs in the fifth and another three in the sixth.

The first run in the fifth crossed on Chico Ruiz's error. Then Fox hit his two-run single. In the sixth, Wynn homered following a single by Rusty Staub. The Colts added another run on singles by Bob Aspromonte and John Bateman, a throwing error by Maloney and Eddie Kasko's grounder.

TROUBLE IN NINTH

Until the ninth, Johnson set the Reds down without difficulty. Then, with one out, Vada Pinson and Frank Robinson singled. A force out scored one run and Bob Skinner's home run brought in two more. That brought on Woodeshick, who ended it by getting Johnny Edwards to ground out.

The Colts and Reds had the National League stage to themselves Monday, continuing an opening day tradition in Cincinnati that dates back to 1892, but were idle today as the rest of the league got under way.

The world champion Los Angeles Dodgers will be at home, sending Sandy Koufax, 25-5, against Ernie Broglio, 18-8, and the St. Louis Cardinals in night game.

Milwaukee and Warren Spahn, 23-7 opens at San Francisco with Juan Marichal, 22-6, on the mound for the Giants. Chicago named Larry Jackson, 14-18, at Pittsburgh against Bob Veale, 5-2, and in another night game, Al Jackson will go for the New York Mets at Philadelphia, battling against Dennie Bennett, 8-9.

Three Aces In First Golf Deal

TORONTO (CP) — Spring fever hit golfers here during the weekend, and produced some of the best hole-in-one results.

Bob Arnold aced the 170-yard hole at Glen Eagle Golf Club, using a No. 4 iron, and the same club did the trick for K. C. Miller at the seventh hole of Parkview's 152 - yard upper course. Julie Starr, using a No. 7 iron, dropped his shot on Humber Valley's sixth hole.

'No Ifs-We'll Win It' Says Berra

Ford Starts Opener

By BOB GREEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Berra era starts today. And poor old Yogi, New York Yankees' freshman manager, has to be a loser.

If he wins the American League pennant—and the Las Vegas quotation has him an odds-on 3-to-5 choice to do so—the skeptics will merely say:

"With that talent your grandmother could manage them to the pennant."

And should he finish anywhere but far in front, along will come the cry:

He's starting a half - game back, since Los Angeles Angels got a jump on the rest of the league with a 4-0 decision in the traditional presidential opener over the Senators at Washington Monday.

Yogi, however, is undismayed. In fact, he's probably the most undismayed major-league manager who ever lived. He has Whitey Ford down to pitch today's opener against Boston Red Sox at Yankee Stadium.

SET FOR SEASON

And he and Ford, who is doubling as the pitching coach, have a little black book in which they've written down starting pitching assignments for 161 other games this year.

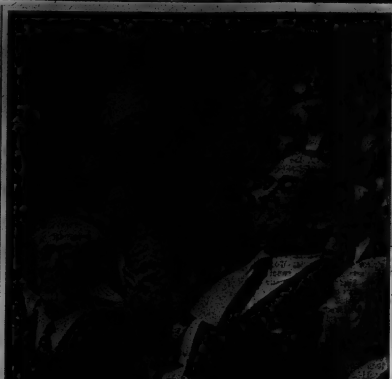
As is Berra's pre-season pronouncement:

"We'll win it. We'll win even if Mantle doesn't play 100 games. There are no ifs about Mantle or Maris or anything."

Yogi will go with roughly the same team that won for Houk, then lost to Los Angeles Dodgers and Sandy Koufax in four straight in the world Series.

There's one opening day change. Uhlianyan / Phil Linz will fill in for regular shortstop Tony Kubek, who has an ailing back.



Ford, 26-7 last season, will be opposed by Boston's Bill Monbouquette, a right-hander who was 20-10 in 1963.

ONE-HIT EFFORT

President Lyndon Johnson opened the season with the traditional ball-throwing ceremony at Washington. He was followed by Los Angeles' Ken McMicks and Julio Navarro, who did a bit of ball throwing, too. In fact, they allowed the Senators just one hit between them. A double by losing pitcher Claude Steen, 7, McBride in the third.

Navarro came on when Mc-Bride tired in the seventh. A two-run double by Leo Thomas was the big Angel hit.

The rest of the teams open today with Baltimore Orioles sending MIt Pappas, 18-8, against last year's American League rookie of the year, Gary Peters, 19-8, of the White Sox at Chicago; veteran Camilo Pascual, 21-6, of Minnesota Twins against the Indians' Jim Grant, 13-14, at Cleveland and Kansas City Athletics' Orlando Pena, 12-20, against Phil Regan, 15-9, of the Tigers at Detroit.

Wellington Beaten 8-3

Stouffville Wins Series

WELLINGTON (Special) — Wellington's hockey-weary Juvenile "D" champions bowed out of their second championship quest in Stouffville last night.

They failed to withstand a now-design onslaught of the Clippers and went down to an 8-3 defeat.

The young Dukes yielded the series three games to one. The Clippers meet the Hensall-Zurich Combines for the OHA junior "D" championship.

Forty-two games and their 10th in 20 days took their toll of the lakeside village youngsters. They showed a definite letdown from the spark and drive they marked their march to the minor title.

They gave up three unanswered goals in the first period and came back with three of their own in the Clippers' four in the second frame.

The Clippers came up with different style to that which mauled their three previous opponents. They drove hard in semi-power play at nights while they put "shadow" on Wellington's stars Don McNeil and Larry Foschuna.

At that they failed to completely stop them. Both McNeill and Foschuna scored with Larry McKenzie getting the third counter.

Bill Corner and Pete Reeser paced the winners with two goals each. Ron Nelson, Barry McLean, Glen Hoopes and Ron Brown contributed another.

McLean while held to one goal was the star of the Clippers playing brilliantly going both ways.

Saco Whips Horlocks, Lead 2-0

SACO took a commanding 2-0 lead in the Quinte Hockey League finals in Trenton last night by defeating Horlock Electric 5-1.

Third game in the best of five championship series is scheduled for Thursday night. Game time is eight o'clock, in Trenton.

SACO moved ahead in the first period 3-0, let 4-1 after two periods and added another marker in the third.

Barry Porteous paced the winners' attack, scoring the first and fifth goals and also assisting on two others. Jack Calnan triggered the attack and made the play for two others. Doug Lucas and J. Delize also scored and G. Burris drew one assist.

Referees Gord Gregory and Fred Hurst officiated the 12 penalties, eight of them coming in the final period when tempers flared. The winners drew seven of the total, including a game misconduct to R. Locke and a major to L. Potter. Horlock's L. Cooke also got a major for his fight with Potter.

TREASURER DIES

WINDSOR (CP)—Albert Colebourne, 72, secretary-treasurer of the suburban Riverside board of education for 32 years and an active member of several community and church organizations, died in hospital Monday. Mr. Colbourne worked variously as a commercial artist designing Christmas cards, an architect and sign painter.

Maritimes Right-Hander

Canadian Top Rookie Hurler

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Vern Handrahan, a handsome young Canadian who hopes in top condition for a "cup" best rookie pitcher at the moment" says Kansas City manager Ed Lopat.

The 25-year-old righthander from Charlottetown is certain to be with the American League Athletics the first 30 days of the season. The roster of the talentshy Athletics only numbers 27, one under the league limit.

Lopat, who was a top pitcher in his own playing days, and his pitching coach, Tom Ferrick, both indicated in an interview that the Canadian has a good chance to stick with the club the season. His showing in the first 30 days will tell the tale.

"I think my chances are pretty good the way things have been going," said Handrahan.

Handrahan had a deceiving spring training record. In 13½ innings he gave up 16 earned runs, 12 of those runs came in his first game, against Pittsburgh.

NERVOUS FIRST TIME

"That was the first time I had faced major-league hitters and I was nervous," Handrahan said. "I was just pressing too much."

Since then he has been tough in every outing.

"His best game was April 6 against Detroit," Lopat said. "He looked real good—shut 'em out the first five innings."

Ferrick said Handrahan has "good command of his stuff. His fast ball is alive but not overpowering. His curve is pretty good, but his strong point is control."

How does he gain that control? Handrahan said it comes from being in top condition.

"I like to walk," he said. During the Christmas period I walked about 18 hours a day for 13 days delivering mail for the post office. The rest of the winter I averaged about 10 miles a day."

Vern absorbs our instructions real well," Ferrick chimed in. We tell him how to pitch to the various batters; he listens and he executes. He'll always have to do this to win in the majors and he knows it. His attitude is good."

Handrahan was signed by Milwaukee out of the Halifax District Baseball League where Moe Drabowsky, another Athletics hurler, once starred, and other major leaguers also played at the beginning of their careers. Nine of 13 players on Vern's team, the Stellarton Albions, got professional contracts.

The Athletics drafted Handrahan from Idaho in 1962.

After a 4-1 record and 2.57 earned-run average last year at Portland, Handrahan was outstanding in the Athletics' winter instructional league at Bradenton, Florida, a 6-3 win-loss record and a 2.30 average.

Canadian Defeats Italian

BOLOGNA (AP) — Boxer Sonny Forbes of Toronto won a decision over Umberto Urzi of Italy in an eight-round welterweight match in this northern Italian city.

Forbes drew repealed applause for his technique and aggressiveness.

In the last few minutes of the fight Forbes forced Urzi against the ropes with a series of left and right hooks to the face and body.

Another Toronto boxer, Italian - born Giancarlo Barzaza, stopped Italy's Celio Turrini in the third round of a scheduled eight-round heavyweight match.

The match was halted after a few seconds in the third round by doctors when Turrini showed heavy bleeding from an eye brow injury suffered during the first round.

Barazza said at the end of the fight that he intended to make his way up to the Italian heavyweight title. He is entitled to do that because of his Italian background.

A Legendary Cellar
Where the Beatles Began Bouncing

By DOUG MARSHALL

LIVERPOOL, England (CP) — There's a cavern in this town that has a nation of teen-agers beating a path to its door.

They come from all over the country," screamed Raymond MacFall above the earsplitting crescendo of three electric guitars boosted over five loudspeakers. "Some of them treat the cellar as a shrine."

MacFall is the personable young manager of Liverpool's lucrative and legendary Cavern Club. As most every youngster with turn in here and feel a twitch: know well, the Cavern is where the Beatles began.

The brick-vaulted club: once a wine cellar, lies beneath a decaying warehouse on one of the city's dubbier side streets. Sometimes, during brief lulls in the music, ship horns can be heard blasting in the nearby docks on the River Mersey.

The atmosphere is squalid, sticky and authentic. Wooden benches line bare, sweating walls. There are a few straggling rows of chairs in front of a makeshift stage, two clapboard cloakrooms and a greasy counter serving hot dogs, soft drinks and coffee.

Yet seven nights a week the cellar is crammed to its cobwebbed nooks and crannies with 10-to-20-year-olds, Lollitas and would-be Brandos, all come to twist and shout, kiss and cuddle or just plain listen and look.

Liverpool has built a dozen similar clubs and a score of more sophisticated institutions which serve alcohol and provide gambling.

But the Cavern is tops for the 300-odd beat rhythm groups that swing through Liverpool's grim and dirty streets. For them it's the station where a lucky combo might win a ticket for the Rock Island Line—that fremied success train that promises fame, golden disks, millions of dollars and the privileges of being mobbed in New York.

"Getting a group together costs these kids a small fortune," MacFall explained. "By the time they've each paid £150 for a guitar, bought drums and amplifying equipment and staged themselves out in fancy gear, they could be owing the credit companies more than £1,500."

As he spoke a quartet in striped sweaters suits calling themselves The Boomerangs finished off an old Beatles number and, after a brief reshuffling at instruments, were replaced by an identical group in black hers aided as Lee Curtis and The Boys.

LIKE TO SWING

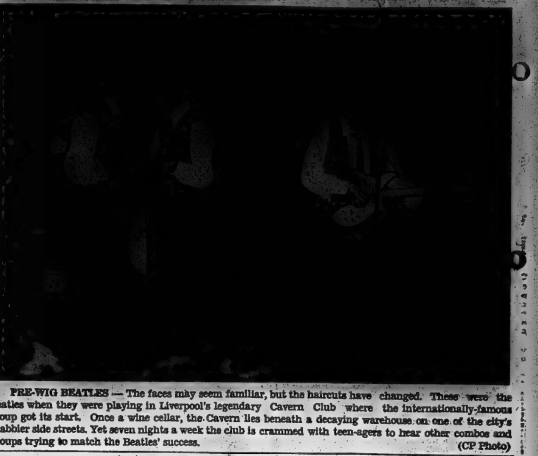
"Those groups will each make about £20 here tonight," said MacFall. "But their prime source of income is the hundreds of working men's clubs dotted through the city. Workers and their wives flock there to the Mersey beat, of course. But they like to be in the swing of things."

The Cavern recently installed a new stage. The old one; the one the Beatles played, was frantically worn through with constant stomping.

We chopped the old stage up into pieces and sold them with the slogan: 'Buy a Bit of Beatle Board.' We made £1,000 in a matter of days and gave it to the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief."

The names chosen by the groups—ranging from Ahab and his Lot to The Zeros—are one of the most fascinating aspects of Liverpool's beat bonanza. Current fads set the trends.

For instance The Tornados, The Cyclones, The Hurricanes, The Tempests and the gentle Zephyrs are known collectively as the "windy" groups. A spate of recent spy novels inspired James Bond and his Premiums, the G Men, The Mi5s, The FBIs, the slightly sinister Mafia and the determined Bloodhounds.

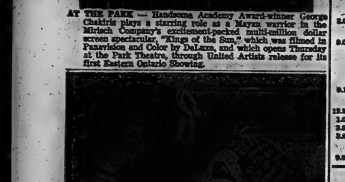


DETONATORS EXPLODE

Explosive sounds can be expected from The TNTs and The Detonators. Adam and the Sinners concentrate on religious themes. The Liver Birds, named after the mythical sea fowl that is the city's symbol, are the only all-female group.

Nobody knocks the Mersey beat here any more. Culturally, the sound has been signified by a penetrating analysis from conductor Sir John Barbirolli and then Boston's Arthur Fiedler has dropped into the Cavern to pay his respects.

But the happiest people of all are the city's cops and social workers. As a young sociologist at Liverpool University was the first to note, there hasn't been a teen-age gang battle in the dusty city streets for 18 months and last year the juvenile crime rate dropped while the ordinary crime rate soared.



"The real villains are still there," said a city councilor. "But the rest of the kids don't join gangs any more. They join beat clubs instead and work off their surplus energy dancing every evening away."

PRE-WIG BEATLES — The faces may seem familiar, but the haircuts have changed. These were the Beatles when they were playing in Liverpool's legendary Cavern Club where the internationally-famous group got its start. Once a wine cellar, the Cavern lies beneath a decaying warehouse on one of the city's shabbier side streets. Yet seven nights a week the club is crammed with teen-agers to hear other combos and groups trying to match the Beatles' success. (CP Photo)

AT THE PARK — Handsome Academy Award-winner George Chakiris plays a starring role as a Mayan warrior in the Mirisch Company's excitement-packed multi-million dollar screen spectacular, "Kings of the Sun," which has filmed in Panavision and Color by DeLuxe, and which opens Thursday at the Park Theatre, through United Artists release for its first Eastern Ontario Showing.

AT THE BELLE — Elizabeth Taylor and Rex Harrison in a romantic drama from 20th Century-Fox DeLuxe color spectacle, "Cleopatra", which also stars Richard Burton, continuing its highly successful engagement at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

'Best Man' Good Movie Dealing With Politics

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The new movie—The Best Man is a winner.

It is neither grotesquely comic, like Dr. Strangelove, nor melodramatic, like Seven Days in May. It deals with politics at a national nominating convention in realistic style, using almost documentary camera technique and actors with a high quotient of believability.

This is the situation: Two high-powered candidates, neither with enough votes to win the presidential nomination, must knock the other out of the way. They try to do so, using blows both above and below the belt.

Gore Vidal has adapted his stage play, and both his construction and dialogue are admirable. The excitement builds all the way to the surprise ending, and the scenes are peppered with gags and wry political asides.

PLAYS TASTY

The players perform in an exemplary manner. Cliff Robertson plays the nastiest candidate and hence comes off with top honors.

The campaigning secretary of state is played by Henry Fonda, Hollywood's favorite politician (Advise and Consent, Fail-Safe). He gives dedication to what is essentially a gray role of a man who has trouble making up his mind.

Lee Tracy is capital as the dying former president, as he was on the stage, and Ann Sothern fills in and out with hilarious results as a political busybody. Edie Adams once again does her fine job of providing sex and sympathy.

COLLECTION INSURED

Roy Rogers' gun collection, which he keeps in a big glass case at his Double R Ranch, is insured for $25,000.

Audience Greatly Delighted With Most of Selections

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—It always seems a little ironic that each year the motion picture industry puts its big show on television.

But it turned up again Monday night on ABC and, as usual, rambled on for more than two hours of envelope-opening, heartfelt thank yous and bits of entertainment.

And, as usual, it was fun to watch.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has been handing out Oscars for 36 years and the ceremony and protocols are established.

Usually the viewer can depend on one of the women winners breaking into happy tears. Unfortunately, neither Patricia Neal, winner of the best actress award, nor Margaret Rutherford, who won in the supporting role category, was present.

WAS MOVED

But Sidney Poitier, chosen best actor, received unwelcome applause and received the award with obvious emotion.

Much of the fun for a women is looking at the stars' dresses and hairdos. Softly draped chiffons or richly beaded satins, and high, extremely elaborate hairstyles seemed most popular.

The audience seemed genuinely delighted with most of the selections, not only of Tom Jones, a British film, as the best movie, but with awards in the less important categories as well.

Generally, the show went along smoothly. An unexpectedly amusing moment came when Sammy Davis Jr. was handed the wrong envelope by mistake and announced the wrong winner. He paused, looked puzzled and then said with mock indignation: 'Wait until the NAACP hears about this."

Dump Windsor N.S. 7-4

Ottawa Meets Woodstock

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ottawa Montagnards advanced into the Eastern Canada finals of Allan Cup competition Monday with a 7-4 triumph over Windsor (N.S.) Maple Leafs.

Ottawa's 3-2 win in the best-of-five series completed the list of Eastern and Western finalists in the annual hunt for senior hockey top award.

The Montagnards open their best - of - seven series against Woodstock Athletics in Woodstock Wednesday, two days before the Western teams, Saskatoon Quakers and Winnipeg Maroons meet in their first game at Winnipeg.

Ottawa was the only one of four finalists to have a tough semi-final, as both teams fought down to the wire. Windsor took the first and fourth games of the series, and one of the Monte's wins, last Friday, needed an overtime period.

But they had too much for the Maritime champions Monday, as Guy Beauregard led the way with two goals. Dunne Beadle, Al Stitt, Larry Larock, Bill Watson and Gaston Scocurs fired the other goals, Scocurs going into an empty net in the final minute of play.

Alf Flamingan, Luke Hayden, Georges Roy and George Gaultbault scored for the Maple Leafs.

Will Carry On Fight

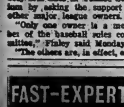
Finley 'Porch' Cut In Two

CHICAGO (AP)—Owner Charles O. Finley was forced to cut his Kansas City home run porch in half, but he vows to carry on his fight against the cozy foul lines in Yankee Stadium by asking the support of other major league owners.

"Only one owner is a member of the baseball rules committee," Finley said Monday. "The others are, in effect, employes.

"They'll never change the rule to bring the Yankees in line for the first time in 40 years unless the owners tell 'em to do it."

Finley said he would demolish his "pennant porch" at the insistence of Ford Frick, commissioner of baseball, and Joe Cronin, president of the American League.



But he added he would continue his protest by erecting a "one-half pennant porch," also green and yellow with those words painted on the front of the playboard fence. It will have some 300 temporary seats behind it, like the old one. And it'll be 44 inches high, same as the wall in right field at New York.

"The only difference will be it will be entirely behind the 225 - foot limit," Finley said. "The Yankees have a 296 distance to right—and not to left, with a 31-inch wall in left.

"The short foul lines are worth 30 victories a year to the Yanks," he said, "and the half-porch will be worth five to the Athletics.

"We'll keep close track of it during the season."

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR

For April 15

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Settle affairs. Don't flit from one subject to next. Key is concentration. You succeed if you show you "mean business." Otherwise, there are some who may attempt to stop moves.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Your love of luxury surges to forefront. Remember that budget does have breaking point. Stress a more practical approach. Obtain what you need. Wait awhile for other purchases.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Cycle high. Venus and Moon in your sign. Personal appearance of special importance today. Highlight glamor. Coincides with time when you sparkle — when people "pay attention."

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): Grab reins and pull light. Gain greater control of situation. Don't let circumstances "run away" with you. Be practical. Insist on facts. Say no to one who continues talking nonsense.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 23): Friendships are important. But so is personal gratification. Don't permit yourself to be "used." Applies especially to money matters. Pay your share. Insist that others do the same!

Virgo (Aug. 24 to Sept. 22): Be prepared for sudden breaks. The end of a cycle to occur. Don't try to hold back clock. Strive for the new. Be willing to pioneer. Key for today is surprise.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23): Free lunar aspect paves way for travel, publication. You are due to get credit for past efforts. You can now achieve many hopes, ambitions. Stress greater independence.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 21): All aspects now in your favor — though you may be skeptical. Overcome self-doubt. Move ahead. Wager on abilities. Don't be overly modest. Speak up on your own behalf.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Begin to probe various possibilities. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. But hold back on final decisions. Say no to alternative which involves legal problems.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Strive for balance. Don't go to extremes. Important to remember moderation. Applies to personal as well as professional activities. Be mature. Resist throwing caution to winds.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Good lunar aspect coincides with romance, creative activity. Time when you are to be repaid for past favors. Much to be gained if you make proper resolutions — and keep them!

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Day favors practical endeavors. Information due to filter through from reliable sources. All news may not be pleasant. But if you are determined, you will succeed. Disregard fantastic notions.

If today is your birthday . . . you are loving, capable of inspiring loved ones, to great heights.

Doctor Admits Operating Error In Death Case

Testifies He Sewed Up Wrong Abdominal Duct

GUELPH (CP)—Dr. Robert K. Graham of nearby Palmerston Tuesday told an inquest into the death of Ina Noer, a 56-year-old widow, that he committed an operating room error which, a pathologist testified, caused the woman's death.

Dr. Graham, 39, who operated on Mrs. Noer eight days before her death in Palmerston General Hospital March 7, testified he had severed one bronchial tube her bile duct system and sutured another closed by mistake during the operation for gall stones. He said he was not aware during the operation that he had sewn up the wrong abdominal duct.

He also said he was not aware at the end of the operation that a surgical clamp, discovered missing by nurses, was left in Mrs. Noer's body.

Dr. Barton, a pathologist at Guelph General Hospital, had been left a portion of Mrs. Noer's body.

Dr. Barton testified earlier that he found the clamp but it had nothing to do with the woman's death. He said death was due to peritonitis—inflammation of the abdominal cavity's inner lining.

The inquest, which began Tuesday under Dr. H. B. Cot, Caron and Hazard Valley areas, near Sudbury were flooded by swollen creeks and Capreol was without power for five hours after a hydro pole burned.

Wind - blown and periodically restricted vision on Highway 69 south of Sudbury.

In Sault Ste. Marie, winds reaching 70 miles an hour ripped off 30 feet of roofing over the best-care section of a nursing home. Power was cut for 40 minutes in some sections of the city and in Sting Ridge.

A small airplane was flipped at Kapuskasing airport and a theatre marquee in the town was ripped from its supports. Several telegraph poles were snapped at their bases.

There were few power interruptions in the Timmins, area within an hour.

Near Notre Dame du Nord, Que., 45 miles southeast of Kirkland Lake, melted snow, drove tons of logs down a narrow ravine and ripped out 30 feet of highway.

Seven feet was washout, which left a chasm about 60 feet deep, occurred immediately behind a moving truck. The driver halted with his rear wheels overhanging the crevice.

Quebec Not Like Others

- Pearson

By KEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—". . . Quebec province is not a province like the others.

"Therefore it is position is bound to introduce special features into federal-provincial relationships."

Those were the keynote phrases Tuesday in a major policy speech delivered in the Commons by Prime Minister Pearson, underlining the importance of a sense of national unity in all the decisions of the federal Parliament.

Mr. Pearson, making a non-partisan intervention in the final day of the six-day budget debate, stressed the importance of developing a strong central government without encroaching on the responsibilities of the 10 provinces.

He spelled it out this way:

"Politically that problem, as in every federal state, is the necessity for having a central jurisdiction, in respect to and in which it can effectively resolve, to discharge its responsibilities to all the people, but a central government which will not encroach on the jurisdiction and the provinces . . ."

CENT HASSY

"The reconciliation of these two things is not easy," the prime minister warned. "It never has been, in this country or in any other Confederation, and I approach it in a difficult now in Canada as it has ever been on our history."

Speaking of Quebec, he said: "The French-speaking minority has certain rights and privileges which are guaranteed in our constitution: It is a minority by no means confined to the province of Quebec, but that province is in a very real sense the guardian of its cultural and religious and linguistic rights."

Mr. Pearson said the problems of regional disparity and cultural-provincial relations seem to overlap.

It was not capitulation or betrayal for the central government to recognize the special problems arising out of the relationship with Quebec and to endeavor to deal with them carefully call it such are, themselves, I suggest, betraying the principle of Confederation and weakening the only foundation on which Confederation can stand firm and endure."

CITES DANGER

"A prejudiced and obstinate refusal to recognize that there are special complexities in relations with Quebec, or a failure to appreciate the special sensitiveness of that province as the guardian of the rights of a minority, could and finally destroy Confederation and make impossible . . . the growth of a Canadian nation."

He added that "for a province to exploit that position at the expense of Canada as a whole would have the same tragic result."

Mr. Pearson said his government rejects the extreme views being argued today and supports an ultimate reconciliation of all views.

He said Canada as a nation must be stronger than its parts. "A French-speaking Canada must play a proud and equal part in that nation, must feel that it belongs to it and that Canada belongs to it."

Mr. Pearson said provinces have a right to opt out of shared programs, and Ottawa would not try to block this right. For a province to do this "need not be a threat to national unity."

Dealing with the question of the federal spending powers, the prime minister said there is no real future for Canada in "loosely knit confederation" in which all power was in provincial hands.

WORK THEY MAY

There are forces working in that direction, he said. "They could destroy Canada by leading to separatism. I do not believe these forces will prevail."

The government intended to recognize the growing importance of Canada and the U.S. hope [illegible] this revolution of the Young, said the 38 - year - old brother of the late president John F. Kennedy, "and I believe we must encourage them."

"For if Western powers do not help them, these revolutionists will make common cause with some other system to achieve their immediate goals.

"If this means that the future portious, I must admit that I think it is. But it is also exciting. If the odds seem long, then, as Edith Hamilton said of Aeschylus, 'to the heroic, desperate odds fling a challenge.'"

This was the attorney-general's first speech in Canada, a country which, he noted, replaced with deep sympathy when president Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, Tex., last November. The family was "profoundly moved" by this response, Mr. Kennedy said.

"We shall never forget it. Canadians will always have our heartfelt appreciation."

Introduced by Stuart Keate, president of The Canadian Press and publisher of the Victoria Times, Mr. Kennedy was thanked by R. L. Curran, president of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association and president and managing editor of the Sault Ste. Marie Star.

The attorney-general, who often has busloads of youngsters brought to his office for talks, said the late president was deeply involved in the struggle to win the hearts and minds of youth everywhere.

In the unsettled atmosphere of the world today, there is a premium on the qualities of distinction of people. They are more important to themselves,

Kennedy Predicts Youth Will Achieve Goals in Any Event

TORONTO (CP) — Robert F. Kennedy said Tuesday night youth in the developing countries will achieve their idealistic goals even if they have to pull down governments to get them heads to win a share of "a better, cleaner world."

"This affects us: Canada and the United States, and you and me," the United States attorney-general added in a speech before The Canadian Press annual dinner. "We must recognize that the young in many areas of the world today are in the midst of a revolution against the status quo. Their anger is turned on the systems which have allowed poverty, illiteracy and oppression to flourish for centuries."

Judge Landreville Defends Reputation Before Inquiry

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario Supreme Court Justice Leo Landreville testified for three hours at the perjury trial of Ralph K. Farris Tuesday, most of which time was taken up with a spirited defence of his reputation.

Farris, 42, of Timmins, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company, faces two charges of perjury in connection with his testimony at Ontario government inquiries in 1958 and 1962 into the disposition of shares in NONG.

The Supreme Court jury under Justice Dalton Wells, Q.C., entering its sixth day of hearing, has heard evidence that 7,500 NONG shares from a special account went to Mr. Justice Landreville soon after Sudbury granted a gas franchise to NONG while he was mayor.

"From the first to the last," defence counsel Joseph Sedgwick asked Tuesday, "did any official of NONG provide you anything or give you any indocement?"

"Definitely not," the judge replied. He maintained the franchise was awarded to NONG in the best interests of Sudbury, not no thought of personal gain.

The only other witness Tuesday was John McGraw, head of Continental Investment Corporation of Vancouver.

Farris' denial of knowledge of the disposition of 10,000 NONG shares handled by Convesto is the basis of one of the perjury charges.

Mr. McGraw testified that the company president ordered the selling up of the NONG account with Convesto and supervised its disposition.

He said Farris, while establishing the account, ordered the distribution of specific amounts of shares, including 10,000 to Mr. Justice Landreville.

Judge Landreville said Sudbury had already committed itself to granting the franchise to NONG when he first met Farris.

He said he told the accused he was interested in acquiring shares in the gas company and "Mr. Farris said he would see what he could do."

He said he achieved a NONG offer of 10,000 shares at $2.50 apiece in 1956.

He said he believed it was in February, 1957 he received a telephone call from Convesto

High Winds Create Damage

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

High winds combined with rising floodwaters to cause extensive damage in parts of Northern Ontario Tuesday.

At Sudbury, gusts up to 85 miles an hour shattered plate glass windows and blew trees across telephone and power lines.

The winds picked up ice in northern lakes and damage was caused by flooding at a Sudbury restaurant, service station, recreation centre and two stores.

Shortly before noon a flash flood raced down Main Street in Hallebury, pouring mud, rocks and sand into stores, the high school, courthouse and other buildings. Small streams had swelled to overflowing during the warm weather of the last few days.

The southern part of the province received between one of up to 35 miles an hour, but damage was confined to the Lake Simcoe area where ice was piled up against harbors and boat houses — in some places to a depth of 25 feet.

HOMES FLOODED

Homes in the Coniston, at Caron and Hazard Valley areas near Sudbury were flooded by swollen creeks and Capreol was without power for five hours after a hydro pole burned.

Wind - blown and periodically restricted vision on Highway 69 south of Sudbury.

Canadians Targets In Cyprus

CP from AP-Reuters

NICOSIA (AP) — Scattered clashes flared on Cyprus again today and three Turkish-Cypriots were reported killed. Canadian UN troops were shot at in two outbreaks and returned the fire. British troops also fired back once.

Greek - Cypriot sources said three Turks were killed during the night when Greek fighters overran an advance Turkish positions in the Kyrenia Mountains. UN officers there are seeking to avert a pitched battle.

The Turks were among about 200 entrenched on a strategic hill 12 miles north of Nicosia. As battles whined overhead, UN negotiators tried to persuade the Turks to abandon the hill but to the avail. Greek-Cypriots have threatened an all-out attack.

UN headquarters said Canadian troops shot back after Turkish-Cypriots fired off flares in Trakhonas, a Nicosia suburb, and in the Kyrenia Mountains. No Canadian casualties were reported.

A spokesman said 30 Turks attacked Greek positions in Trakhonas and began shooting at Canadians patrolling the derline area. The Turks retreated behind their earth barriers after heavy fire.

TURKS DIG IN

In the Kyrenia Mountains, the spokesman said, the Turks dug in on the hill and the Greeks threw fired all night. This morning the Turks opened up on a bus loaded with Greek workers, mostly women.

Canadian Maj. Patrick Trombley of Calgary, Alta., a company commander of the Royal 22nd Regiment, arrived moments later and set out to recover the personnel carrier waving a blue UN flag. The Turks immediately began shooting at him and two accompanying truckloads of Canadian troops, the spokesman said.

After receiving permission by radio to retrieve the jeep, the Canadians opened up with 30-calibre machine - guns. Shooting from the Turkish positions stopped a few minutes later.

Reds Inflict Stunning Defeat On Vietnamese Forces in Delta

TAN PHU (AP)—A three-day battle with two Communist Viet Cong battalions has left the southern Mekong delta region bleeding and grief-stricken and the Vietnamese army with its heaviest casualties in the South Viet Nam war.

U.S. advisers reported nearly 300 government soldiers dead or wounded.

Civilian casualties may exceed 200, an American adviser said, apparently there were deliberately inflicted by the Communists on government sympathizers.

5-Month Hunt Ends As All Bonds Recovered

Blame 'Big-Time' Hoods In Law-Office Mystery

By HARRY HULBALL

All available bonds in the Cass theft have been recovered.

Belleville police today revealed they had unearthed another $40,000 in securities missing from offices of lawyer Ronald Cass since December.

The latest discovery—this time in Ottawa—brings to $75,000 "the value of recovered securities in the baffling $95,000 theft—now confirmed as the work of a "highly organized gang" operating through Ontario and Quebec.

Investigators said today only three bonds from the lengthy theft list were still outstanding—and they had good reason to believe these had been destroyed by criminals.

"These issues are also redeemable by Mr. Cass," said one of the investigating officers. "So to all intents the bonds have been recovered."

The latest discovery—incidentally triggered by Ottawa police use another case—happened last week, although local police kept silent while carrying in vestigations.

It was the second development in the case since last January, when police got their first lucky break with discovery of $85,000 in bonds in a Montreal bank. A bond house salesman, Michel Bissonnette, then about 26, was later arrested and now faces possession charges in Montreal.

UNVEILED ON INFORMATION

On April 4 while making a routine investigation, an Ottawa detective accidentally stumbled on information pertinent to the Cass theft.

He went to the Colonial Check terminal in the capital and found current contained $21,000 in bonds and securities. He discovered it had been sent there previously from Toronto.

Detective Sergeant Harold Reid and plainclothesman Ross Davidson then went to Ottawa to carry on the investigation further.

The result Ottawa police on April 9 recovered a second parcel with nearly $20,000 of the missing bonds. Again a vacant lot in Ottawa's west end.

Police now are confident that all the bonds to be recovered have been found.

"We know that of these are

RAISES QUESTION

Ken Bryden (NDP—Toronto Woodbine) brought up the subject on post programs further consideration of the welfare department estimates. Expenditures for five welfare programs in which the provincial and federal governments share the total cost were included in the estimates.

The premier did not disagree Quebec's right to contract out of the programs—which had been of great benefit to Quebec, especially the Maritimes—but this was at variance with Ontario's policy.

Mr. Bryden, directing his remarks at welfare minister Cecile, said he was concerned with the "glib way" in which Ontario seemed prepared to abandon programs entirely, to provincial control. Ontario seemed to be acquiescing in this.

Entering his seat to answer the question, the premier said Ontario's Government was well aware of its Canadian responsibilities, but probably could remain out of some shared programs without doing harm to other provinces.

He suggested more flexibility in the programs, so credit from an unused program could be shifted to another area of shared cost.

As expected the government's

CBC Educational Program Organizer Sees Big Future For TV in School and Home

Television, the modern-day electronic miracle, has a big future in the field of education both in the school classroom, and at home — if there is the right choice of programs.

This is the feeling of Daniel J. McCarthy, organizer of educational TV programming for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, who Tuesday evening spoke to members of the Avondale - Prince Charles Home and School Club.

Whether television was used to project and extend educational values was up to us, he said.

Speaking on the subject "The impact of the TV image — at Home and at School," Mr. McCarthy said this was actually what had happened.

"We have been hit with something — something new," he said. "Television is so new that we cannot yet judge its total effect on society — and yet our children have never known the world without it."

CAN BE EXCITING

Television, as it is used in the home and as it can be used in schools, is an exciting, thorny and completely challenging subject, he said.

If children and adults are opposed to many of the good things they will find attractive, attentive and enthusiastic viewers and may go out into the world more excited and better equipped.

Mr. McCarthy said that television was for example a mirror of the world. It is opening up a knowledge and contact with the world in a tremendous way.

At the same time it presented a tremendous challenge to human development, because it was at a time when work and leisure are in conflict.

"How will we use this new leisure time!" asked the speaker.

But there was the problem of "overselling" and parents were advised to be firm regarding the choice of programs which children should be allowed to watch.

FOUR KINDS

Mr. McCarthy said there were four distinct kinds of educational television or ETV, as it is popularly known.

First there is the general programming available to all the public on the networks, the Live and Learn TV series, Close-Up, which this year was enlarged into Horizons, CBC Newsmagazine and Inquiry.

Children's shows in the same field were also entertaining and educational, like This Living World, Friendly Giant, or Nursery School Tests.

A special program of this type was Chez Helene which was made a real step forward in teaching French to young people.

Then there was the more specific "school broadcasts" intended for the classroom. One kind of school broadcast is directly instructional and is based directly on the curriculum and becomes part of the curriculum.

This type of television teaching was said to be 10 years old in the United States and stimulated by teacher shortages has assumed major proportions.

NOVA SCOTIA PROJECT

In Canada directly instructional television has been tried only in Nova Scotia, where there are courses daily in mathematics and science for high school and French for the lower grades.

A third kind of educational television for school use was meant for enrichment only and was supplementary to the subject curriculum. While this type of program is for all provinces except Nova Scotia.

A fourth type of educational TV was the closed circuit ETV for special instructional purposes between universities.

In Toronto the new Scarborough University will have closed circuit TV. It means that the television lecture of a top professor at Varsity can be heard and seen by students at several universities.

The speaker began to predict how fast technological changes are going to come, or who can say what educational TV will mean to our schools?" Mr. McCarthy asked.

Ignore Survey Of Teachers Board Told

TRENTON — The members of the Trenton Board of Education have been told by the Ontario School Trustees' Council to ignore the recent survey of school board rating survey, conducted secretly by the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation, "so seriously."

Ed Hall counsel in a letter to the Trenton board, read at a board meeting Monday night, said: "I have seen the report and it is complimentary. Don't berate the teachers. Let us have the results of the survey are critical."

The results of the "confidential" assessment of local school boards throughout the province, by teachers, feature the school staffs (and which the council claims isn't so confidential) will not be released published each year, for the past few years, in leading Ontario newspapers. The council said in its letter Monday night that last year, "major boards refused to feature the survey."

The trustees' council said it had been "critical of the survey since its inception," as the article by publication of boards' ratings "had an unfortunate effect on teacher-board relations."

The letter from the trustees' council was read to the board by Mrs. Ruth Bateman, Mrs. Baker, and as member of the Trenton board made any comment on the council's comments.

After supervising principal V. J. Carswell had presented 11 public school teachers be given permanent contracts, the board passed a motion by Whittley and Donald Sutherland supported C. R. McMullen, to ask the board of public schools, to ask the board of public schools, to ask the board of public schools

Much of West Hill Built Up Within Living Memory

About eighteen people, on a warm and sunny Sunday, toured a part of the West Hill. Much of this area has been built up within living memory, but all the same it is interesting to pick out the various styles in the streetscape, stretch along Bridge St. and Highland Ave. is particularly instructive, since it ranges over a decade from 1840 to the present is represented in a short space.

It is a pity that the original Bridge St. owners zip off "gingerbread" and iron cresting that happen to go out of style in their comfortable colors never thought of by the original builders, and make an experiment out of a house that was considered fine in its day.

The quality of the buildings put up over a long period of 116th on this stretch of road shows that this has long been considered a rather nice part of town; it seems to be only recently that owners have begun to treat it with contempt, bringing in commercial uses and filling in a garden with an apartment block.

The only house in the area on the 1816 map seems to have been situated on the south end of the West Playground, just north of the Mooney house. It appears to have been there still at the time of the 1840 map, when the name "Dr. Lister" is marked in red pencil on it. Dr. Lister will have been Susanna Moodie's nearest neighbor.

Of Lister's house, Mrs. Moodie's Grosse Isle days, must be dead. But it appears on the 1853 revision of the 1878 insurance plan.

Historical Society listeners have an eye for "gingerbread" now, the Museum having recently acquired a set of paper and wooden patterns from a century - old woodworking shop near Smithfield. (It also has all the water-powered sawey that could have cut it out.) This type of "drapery" was popular in Ontario, in a bewildering variety of styles, from about 1880 right through the 1890's. Although most of us have been brought up to despise it, this fanciful cut-out work is a fascinating embellishment or otherwise plain buildings. It is a skill at its own right. If any style is to be condemned, it must be the stripped - down boxy style of 1900-1920, built of pressed brick, with too-heavy attic and too-large window panes and milk-bottly Tuscan porch columns supported on moulded concrete blocks. This style was a violent reaction to Victorian over-elaboration, partly a dismal result of the classical craze that followed the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, which spread Roman columns over every bank facade on the continent and set architects to work "progress," lucky thirty years."

ST. JAMES SHOWN

Before the walkers set out on the Bridge St. tour they were shown in the Museum, illustrating the progress of the Gothic Revival style, from 1840 to 1890, with some pages of A. J. Downing's book, published 1850 on Cottage Architecture (a copy, luckily, has been found in Moodie Cottage). The illustrations Downing was the chief exponent in the early days of the Gothic style, and by his pictures and books helped greatly to popularize it. He also approved of other styles, notably the Tuscan Villa (though he hated Greek Revival). His illustration of a Tuscan Villa could have been the inspiration for the Bell-Riggs house at Queen and George Sts., and some of his grave square Italian towers could have inspired those with the lightning bosses (red brick added behind an older white wooden house) at the top of Bridge St., and the Strange rubblestone house on Church St. The architect of St. Agnes Manor, Queen and George Sts. (now old) need only have looked into Downing for his plans.

THEY MOODIE COTTAGE

The tour wound up with coffee at Moodie Cottage. This must have been built about 1836, for Susanna Moodie's Moodie's husband bought it. Mrs. Williamson will be writing about it's life in the years to this paper at another time. It is now owned by John and Catherine Coly, who are lovingly restoring that and furnishing it in harmony with its period.

Some joggers from the tour, returning homewards, took a look at an extraordinary stone cottage on Holloway St. maybe of about 1850, perched on the top of a "Dwarfs' Hill" (so called from a vinegar factory that formerly stood part way up).

Next week's tour is to be of West Moira and North Front Sts. and the following week's will be of the lower end of Bridge St. Anyone interested is always welcome to come. A silver collection is taken at coffee time.

Films on City Planning Get Good Reception

Last Thursday evening the first of a three-part series of films on city planning was presented by the Community Planning Association of Canada. Lewis Mumford's book "The City in History," The six films, produced by Canada's own National Film Board, are based on Mumford's book and have been found in Moodie Cottage). Lewis Mumford Downing was the chief exponent in the early days of the Gothic style, and by his pictures and books helped greatly to popularize it. He also approved of other styles, notably the Tuscan Villa (though he hated Greek Revival). Jaycees Elect Don Dafoe As President

The Bellerville Jaycees elected a new slate of officers for their coming year beginning June 1st, at their regular meeting held at the Shrine Club last night. Don Dafoe was chosen as the new unit president, with Alex Alex as first vice-president and Alex Alex as second vice-president. Len Wood was re-elected as treasurer and Dave Leslie was elected to the position of secretary. The board of directors will consist of Jack Chapman, Peter Lisle, Gary Nicholson, Ben Johnson and Hainz Meile.

Eighteen members were presented with certificates after successfully completing a Professional and Human Relations Course. Bob Murphy who conducted the course was presented with a Jaycee plaque in appreciation of his time and interest.

Bill Perrin, chairman of the Jaycee Speakers and Readers reported that plans are progressing very well. The readers which are open to all high school teenagers attending high schools will be held on May 3rd at the O.S.D.

New School To Be Biggest In the City

The proposed new Sir MacKenzie Bowell Public School to be built in West Bellerville will eventually be one of the largest schools in the city with a total of up to 30 or 32 rooms.

Public Schools Superintendent L. A. Kells last night told members of the Avondale-Prince Charles and Queen Mary Home and School clubs that if "everything goes right" the new school or the extension to Leland Drive could be ready for classes in September.

The initial phase of construction calls for seven classrooms, Mr. Kells said.

The building will be planned as a senior school and each member will have an enrolment of about 250, with this to increase eventually to about 1,000. Detailed plans will be ready in two weeks and tenders will then be called immediately.

Pickerel Run in Moira River Closely Watched by Officers

Anyone want some slightly used pitchforks? Fifteen or twenty of them will be for sale at a yearly auction to be held at the next Department of Lands and Forests auction sale of seized goods. The pitchforks will have been seized from people who used them to spear pickerel during the pickerel run this week and next in the Lake Ontario shoreline. An average of about 40 people per year are charged in the Eastern Lake Ontario region, with poaching during the run.

Pickerel spawners on shoals in the lakes and on gravel beds in streams, when the water temperature hits about 43 to 45 degrees Fahrenheit, and people in the Quinte area consider it traditional to collect a few fish during the run. Traditional or not, it's illegal, and about fifteen Department of Lands and Forest conservation officers, assisted by municipal and provincial police forces and several fish and game clubs, are out to catch the poachers. Radio equipped cars will be operating on foot, with land vehicles and with boats, whereever the fish start to spawn. In the Belleville area, that might be within the next day or so.

WORK AT NIGHT

Most poachers work at night, with light from a torch or pole in favor of the conservation officers. A light can be spotted for miles over water, and a radio-equipped boat can cover several miles of shoreline, calling land-based officers to swoop on suspected offenders. Boat patrols are not so effective in streams, as the overspending fish constitute only a small percentage of the total anyway.

Dr. Anderson Speaker at Kiwanis Club

"Diseases of the Pancreas" was the theme of Dr. Reg Anderson's address to the Belleville Kiwanis Club at noon today on Tuesday.

The speaker explained various diagnostic and how they affected different people.

For instance he said, "if an ordinary person was suffering from appendicitis, only he (the sufferer) and his close friends would be concerned about it, but if King George has third had been suffering from it, the coronation would have been postponed."

Dr. Anderson is vice-president and medical director of the Medi-Johnson Company and resides in Oakville. He had been a Belleville resident up until about five years ago.

The speaker was introduced by Lorraine Don Hickson and thanked on behalf of the members by past-president Harold Carruthers.

Celebration chairman, George Hume, gave a report of the forthcoming 50th anniversary of Kiwanis International which will be celebrated in April of 1965. Plans are being made by the committee to charter a TCA airliner to Belleville, Michigan, U.S.A. About 50 members from the Belleville Club are planning to attend.

Mrs. Hume said that this was a part of the celebration and that the anniversary would be observed in a more permanent manner locally.

The meeting was presided over by president, Robert Freestone.

Although design work for the artery is still underway, City officials confirmed today that the rebuilding of North Front Street from Evans Street to the 401 Highway can be done this year.

"We are optimistic that the work can still be done, although possibly late in the year", stated City Engineer Wilbur Fanjoy.

Cost of rebuilding the North Front Street artery to a four-lane road is included in this year's capital works budget and this has now been approved by the Department of Municipal Affairs.

As a connecting link, the North Front Street artery would be eligible for 75 per cent provincial Highways subsidy following approval by the provincial department.

Rebuilding of part of Bridge Street, East, is also scheduled for this year and the city engineer says this work will be done.

JUST PATCH JOB ...

Bridge Street, East, from from Coleman Street and part of Bay Bridge Road is scheduled for a resurfacing job. It was referred to as a "patch job" pending the time when the city can afford the complete rebuilding of the road. In 1955 $23,933 was spent on road sanding.

The Dundas Street artery is also a connecting link on No. 14 Highway and would be subsidized under the provincial highways department approval.

Altogether approximately $300,000 will be spent on road maintenance in the city this year with a total payment works budget in the area of $550,000 being approved by council.

Biggest item on the roads maintenance program is the surface treatment of which 73,000 feet is scheduled. Most of the work is carried out during the summer months and this needs to be done but the above footage is all that could be done under this year's budget.

Double surface treatment is to be carried out on another 17,500 feet.

UPGRADE STREETS

Mr. Purcell said the year's works budget was also keeping with that for the past couple of years.

He said the surface treatment was really a stopgap to upgrade streets until such time as more revenue could be spent.

The cost of winter control for 1956 has been estimated at $43,400 with almost half of this amount earmarked for clearing of roads. In 1955 $23,933 was spent on road sanding.

Tax Rate Held Down

Better than many anticipated.

That about sums up this year's bad news, the city's tax rates.

Municipal tax rates are always bad news these days. There may be exceptions, but we have not heard of them.

This year, though, Belleville's rates could have been very bad news indeed. Reassessment had tripled the valuation of property on which the rates will be levied. Some residents were afraid the council might regard this as an opportunity to increase the levy sharply, using as an excuse the fact that the tax rates would still be far below last year's alarming 103.1 mills commercial and 92.7 mills residential.

That fear has been proven unfounded. For this we owe the council thanks, even though the residential rate, brought into a figure somewhat parallel to that of last year, is up eight tenths of a mill.

Whether this increase is justified or not is a matter of opinion. We have considerable sympathy for the view that a council, like an individual, can be penny-wise and pound-foolish in postponing necessary work in an attempt to economize.

Ald. Donald Whalen's contention that an increase in school grants should have made it possible not merely to "hold-the-line" but to actually reduce the tax rate makes good sense, were it not for the fact that this increase in grants did not result in proportionately reduced demands for tax money from school boards. We cannot share the opinion that this may not be the school boards' fault and that the province may have increased grants precisely because it knew total costs were sure to rise.

All in all, as we said at the start, rather better than many anticipated.

Rather One-Sided

Robert Thompson, the "nice guy" who is leader of the official (non-Caucetia) Social Credit contingent in the House of Commons, wants a National Government.

He says that is the only way to solve what he considers the present crisis of confederation.

Mr. Thompson says that such a government would attract men of goodwill and ability from all parties, united on the basis of doing "what's best for Canada".

In the Opposition he would be the foot-dragger, the doubters, the frightened and the opportunists.

It seems rather strange that the leader of an opposition party would be happy about the prospects of a Government faced with this kind of an Opposition.

Apparently he does not put much stock in the role of the Opposition, does not believe that it has a constructive function to fulfill.

People who favor "national" governments in time of crisis usually have this outlook. It never seems to occur to them that if this sinking of political differences really makes possible more efficient government, then we ought to follow this pattern at all times, and not just when we are in deep trouble.

The only time that "national" governments really work is when there is substantial agreement amongst the coalescing parties as to what needs to be done and how to do it, as often occurs in time of war.

It is just the absence of such unity of aim and procedure which gives rise to what Mr. Thompson calls the present crisis of Confederation. Just as long as there is a wide diversity of views, it is essential that the Opposition should contain "men of goodwill and ability," that it should not be a collection of foot-draggers, doubters, the frightened and the opportunistic.

Wired for Electricity

"Automation Helps Heart Patients," says a headline in The Ontario Intelligencer.

The medical miracle of yesterday is the commonplace of today.

When Peter Sellers, the talented British actor, suffered a heart attack at Hollywood, treatment included the "installation" of a "heart-pacer" to keep his heart ticking on time through the use of electrical impulses.

This is all very wonderful, but hardly out of tune with the Hollywood wonderland.

We wonder, though, what the average Canadian would do if on a junket to the Arctic he ran across an Eskimo trapper with "heart-pacer". There is at least one such Eskimo up at Frobisher, he having had his heart recently wired for electricity at Montreal General Hospital.

'Opt Out' Has Bad Ring

Ottawa Journal

There is a short word bothering us. It is the word "opt." The Oxford says it is to "exercise an option, make choice between alternatives or for an alternative." The Oxford also says it is "rare." But the word appeared in the news from the Quebec Conference this week with Premier Lesage and the rest of our career or so in various provincial capitals it has had quite a struggle.

Actually it is a two-way word: one may opt in or opt out, asking for an equal quantity in the winds of change blowing across Canada. Since the Quebec people only opt, out. That's why the word stops instantly in our subconscious. A three-letter word freighted with unhappy portent for our country.

As Canadians have been asked for it, the word opt is a short word for choice.

Yet opt seems such a polite word. A civilized word. For a civilized action. It doesn't seem to carry the stigma of the word secede. Or the rather broader freedom of the secessionist privilege of leaving the union.

If Premier Lesage says he will opt out of portions of the federal system, the Government of this country he spoke to he says nothing more than he says she's had quite enough too, thank you. If Premier Roberts of Newfoundland or Premier Smallwood of Ontario opting out it is done so plausibly that perhaps few of us realized it. It is only saying that if one province begins seriously to make this Dominion work, then Ontario reserves the right to do it too.

The Manchester Observer of Sam Goldwyn's "Gentlemen, include me out" had the grace of humour to admit: "There's nothing humorous about the word "opt." There is nothing to the word "opt" but the ugliness of it. It has no pleasantry to it. It has no connotations of elegance. It has no potential for catastrophe.

Our concern, however, is not caused only in the province of Quebec. Others, even we, have become so accustomed to the word opt that it can scarcely be heard. The likelihood had a province will "opt out"

Jobless Fund Is Misused

Montreal Gazette

It was a strange thing that a Senate committee said about the unemployment insurance Fund in the Throne Speech at the opening of this session. Senator Croll seems all the stranger, now that the Minister of Labor has had his say in reply. The Senate urged reconvening of the Canadian parliament. The assembly did not wish to renew its demand for withdrawal of all Belgian military and political personnel from the Congo.

1926—Rocco and Varnetti were accused of murder.

April 15, 1964 ...

The United Nations ended a two-week debate on the Congo situation though wars go today—in 1961—with the General Assembly approving 90-10 a U.S.-sponsored mission maintaining Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold's role. The vote also urged reconvening of the Congolese parliament. The assembly called on all to renew its demand for withdrawal of all Belgian military and political personnel from the Congo.

Motorist's Prayer

Montreal Gazette

Religious leaders have done their part in emphasizing that driving is not just a legal responsibility, it is a moral one.

An English clergyman, the Robert Strapps of Wakefield, has written "A Motorist's Prayer":

"From domineering driving, from the love of power and the infection of speed,

"Good Lord, deliver us.

"From weariness and indifference, from the demon of impatience and the tyranny of time,

"Good Lord, deliver us.

"From ignorance and unconsciousness, from brute contempt and the flood of invective,

"Good Lord, deliver us.

"From inattention and monotony, from the delusion of drink and the treachery of fatigue,

"Good Lord, deliver us.

"Grant us, O Lord, a divine courtesy to all. Awake in us an abiding care for the sleepiness of age and the rashness of youth. Let our vehicles become instruments of Thy purpose, bringing happiness to all who travel with us, and lawbeing no man weeping at our passing. Amen."

It is a very contemporary message from this modern Vicar of Wakefield. It is a reminder that one of the best tests of the reality of any man's religion is how he behaves when behind the wheel, for seldom does he have in his hands more power for evil or good.

OFF THE RECORD

"I sentence you to twenty years in prison . . . can I intercept you in this calendar week?"

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 15th, 1946.

Mr. W. C. Springer, retired manufacturer of this city, who many years ago was the managing director of the Springer Lock Manufacturing Company in the city, which is now incorporated in the Corbin Lock Company of Canada, Limited, recently received word from correspondence with the Ontario Intelligencer, the time, nearly sixty-three years ago, when he came to Belleville to organize a company to manufacture varnish hardware lines.

Mr. Springer said, "I had visited Belleville on several occasions and liked the town and the people I met, and felt that I should like to make my home here. So when I was asked to locate a company I returned to Belleville and I have been here since that time. I met a number of townspeople from business men in organizing the company; but I also met the knockers who were numerous at that time, and they told me that I could never make a success of the industry here. When I asked them why, they replied that nothing ever goes in this town." I told them that it would be a different story in the time, and some of them lived to see my prediction come true."

In April, 1901, the following news item appeared in the Belleville Daily Ontario. "Many citizens no doubt will be interested to learn that a new industry has been started here and, that too without any fuss in the way of asking for bonus, free site, or anything else to detract from the city. The old Chown factory has been leased by a firm of capitalists to be known as the Belleville Hardware Manufacturing Co. The company propose to manufacture builders' hardware of all kinds and already have a lot in stock. The factory looks busy on hand, and more is to follow.

40 YEARS AGO

Thirty-seven applicants were given a night's lodging at the police station last night. This is the largest number this spring.

The fine brick residence on the farm of Mr. Clarence Vermilyea, 4th concession of Thurlow township, was destroyed by fire this morning. It was formerly the residence of the late Nathaniel Vermilyea. The fire is believed to have started from a chimney blaze. All the contents in the house above the first floor were destroyed.

Among the old players expected to be on hand are the Mill brothers, Celeste, Meagher, Williams, Casey, Ross, Hagerman and Weir. Others who believe they can play ball are invited by manager Walter Gerow to put in an appearance this evening.

Poodles Lose Fashion Lead

Hamilton Spectator

Much rather than being a nation of shopkeepers, the British are a nation of dogfanciers.

It should be noted, however, that there are some dogs which they keep which are not dogs. Fashions in canines, like those in women's hats, change with the years. The stuffed parrot, perhaps, is that they don't change as often.

When Hugh came to mind when we read some statistics on the latest Crufts Dog Show, which is the show window for Britain's proudest pooches. As such, it attracts many overseas buyers — as well as the pups depart, the dollars roll in.

Last year, more than five thousand pedigreed dogs were exported from the United Kingdom for an estimated $1,500,000, with two thousand going to the United States.

An award at Crufts, which this year had a record entry of 8,277, is considered to be the setting value of a dog. And the more popular the winning breed, the greater the reason for happy barking.

Two years ago, cocker spaniels headed the show. But in 1956 have failed to make the grade and Pekingese poodles have been strutting their stuff over the past ten years, and a third of last year's exports were poodles. Now, it appears, the less sophisticated dogs may be taking over — with German shepherds or Labradors the favorites.

We recall the tremendous boom in popularity which canis enjoyed when they first scampered across the lawns of Buckingham Palace during the reign of the late King George VI and established themselves as Royal Family pets.

One thing is sure. If that the popularity of breeds runs in ten-year cycles.

Who knows, by the turn of the century, a monkeyish-looking character named as simian pinscher might be top dog.

To Your Good Health

There Is No Special Diet For Every Single Disease

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What foods should be eaten by a person with high blood pressure. — E. E.

Your question, madam, is an example of a vicious circle. Not a vicious circle, but a foolish one that we have passed through.

In the last few decades we have come to understand the meaning of a "balanced diet" fairly well.

But some people have assumed that there must be a special diet for every disease. This isn't so.

Diet — beyond eating a normally healthful one — is rarely important in cases of high blood pressure. There are exceptions.

First, the overweight patient with high blood pressure should lose some pounds. Often as little as five or 10 pounds will make a appreciable difference. But there isn't any "diet of foods" for reducing. Just eat less of everything, and avoid fats.

Second, some people with high blood pressure are getting too much salt. This can be from overuse at the table or in cooking, or eating salty foods (peanuts, potato chips, preserved meats, etc.) It can even be from taking bicarbonate of soda or fizzy salts-blisters. This is seldom, however, and if "black" or holds water in the body to an excessive degree, therefore aggravating high blood pressure.

Salt-free diet" is the better term. It should be "low-salt diet" or "low sodium diet," because nobody can get along without any sodium. There is "natural salt" in most all foods we eat. So we are bound to get at least some traces.

If salt is reduced too drastically, it causes a "salt hunger" reflex from weakness or nausea. This occurs more often in the summer than the winter, by losing salt through perspiration.

So if you are overweight, or if you are told to restrict salt, those are the ways in which diet will be important.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have read so much about "natural childbirth" that I have been possible for me? My first (and only) child was born by Caesarean section. — Mrs. R. S.

The breech delivery happens about seven times among every 100 babies. With a breech delivery plus a large baby, you would have required an anesthetic. No "natural childbirth" would not have been possible, at least not with any reasonable degree of safety.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 74 and in excellent health so far as I know. I expect to live for 20 years, but in the last few years I have lost eight pounds. I have a vigorous appetite, eat nourishing food and am still very active in business world. Could this loss of weight be due to age only, or could it be due to some internal condition? F. P. B.

It can be either. I have known it to happen in people of age and the most careful examination did not show anything wrong. I am not sure whether reasons age may cause it.

Again, however, an overactive thyroid can cause this condition.

Don't be alarmed, but for your peace of mind see your physician to check on this possibility, and have a full blood count and a general physical look-see.

Shakespeare Famous Mostly For His Poems

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Whatever the fate of John Gielgud's production of "Hamlet" on Broadway this spring, this is applaud his willingness as a rare tribute to Shakespeare.

As you may know, this production, starring Richard Burton, is performed on a nearly bare stage containing a rough platform and stairs, a few chairs and of table. The cast wears every-day dress, and all the traditional props are absent — the heavy armorings and trappings of an "historical period."

Sir John Gielgud, who himself was one of the most notable Hamlets of our century, explains that he wanted "the beauty of the language and imagery to shine through unencumbered by any elaborate reconstruction, often, as he explained, the dramatic "meat" of the play tends to blur and obscure the magnificent poetry.

Having seen last year the Tyrone Guthrie production of "Hamlet," which opened the new Minneapolis Repertory Theatre, I can heartily agree with Shakespeare's the post is generally sacrificed to Shakespeare the stage technician. Guthrie's "Hamlet," like a dozen others I have seen before it, was a vulgar impertinence to English literature.

Many of the finest lines were utterly lost in the bustling and clanking of the action. The actors were so busy giving us the body of the play that they left it entirely winded them — for the soul of it resides in the language, in the imagery, in the interchange of mood and motive which underlies the visual surface of the action.

Nobody should attend a Shakespeare who has not read the play carefully at least a couple of times recently. His works are so densely packed, so charged with content, that we miss the essential thrust of their import when they are subordinated to a scene of the stage.

Shakespeare was not essentially a playwright, a playmaker, or a psychologist. He was primarily a poet — and his poetic vision is deeper and different in many of these others; it has the power to transcend any part of us long buried in the unconscious, and to evoke a response more primitive (and therefore more cleansing) than any ordered and rational thought can do.

The "beauty and imagery" that Gielgud is seeking to restore have been almost obliterated by the superficial and "theatrical" approaches to Shakespeare, which are treason to his spirit and letter. He did not write for actors; not even for audiences; but for the person hoping to reach the inmost core of his solitude, that part most hidden from everyone else, and from ourselves as well.

County Roads Winter Well Engineer Tells Councillors

PICTON (Staff)—Prince Edward County Engineer Ron Thomson took the entire County Council on a tour of the hundreds of miles of roads in the county on Monday and Tuesday.

Council members were agreeably surprised at the generally fine condition of the roads. Some roads need some work, but for the most part they are not bad", said Warden Kenneth Hicks.

Mr. Thompson also said that inasmuch as the frost is coming out so slowly, that in his opinion, the half load season for trucks will last at least until the first week of May. "It might get better, but that's the way it looks right now, "he told the Ontario Intelligencer out on the West Lake Road on Tuesday.

Suspect Will Be Charged With Armory Thefts in Que.

MONTREAL (CP) — A 19-year-old was arraigned Tuesday on the first charge laid in connection with armory robberies in Quebec province, earlier this year.

Police continued without fanfare their hunt for other suspects.

Claude Perron appeared in court in Trois-Rivieres and was remanded in today so he could get a lawyer. He is charged with theft of arms from the armory of the 52nd Field Artillery Regiment at Shawinigan Que., Feb. 20.

Perron, arrested during the weekend in Montreal, is the fourth suspected member of L'Armee de Liberation du Quebec to be picked up but the only one to be charged in connection with armory-raiding, for which the ALQ claims responsibility.

Two other suspected members of the separatist organization have been charged with armed robbery in the $5,000 holdup of a bank at Mont Rolland, Que., last Thursday. They and a juvenile were arrested at a roadblock.

Meanwhile, a provincial police spokesman here said efforts are continuing and possible new charges being considered—to arrest the remaining ALQ members.

THEY ARE SOUGHT

The spokesman said there are at least two suspected ALQ members being sought. City police had a warrant for one of them.

He would not elaborate on efforts to quash the terrorist organization.

Police announced Tuesday they have recovered a truck believed to have been used by young terrorists who robbed the armory of 1st Fusiliers Montreal in Montreal Jan. 28.

The truck was found in a "large commercial garage" in St. Therese, 15 miles north of here, and tests were conducted on it Monday and Tuesday to determine whether it was the one used by the armory-looters to escape with guns, ammunition and other material.

None of the loot from the Fusiliers' armory robbery has been recovered. Police last week recovered most of the loot from the Shawinigan robbery.

Guns and ammunition were included in the loot from both places.

Rolls Car Over On Point Anne Lane

A 34-year-old Point Anne man escaped injury last night when his car rolled over on Highway 2 at Point Anne lane.

Expect Quebec Will Control Power Export

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

QUEBEC CITY — The Quebec Legislative Assembly, taking up second reading today of a bill introduced by Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson — amid indications it will be accepted by the Liberal government.

The bill would require the government to get permission from the province before export power from Quebec.

Premier Lesage indicated the government will go along with the bill when he said Tuesday night that if debate on second reading is finished today, he would suggest detailed study and third reading immediately afterwards.

The measure is aimed particularly at the giant Hamilton Falls project on which Quebec and Newfoundland are negotiating. Hydro-Quebec has a 20 percent interest in the falls.

ALPHA GROUP

The April meeting of the Alpha Group of St. Columba Presbyterian Church was held at the home of Mrs. M. Soles-bury. The president, Mrs. W. Bowles remarked how pleased she was to see so many members out.

The secretary, Mrs. R. Blatchford read a letter concerning the 100th anniversary of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. The W.M.S. are holding a convention in Montreal for three days. It is hoped that some of the members will be able to attend this convention. The business meeting followed and among the items discussed was a rummage sale to be held later in April.

The mission study on India continued this month with a short talk on the educational work of the missionaries and proceeded to the medical work which was in the form of a radio broadcast. This showed a typical day in the life of the missionary nurse. The commentator was Mrs. V. Brown, assisting her were Mrs. W. Wilis, Mrs. M. Pollard, Mrs. G. Fisher, Mrs. E. Ashley, Mrs. A. Dunsmore. The mission study was convened by Mrs. G. Devolin and Mrs. K. D. Taylor.

ISLE OF WIGHT, England (CP)—The latest Westland Hovercraft, which has been through extensive developments trials since early 1962, including a demonstration in Canada, recently completed an open-sea journey of 200 miles. It was the longest non-stop trip ever made by a hovercraft.

SALES WERE UP

HALIFAX (CP)—The Nova Scotia Power Commission says over-all sales in 1963 increased by nine per cent while retail sales showed a 10.5 per cent gain. The commission sales were above the national average increase of seven per cent and it attributes this to "an aggressive rates program."

SPEAKING of MANNERS

—PATRICIA LEWIS—

CULTIVATE GRACIOUS LEAVE - TAKING

You can lead a guest to the door, but often you can't make him go.

When it comes time to leave, the doorway frequently becomes a stumbling block. Some guests have the tendency to linger and talk while the host's hand gets clammy on the doorknob. The hostess may seem about to drop from fatigue and the host be getting grey around the gills, but — matter. Some people have the mistaken notion they're supposed to milk their good-byes and that it seems ungracious to — s off without thanking their hosts to the hilt, and congratulating them on everything connected with the party.

Before leaving, guests, of course, should thank their hosts for a lovely time and give a few compliments on food and arrangements. However, leave-taking should be brief. To be draftly standing by the open door and, besides, the hosts might have to help other guests find their coats. The line of leave-taker gets backed up, and possibly there are a few guests left in the living room who are waiting for the crowd to thin out before saying adieu and taking their leave in tern. LEAVE GRACEFULLY

Actually, there's no great mystery about how to leave gracefully and with good spirits. When it's time to go, thoughtful guests say good-by only to those with whom they happen to be speaking at the moment. At a large party, it's not necessary to go saying around the room, broadcasting the fact that you're about to depart. Others may feel they have to follow suit, even though the host and hostess are not keen about sending the party at, that particular moment. A general exodus occurs almost spontaneously, and pretty much at the deadline the hosts have set.

If there's a guest of honor, guests should try to say good-night to her, as well. Usually, the hostess will see guests to the door. If she's busy, the host will do the honors. Often both make a point of being on tap.

When you're ready to leave, bid your hosts a fond goodnight, thank them for asking you and be sure to mention that you had a nice time. Now is not the time to start arranging a return invitation, or to discuss club news or the health of the children. If you plan to invite them to your house in the near future, issue the invitation at a later date and certainly not in the presence of other guests who might feel slighted if not invited.

As soon as you've said your piece, move directly through the door so you won't cause a bottleneck. If you want, to have a post - mortems on the party, call the hostess next day and have a gab fest. She'll appreciate the courtesy, rather than have to stand for ages at the door while trying to say good night to others and still worry about guests she's neglecting in the living room.

PRATT — LENNOX

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton, on Saturday, April 14, at 3 p.m., when Linda Arlene Lennox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond A. Lennox, Picton, was united in marriage to Edward Wayne Pratt, son of Mrs. Benjamin Pratt, Belleville, and the late Mr. Pratt. Canon R. deBlois Wright performed the double-ring ceremony before a background of standards of white mums and pink gladioli, and pink carnations. The minister was assisted by altar servers Jim Arnold and Don Drew.

Mr. George Jeakins played the wedding music and Captain Edwin Lee of Edmonton, Alta., sang two selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a satin pearl gown featuring a pencil slim sheath skirt and an attached flowing bouffant chapel length train. The sweetheart neckline was enhanced with appliqued guipure lace to which tiny seed pearls accented the pattern. The front of the skirt had the same effect. Her shoulder length scalloped veil flowed from a headpiece in a multitude of tiny rosettes caught together with seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white-carnations, stephanotis and ivy.

Miss Joan Avison of Toronto, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Nancy Black of Toronto, and Miss Mary Beth Follwell, Belleville, cousin of the bride, all wearing identical floor length gowns of romance blue nylon organza over taffeta. The scooped neckline and short sleeves flowed down a tight fitting bodice which was accented at the waist with a tiny bow of self fabric, from an over-skirt with appliqued stem and flower design down the front completed the apron effect of the skirt. They wore matching headpieces of blue nylon apple blossoms caught together with a short veil. The attendants carried cascade bouquets of pastel blue and white carnations and baby poms.

The flower girl, Miss Patty Hamilton of Conway, niece of the bridegroom, wore a floor length gown of white organza over taffeta. The bodice had puffed sleeves and scooped neckline, the three tiered skirt was accented by a romance blue sash tied at the back in a bow, the ends flowing in to an illusion train. She wore a circlet of white and-blue flowers, and she carried a white and gold basket of pale blue and white carnations.

Mr. Darle Reid of Toronto, was groomsman, while Mr. Leroy Lennox, brother of the bride, Mr. Jack Pratt, Kingston, brother of the bridegroom, Mr. Leigh Meldrum and Mr. John Berrigan, Belleville, were ushers.

The reception was held at the Royal Hotel where the bride's table was attractively centred with a three-tiered wedding cake flanked by white and pink lighted tapers in a silver candelabra. Pale pink carnations encircled the cake with tiny pink rosebuds on top.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a dusky rose two-piece ensemble of silk shantung, matching pink accessories and a corsage of pale pink Sweetheart rosebuds and white baby poms. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a beige lace ensemble with beige accessories, and a corsage of pale pink Sweetheart roses.

For a wedding trip to the Southern States along the Atlantic seaboard, the bride chose a three-piece cherry red wool suit with Chanel style jacket and slim skirt. She wore a matching pillbox hat and black accessories and a corsage of white gardenias.

On their return, the couple will reside in Belleville.

Out of town guests were from Edmonton, Montreal, Toronto, Cookville, Islington, Kingston, Baltimore, Maryland, Willowdale, Port Sydney, Lorne Park and Belleville.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

HAND-ME-DOWNS

When I was young I took a keen interest in the clothes my older sister wore because I knew that in a year or so they would come to me. As third in line for the clothes my interest was not immediate, but I knew that sooner or later I was their final destination.

It is pretty difficult to establish a personality of your own when you are wearing someone else's clothing, but it makes you strive harder to get your own identity. There were four girls in the family and we soon learned to answer to any of the four names, but I can see now it must have been confusing to outsiders who tried to identify us by our clothes.

I am not sure whether my oldest sister was luckier than I to get the new winter coats, etc., because as I remember it, clothes were always bought a couple of sizes too big so she could "grow into them."

I remember a pair of shoes in particular that I coveted. They were patent leather and had cloth uppers, and I thought they were the most beautiful and stylish shoes I had ever seen. No child ever had a foot measured in those days to get the correct size. If shoes were sturdy and you could get your feet into them and walk, and especially if they were not too expensive, that was all that was asked.

I finally talked my sister into letting me have the shoes, but there was one drawback. The heels were too high for a ten year old. So I took them to the shoemaker in our town and asked him to cut the heels down. He said he couldn't because if he did the toes would turn up, and he showed me how a shoe was built on a last, and what would happen if he cut down the heel. But I said I didn't care, to go ahead and cut them off. He said it would cost 25c. This was more than my week's allowance, but by this time nothing could stop me. Result: I had to hobble those shoes that looked like pair of skis teetering unsteadily and dangerously on an uneven keel (to mix metaphors), and trying on all public occasions to make my feet as inconspicuous as possible until they wore out.

FENCED IN

A man on television one afternoon was describing the habits of birds. He said, "Watch a robin when it arrives in the spring. If you follow it from tree to house to garage to tree, you will notice that he is making a definite pattern. He is marking out his own territory, and his song is to warn other males not to trespass. He will not quarrel with a female, but he will not allow another male in his domain. The speaker said that all birds do this and they respect each other's property claims.

Dogs do this too, and that is why a very small dog will war so defiant if a big dog comes into his yard, and the big dog will not retaliate because he knows he is trespassing. But let the small dog visit the yard of the big one and the fur will fly, because now the small dog is in the wrong.

According to Farley Mowat in his book, "Never Cry Wolf" wolves follow this same pattern but extend it to larger areas, and they too respect what belongs to one family.

So not only does the human family mark boundaries on its property but so do birds and animals. I wonder about fish? Do they too have lines they will not cross? Their lines would have to be pretty fluid.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The Social Department of The Ontario Intelligencer requests that accounts of weddings should be sent in as soon as possible after the ceremony. Wedding forms are available at this office and should be completed and returned within one week.

Mr. Porter a former vice-president of the National Bank of Detroit, retired last year under the bank's retirement plan. SEPARATE CABINS

EAST HORSLEY, England (CP) — A cargo of tomatoes threatened to come between Sawdy newlyweds Robin and Gillian Pactat. They booked a honeymoon cruise aboard a freighter, then found they had been given cabins at opposite ends of the ship. An embarrassed clerk said there were no double cabins on board, but he would "switch things around and find two adjoining cabins.

WEDDING

COATES — TESKEY

At the Morgan Memorial Chapel, Queen's University, Saturday, April 14, Elizabeth Camilla Ann Teskey, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. George Teskey of Gananoque, became the bride of Aaron Cecil Edward Coates, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Coates, Gananoque.

The chancel was adorned with large white baskets of buds of willow, maple, dogwood, ash, of pussy willows and daffodils. The bride's dress and circular veil were of white in traditional style. She carried a nosegay of blue and white asters.

Mavgye Teskey, was sister of the bride was flower girl. She was dressed in bouffant blue chiffon and carried a basket of white asters, blue iris and pink rose buds.

Mrs. John Turcotte, sister of the groom and Mr. John Turcotte were the attendants. Mrs. Turcotte wore a gown of old gold sheer with brown wrist accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Wallace Haverlock Robb, celebrated Canadian poet and naturalist, gave a reading from his recent book "Tecumseh."

Mr. Teskey, uncle of the bride, was usher.

Following the ceremony fifty guests were received at the Teskey home in Gananoque. Mr. Robb was toastmaster. The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. A. E. Gow, of the athletic department of Queen's. Mr. Hugh Fennell of Lake-on-the-Mountain, Picton, proposed a toast to the parents of the bride.

Successful Living

Nagger Shows Symptoms Of Self-Dissatisfaction

DEAR DORIS — What on earth does one do about a nagger? My husband finds fault with everything I do. I am not perfect of course, but when I am made cry by cruel words I just don't know what to do.

Please write in your column why people tear into other people. I rarely see anyone else's faults and, if I do, so what? Everyone is entitled to their own person ality.

I am fed up to my teeth with derogatory remarks made at me, and if it continues I might do something I will be sorry about. — A NON-NAGGER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR NON-NAGGER — Score for you! Now that you are fed up, perhaps you'll do something — something useful — about it. Say to him what you've said to me; and say it is no uncertain terms.

People who make a habit of "tearing into other people" usually feel pretty inadequate themselves, underneath. If, indeed, they are displeased with something, nagging is a poor way of getting it put to rights. We react better to honey than vinegar; and to praise than blame.

Having talked back, I'd then suggest you make a gesture in the direction of attempting to right the supposed wrong. And ask your Self-Styled Critic for credit.

DEAR DORIS — I am 13 years of age. I went steady with a boy for about three weeks. I broke up with him because I didn't like him as much as I did before. My girl friend told me that he thinks I hate him, but I really don't. I think he hates me.

What should I do? — CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED — There's no hate between you; neither was there love. It'll be on-again, off-again, for some years yet, I hope. He's not the last word — but is that any reason for stony silence from now on?

* * *

(Let Doris, a Canadian social worker, help you with your dilemma. Write to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope for a private reply.)

CAMPBELLFORD

Council Takes No Action on Sewage Project

CAMPBELLFORD — The Municipal Council held a special meeting on Monday evening for the transaction of general business.

Council was addressed by Mr. Sharp representing the Ontario Water Resources in connection with sewage disposal. Mr. Sharp stated if the project were to be financed by the Ontario Water Resources they would become complete control until all payments were completed, if on the other hand council assumed the financial responsibility the Ontario Water Resources would still demand the same established building conditions determined by O.W.R.

Mr. Sharp also gave advice concerning the obtaining of a preliminary report by a qualified engineering firm the Ontario Water Resources would take charge of, if council so desired, or council could be responsible for this report and assume the necessary expenses. The lagoon system was considered the most economical, there are now 23 such in Ontario. A lagoon is only feasible where there is suitable isolation. Treatment of sewage takes place in a lagoon by natural elements amongst with the resultant growth of algae in winter time, a consideration a treatment process is used similar to a septic tank. No action was taken by council.

ANSWER QUESTIONS

The High School board were again present to answer questions concerning budget presented to council a week ago. The board could see no department where the budget could be lowered but agreed to talk over the situation and report to council later.

Mr. C. Johnston, appearing for the second time in connection with the public school budget, stated the board had pared the budget as far as possible except for one item of $6,000. Mr. Johnston did not wish to publicize this item but did make it cognizant to council.

Council will consider this particular item again. Mr. Johnston stated the definite possibility in the future of one new building and the addition of four rooms to Kent Street school in the next two years.

Mr. Buchanan, chairman of the High School Board, spoke on the cafeteria operation. Over 200 meals are served a day at a cost of 40 cents per meal. At this price the cafeteria is making a little money. Some discussion arose after it was disclosed that the equipment for the cafeteria was purchased by an increase in the government grant over what had been expected last December. Councillor Sharp said the additional grant should have been used to lower the tax rate rather than for capital expenditure. The equipment cost about $12,000. Salaries for cafeteria operation are $5,340. A walk-in refrigerator cost $1,250.

WILL EQUIP ROOM

The girls occupational room will be equipped this coming year at a cost of $4,700. Mr. Buchanan stated there are girls in public school, almost sixteen years of age, who are not adaptable to the academic curriculum but because of age must attend school who get pushed from the public school to the occupational course in high school; these occupational courses appear to be absorbing more pupils than as Mr. Buchanan stated requiring more equipment.

Reeve George Free stated the high school budget for plant operation and maintenance together was $21,000 more than the entire Road and Bridge budget for the town.

Councillor Torrance asked if the High School Board would allow the baseball league to use the ball diamond as previously for this season but the Board was firm in its reply that their plans for the year would not permit the ball club the use of the ground any longer.

Delegations having been heard, care of, council considered the budgets of the various committees in council. The finance committee budget is increased from $24,445 to $25,425 with recommendations that the salary of Mrs. H. Potts be increased by $5.00 per week, and the salary of auditor Mr. C. W. Cochrane be increased by $100 per year.

The Road and Bridge committee budget was increased from $31,000 to $33,000 with recommendations that the salary of foreman W. Blake be increased by $12.00 per week also that James Garvey, assistant foreman be increased by 25 cents per hour and laborers be increased by 15 cents an hour.

MANY STATIONARY

The Industrial committee remained the same at $1,245. Welfare committee remained static at $4,800. Legal, which is a hard budget to predict, was set at $750.

It was reported there were at present 18 men on the fire department and budget was left as 1963. their nations and to the ideas that they espouse than ever before."

WILL GIVE LEADERS

President Kennedy suggests that the leaders of the developing nations throughout the world in the next few decades will come from the young intellectuals, the students, the young labor leaders and politicians of today. These are the ones with whom we should be primarily concerned.

A conscious effort must be made to seek out the young, for it was the natural course for nations and diplomats and those who publish newspapers to speak to the established order.

While the future was perilous, the West had a lot on its side, because "we of the western tradition are all heirs of revolution."

From the Magna Carta through the American revolution and Canada Confederation, "our people have achieved the changes that were the felt necessities of their time."

Canada and the United States were good examples of the "collision of ideas and diversity "and they are strong enough to admit errors."

ITS CONTAGIOUS

"This type of free expression is contagious. It has a sparkling attraction for the young, inquiring minds, an attraction that no Communist system can match."

Mr. Kennedy said he emphasized the "unique advantages because "too often in the past we have relied on a negative response to communism and left the world with the illusion that only Karl Marx had a philosophy.

"We have not been as tough, aggressive or articulate as we might have been in the war of ideas.

"Beyond that, we must acknowledge the temptations of self-satisfaction, indulgence and complacency here at home. Unless we resist these temptations in our own countries, we cannot speak with the ringing voice that will be heard by the young struggling for progress throughout the world."

so-called "police state" legislation came up as the session resumed.

Donald C. MacDonald, leader of the New Democratic Party, introduced a resolution asking that a select committee of the house be set up to draw up a provincial bill of rights and to recommend on how an office of ombudsman could be established.

An ombudsman is an official, who hears appeals against decisions of government boards and commissions.

Mr. MacDonald said there was a need to safeguard the rights of the people from infringement by powerful civil service cabinet regulations. The select committee would "recommend adequate procedures for review by the legislature of orders-in-council and other regulations adopted by the executive."

The "police state" legislation, giving unusual powers to the Ontario Police Commission, was withdrawn by the government after a public outcry and Frederick Cass resigned as attorney-general.

Women More Responsible For Success of Marriage

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My husband and I are both avid Landers fans. We frequently discuss your answers and agree that you make sense.

I feel, however, (and so do many of my friends), that you are biased in favor of husbands. So often you take the position that the wife is at fault when the marriage fails.

Recently you told your readers that the smart wife who really wants her marriage to work makes her husband feel like "her hero." Then you went on to suggest that she "build him up when he's down, make him feel important," and so on. I'd like to have a dime for every American male who wagged that column under his wife's nose.

Now, Ann Landers, will you give us wives a break and write a column on how a man can make his wife feel like his queen? Thank you. — THE DISTAFF SIDE.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR DISTAFF — While I am busy handing out hints on how to make a husband feel like a hero I would like to add him: Show me a successful marriage and I will show you a wife who is a heroine.

The notion that a marriage is 50-50 is a lot of eyewash. It's more like 70-30 with the burden on the little woman. The successful wife must be meek as a lamb and gutty as a bear — and smart enough to know what the occasion demands She must be nurse, sweetheart, cook, housekeeper, financial wizard, willing wall, companion, friend and confidant.

The hand that rocks the cradle also holds the fate of the marriage — and any husband who doesn't know it has rocks in his head.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm almost ashamed to write this letter because it seems like such a foolish thing to be discussing with a stranger, but honestly it has me worried sick.

I am 17 and going with a very nice fellow. One day I want to be married and have children, but I am scared to death of child birth. I just don't think I could go through the pain and suffering. When I hear of a young mother who dies giving birth to a child I go into a cold sweat, whether I knew her or not.

I've tried to trace this fear back to my childhood and all I can remember is a movie I once saw where a woman in labor was suffering something awful. I had nightmares for years after that but it was a long time ago.

Am I some kind of a nut? I have a feeling something is wrong with me. Please answer this letter. — AFRAID.

DEAR AFRAID — You're not a nut. You are frightened because you are ignorant. Most women will tell you that childbirth is one of the most thrilling and fulfilling of human experiences.

Ask your family doctor for literature. Tell him how you feel and enlist his help in overcoming this fear by educating yourself.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a regular reader and I am very pleased with your sensible approach to tall girl — short boy, etc.

I am planning to be married in June. My fiance is the salt of the earth. I consider myself lucky to get him, even though he is five inches shorter than I am. He has a terrific sense of humor and just loves it when I call him "Big Daddy."

I plan to wear ballet slippers for the wedding ceremony and I want him to wear elevator shoes. He says he'll do it to please me but he sees no point in it. What do you say? — DIANE.

DEAR DIANE — I know of no elevator shoes that will add five inches to any man's height. But if you want to go in for visual aids for the occasion — and if Big Daddy is agreeable — go ahead.

Expert Daffodil Counter Wanted In Victoria

VICTORIA (CP)—W. H. Warren the city's parks administrator, would appreciate the services of an expert daffodil counter.

Victoria's status as Canada's daffodil capital may be at stake.

A challenge has come in the form of a press release from the Greater Niagara Chamber of Commerce.

The 200,000 blooms are designed to "herald the approach of spring" during a daffodil festival April 15 to 30.

Mr. Warren said his men haven't got around by counting the blooms but he thinks there are more than 300,000 daffodils in Victoria's Beacon Hill Park alone.

At any rate, he said, "our daffodils have been out for four weeks now and are good for a couple more weeks."

telling him his charge had increased in value of $10 each.

He issued instruction to the brokers, said, as a result 2,500 of his shares were sold, leaving a balance of 7,500 fully paid for.

Mr. McGraw's testimony produced a different story.

The broker said he was unaware that the judge had given Cemenco any instructions as to the handling of his shares.

He said specific orders concerning the sale of the 2,500 units at $10 apiece had come from Farris, who had also directed that the 7,500 shares be sent to the judge.

However, Mr. McGraw said Fermi would be unaware of the eventual disposition of many of the shares in the Convesto account, including that particular lot of 2,500.

Bringing Up Baby

WRITE COLLECT BY DRS. IRA GORDON, MOTHER OF 3

When baby is young he is not very disciplined and can impose on the whole family with his sleeping and eating patterns. But when baby reaches the second stage you can begin to regulate his behavior to keep him from getting out of hand. But remember to make sure that your tyke is capable of understanding what you want and why you want it. Remember too, that good behavior is best taught by example. A toddler learns best by imitation than by rules he doesn't understand.

something extra special in the way of flavour-appeal. First, they have 6 times as much savory, succulent meat as our regular vegetable-meat combinations. Second, selected vegetables and subtle seasoning are deftly added for unusual flavour interest. Good sources of protein and Vitamin-A. These "casserole" dishes provide hearty nourishment in eight wonderful ways.

Table talk. Toddler table manners should not be stressed until your child is reasonably skilled at handling his spoon. It's hard enough to make a spoon behave without the burden of learning manners at the same time.

Hygiene hint. If you make a special point of washing your toddler's hands before every meal, he'll come to accept this routine naturally. A smell towel that he can call his very own adds a sense of pride to the ritual.

Dept. of utter bliss. Gerber Strained and Junior Fruits are an open invitation to smiles and lip-smacking. Easy to understand why, too. Gerber Fruits are famous for colours that literally sing and flavours as close to Mother Nature's sun-kissed best as you can get them. That's because they're flash-cooked in seconds to preserve true colours and flavours. Flash-cooking also helps protect the precious vitamins that contribute so much to baby's well-being. touched.

"It (the gall bladder and surrounding tissue) was considerably more inflamed than I expected," he testified. "It was extender just touching it caused some bleeding."

REPORTED BILE

Mr. Houlihan noted that post operative nurses' reports indicated there had been bile seeping—from the drainage incision and staining the dressing over the wound. The nurses' reports showed the amount of bile increased.

Dr. Graham said: "I didn't agree there were copious quantities. That would mean quarts to me. The staining could have been done by a few ounces."

Despite testimony by Dr. Barton, Dr. Graham said he felt the leakage was caused by bile seeping off the liver or from the bladder cavity. Had it come from an open bile duct, there would have been another sign of jaundice, he said.

In view of the situation, said Mr. Houlihan, why was an x-ray not taken to determine what was causing the bile leak?

"There was no need. She was doing well until Thursday," replied Dr. Graham.

Dr. Graham added that had he drained the bile from the abdominal cavity, Mrs. Noer would have had a better chance of living, "but it is difficult to speculate."

MADE SEARCH

Regarding the surgical clamp found in Mrs. Noer's body, Dr. Graham said he had a sponge count done and searched the abdominal cavity himself before closing the incision.

"You made a very careful search?" asked Mr. Houlihan.

"Obviously not," replied Dr. Graham.

He added that instrument counts were seldom done by doctors because, until recently, there had been no reports of instruments left inside patients.

A February inquest in Toronto ruled that Patricia Morgan, 34, died in Toronto East General Hospital because a surgical clamp had been left inside her during an operation 15 days before her death Nov. 4. The coroner's jury held Miss Morgan's surgeon, Dr. Kenneth A. Brown, responsible for the death.

Mr. Houlihan was also Crown counsel for the Morgan inquest.

ance of provincial government responsibilities, enabling provinces to meet their needs by a readjustment of financial resources—a change in the tax structure—even if this required change in the constitution.

Mr. Pearson said that is the goal of the federal-provincial study proposed by his government. His policy was "the very opposite of centralism."

"We are sure the provinces will use the increased authority and resources they need . . . not to destroy but to bolster Confederation."

The prime minister, while admitting the need of provinces for greater financial powers, said the central government must be strong enough to meet its responsibilities.

It had to ensure a fair and comparable measure of services among provinces.

"Canada cannot survive, let alone grow, if it becomes a country of developed and underdeveloped regions—Cadillac regions and cart regions.

"If we allow this to happen, then the strain on national unity would indeed become intolerable."

NEEDS POWERS

The central government also needed to have the fiscal powers to be able to influence and direct the economy, and to take new social and economic initiatives where necessary.

Strange dilemma of

FANNY HILL

An Ontario committee headed by a young country lawyer decided in fact, if not in name, what Canadians can—or must not—buy and may not read. A point of view expressed by the committee led to the banning of the 18th century sex-laden novel Fanny Hill. Responsible people are now pressing out their books which exploit perversion and sexual sadism too far side while "Fanny," which treats sex in a relatively lighthearted manner, is forbidden in any event, banning Fanny Hill made it the best-selling book in Canada's publishing history. This week's Star Weekly tells of the dilemma of Canadian censorship.

Industrial Circuit

BELLEVILLE AUTO ELECTRIC

The old J. J. Cash factory on Dirley Street has been sold again, this time to Belleville Auto Electric. Renovations are going on now, and the firm will start to move in during May. Meanwhile, the company's Dundas St. building has been sold.

Reason for the move, according to Belleville Auto Electric sales manager Gordon Jewell, is lack of room in the store and service departments on Dundas Street. A lot of the firm's work, Jewell says, is with commercial fleets, and the new quarters will permit service of a whole tractor-trailer rig indoors. The Dundas St. property had the further disadvantage of lacking parking space, and the fact that the service exit leads out directly onto a busy street.

Renovations, being done under direction of the firm's own employee, James Ford, include a partition dividing in half the 35-by-100 foot main area of the factory, to provide 35-by-50-foot service and stock departments, and the addition of pedestrian doors around the building. Offices will be partitioned off in the stockroom area, and another section of the plant, in the old former-schoolhouse building, is set aside for lawn-mower and small-engine service.

Upstairs in the old schoolhouse, one schoolroom is still set up and will be used as a classroom for the mechanical and auto electric courses operated by the firm. There are usually three such courses par year, open to anyone in the mechanical service trades, each running two nights a week for nine weeks. The classroom has space for about fifty students. Trent Leasing Ltd., former owner of the building, is now renting part of the downstairs area of the old school building, for use as a mechanical service centre for its own vehicles.

Belleville Auto Electric plans to go all out for the heavy-truck electrical and carburetor trade. The new quarters will be the biggest in the field between Toronto and Montreal, according to Jewell. It will be the only plant able to take a whole tractor - trailer rig — an important feature when trailer lights fail on the highway in winter. Night service, from 6 p.m. to 1:30 a.m., is planned for some later date.

Added features of the new location will include about an acre of parking space — important for the heavy truck trade — and an entrance through a lane only north of Front Street. A 24-foot by 10 - foot electric sign is planned for the entrance of the laneway.

CANADA CEMENT

The General Exercise sailed Friday afternoon for Toronto and returned Sunday. Recently appointed captain John Cuvas was in command. The ship experienced no trouble with ice, but travelled light because of the low water and the rock ledges at Telegraph Narrows, near Deseronto. The rock ledge, about a quarter-mile long, limits the draft of boats using the bay, and blasting it out would cost around a million dollars, according to estimates. Nigger Narrows down Trenton way, bars deep-draft ships from using the Murray Canal entrance to the Bay, and speed limits in the Murray Canal make it faster for the big ships to go out the Bay's mouth anyway. Cement Exerlier makes it to Toronto in about 18 hours. The ship sailed on its second trip Monday morning.

CANADA CREOSOTING

Domtar Chemicals' Canada Creosoting plant in Trenton is back to normal production, according to supervisor Eric Manvile, and the 25 men laid off earlier this year have been taken back. Callback of the men laid off began March 30 and all 25 were working by April 1. Production now is centred on railway ties, with small log of power and telephone poles, timbers, and highway guardrails going through. One small lot awaiting treatment consists of timbers for lock gates on the Trent Canal.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The Industrial Promotion Committee of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce is negotiating, according to a Chamber press release, for use of the Manufacturers' Building at the Belleville Fair, during fair time. Boys' hopes to have local industries display their products in the building. Committee members G. O'Connor, G. Trill, A. Wickerson and F. E. Burrows are now inquiring of local industries how many will co-operate with the venture.

5-Month

two out of existence," said police chief W. R. Macfadden. "We assume these have been probably destroyed."

Police are also satisfied that the theft was the work of big-time criminals operating out of Toronto and Montreal.

The loot disappeared from the safe of Mr. Cars' office sometime between December 10 when they were last seen and December 30 when they were first reported missing.

WORK OF GANG

"We know now this is the work of a well-organized gang who specialize in this kind of operation," said the chief. "Their names are known to the police in Toronto and Montreal."

They may have been reconsidering the situation for more than a year before making their move, police believe.

"The public will just have to be aware that this kind of thing goes on all the time," said Chief McLauchlan.

This would mean the Cars theft was planned with painstaking thoroughness. Such an operation calls for a gang to first "case" a community, discovering all possible situations that can be turned to profit, and making a contact, possibly with the local underworld.

All police forces, banks and other financial institutions across Quebec and Ontario were alerted when the bonds were discovered missing. The OPP's Criminal Investigation Branch sent Inspector Harry Sayen to assist local police in the investigation — a move that eventually took them as far afield as Miami as leads were checked out.

Hundreds of hours of interrogation and interviews have been marked up by local officers as they pressed for the one lead that would give them a break.

So far, Gagnon is the only person charged with a direct connection in the crime.

They Stand on Guard 3,000 Feet Under the Earth!

By DAL WARRINGTON

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Part of the RCAF does its flying vicariously beneath a rocky mound near here called Laservale Hill. If enemy bombers ever attack North America, these airmen are likely to play a more vital role in defending the continent than fighter pilots in the air.

They work in a mammoth cavern beneath out of a 1,100-foot mountain. The cavern is the command post for northern NORAD (North American Air Defence Command) region. Canadian and United States airmen who jointly man it are responsible for the defence of all eastern and northern Canada and most of the state of Maine.

Several times a day an RCAF bus carrying personnel from North Bay air station drives up to a hole in the hill and descends a 2,000-foot sloping tunnel. It looks like the entrance to a mine, the cleanest mine in the country.

Deep in the hill the bus stops at the entrance to a three-storey building erected in a cavern mined out of the rock. The building has an inside-out look. Cables, ducts and piping are outside the walls.

Inside it looks like an office structure except for the contents. There behind a $50,000,000 Semi-Automatic Ground Environment (SAGE) installation, an amazing electronic system that carries the hopes of planners for a successful defence of the continent.

DEPTH IS SECRET

There are 17 similar SAGE direction centres in the U.S. but none is underground. The RCAF says the North Bay installation is "attack - proof." The depth below ground is secret information. "Several hundred feet" is the guarded reply.

Heart of the whole northern Canada defence system is the block-long model WSQ-7 computer. It weighs 275 tons. Actually there are two computers in case one goes out of order.

A civilian attendant who helps keep it going says each has 56,000 vacuum tubes, 170,000 diodes, 600,000 resistors and more than 1,000 miles of electrical circuits.

This giant electronic data processor collects information from various sources, including radar sites, about aircraft and missiles objects in the air. It displays this information on consoles that look something like a TV picture tube.

By manipulating switches on its control panel an "intercept director" can direct manned interceptors, such as RCAF Voodoo fighters, and unmanned interceptors — Bomarc nuclear missiles, for example — against potential enemy aircraft.

Air Commodore Mike Pollard, who, as commander of the Ottawa NORAD sector, would direct such a manoeuvre, says the SAGE system is in constant use in live and simulated situations to make sure it is in proper working order and that the airmen know how to use it.

TRACKS 'INVADERS'

Press visitors watched as intercept director, sitting in front of his blue-lighted console, "dispatched" a Voodoo from Val d'Or, Que., to deal with an "enemy bomber" invading from the north.

With his right hand the intercept director picked up what looked like a Buck Rogers ray gun, pressed a trigger and shone a red glow over a point of light on the screen. He released the trigger, put down the "gun" and pointed to a small panel at the upper corner of the console.

In seconds a red light on the back of the gun came on and numbers in the lighted panel gave height, speed and direction of the fighter plane.

There was a feeling of the 20th century but Air Commodore Pollard didn't seem impressed. "The computer is a marvellous machine," he admitted, "but it's still only a machine. Skilled human judgment remains the most important part of the SAGE system." Hence the term "semi-automatic."

The human brain behind the electronic one still had to tell the latter what to do and when to do it.

SAVE IS IMPRESSIVE

Officially this installation is the northern NORAD region SAGE direction centre but to those who work here it's simply "the hole."

Sqdn. Ldr. Dave Tarrell had figures to impress visitors. The caverns are 45 feet wide and average 54 feet high. The building is 23 feet wide with wings from 23 to 430 feet long — equal to seven city blocks.

About 300,000 cubic yards of rock were taken out in addition to the 3,000-foot entrance there is a 6,000-foot tunnel leading out in the opposite direction.

Stocks of fuel, food, water and other supplies are maintained underground in case the centre has to cut itself off from the surface under emergency conditions.

Average underground temperature is 61 degrees but air conditioning maintains a normal reading of 71 degrees in the computer room and other parts of the building.

Cooling is more of a problem than heating. Water from thousands of vacuum tubes and other electrical components has to be carried off. Millions of gallons of water are pumped from nearby Trout Lake to maintain the proper temperature.

SEMANTICS SNAG

With U.S. and Canadian servicemen working side by side, slight problems of interpretation sometimes crop up. But Air Commodore Pollard said these are more apparent than real.

"We've given up trying to spell defence in any particular style," he said with a smile. (The U.S. form is "defense.") "Whether it comes with a c or an s, we all know what it means."

Pronunciation differences are taken in stride. "We find Canadians saying 'wee' so the Americans will understand and the Americans using 'sed' for our benefit."

But apparently in some cases no chances are taken. Certain doors in the underground establishment bear the words "Out of Bounds." Alongside is the U.S. version, "Off Limits."

Threat of Moscow-Peking Showdown Begins to Recede

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The threat of a Moscow-Peking showdown has receded as Soviet Premier Khrushchev prepares to celebrate his 70th birthday, still firmly in the saddle at home but no longer in firm control over the world of international communism.

The world now faces the growing prospect that the man who survived the whims and terror of Stalin may be forced to preside at the liquidation of Communist solidarity.

For although Khrushchev indicated during his Hungarian tour he is ready to take up the Chinese challenge raised by poem-maker Mao Tse - Tung, the Soviet leader now appears to have accepted the suggestion of East European satellites that he show more caution in attempting to strangle the Red dragon.

Results of a showdown with the Chinese Reds, which might have resulted in an attempt to purge the Chinese from the Comintern, would be hard to predict. No matter how much he tried, Khrushchev could not dismiss the gargantuan size of Red China, nor the sheer weight of numbers of the China mainland's 700,000,000 people.

WRONG IMAGE

A purge might, in fact, merely intensify the Moscow-Peking ideological struggle and lead to a physical clash that might only be resolved through Moscow's resort to nuclear weapons. This is not in keeping with the image the Soviet premier wants the world to see.

Khrushchev has described himself as a man of peace. He is in the autumn of his years. Russia's Novosti press agency describes him as a man working tirelessly and consistently to implement Lenin's policy of peaceful co-existence.

"It will be no exaggeration to say that, owing to the unflagging efforts of Khrushchev, the principles of peaceful co-existence have been taking firmer and firmer root in international relations in the last decade," the Soviet agency says in summing up Khrushchev's present stature.

Khrushchev, in his current meeting with Polish leaders in the Kremlin, thoughtfully acknowledges that the Communist world is in trouble and that Red China is the culprit. He predicts a way will be found to handle the Chinese situation.

HANDS TIED

But the prospect appears that Khrushchev may be forced to eat his words; to listen to the tireless tirade of the Chinese and be unable to do anything about the situation except by countering with tirades of his own.

The division within the Communist camp is therefore likely to grow, with Peking making clear the division cannot be overcome until the policies of Khrushchev are replaced by policies more representative of the late Stalin.

Whether the Russians would tolerate another Stalin is doubtful. The Soviets have come a long way from the Stalin era. Living standards have improved and brutality has been reduced. Khrushchev has appealed to the possibilities of a good life ahead, based on agriculture, chemistry and more consumer goods.

Russians are not likely to toss all this aside just to restore good relations with the Chinese.

WEATHER IMPROVING

PEKING (Reuters) — The weather in Communist China is getting slowly but steadily warmer while annual rainfall is gradually decreasing in all but a few southern coastal regions. This was the conclusion of two Peking meteorologists who made a detailed study of all available weather records in China during the last century and more.

The SEAWAY STORY you didn't know

After five years of operation, the St. Lawrence Seaway is rocked by labor strife and plagued with tiffs, deep in debt and getting deeper. This is the year Canada and the United States sit down at the conference table to re-open original agreements. If negotiations hit a snag, Canada has one big ace in the hole—the Seaway could be converted to an all-Canadian route. A big feature article in this week's Star Weekly puts all the Seaway facts on the table, including some that are little known.

Better Business Bureau Readies Salesman Gimmicks

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—The Better Business Bureau in Toronto has a copy of a contract used by Grade one door-to-door firm, gives its salesmen:

The script tells the salesman everything from when to laugh to when to start a sentence disarmingly with "Golly," Mrs. Jones.

It lists 27 standard objections the customer might have to hearing the product and 27 answers for the salesman to use.

Even the recently harassed are not safe. The salesman are told (Instruction No. 16) to say "We've had a death in our family too, so I know how you feel."

Thomas Rimmer of the Toronto branch emphasizes that 95 per cent of businesses are legitimate. What concerns the Better Business Bureau is the remaining five per cent who go on year after year making a profit through shady operations.

"At worst, he says, they sell something that is never delivered or they persuade victim to sign a contract when he believes he is signing something else.

At best they sell merchandise the housewife really doesn't want and perhaps cannot afford. They sell shoddy, and overpriced goods and some work a deal with the manufacturer whereby he sends a basic price and the salesman gets anything above that figure.

THEIVES' ACTORS

The prepared spiel is common. "The pitch is rehearsed word for word. They are not making it up as they go along. These people are professionals. They are not interested in the housewife's welfare, they just want to sell."

Mr. Rimmer says you should be wary if the salesman says he's working his way through college, getting popularity points for a trip to Europe, making a survey, or if he offers bonuses, gifts, cut prices, something for nothing.

"Their calls are not made at random. They know the best time. They generally choose a time of day when a housewife is busy and might sign just to get them out the door."

Once a contract is signed, he says, there is little that can be done, and then a lawyer will have to help do it. The time for caution is before signing.

He has some general advice:

—"You shouldn't have too much to do with any salesman if you don't know who he is."

—"If his product does have some merit, ask him to come back. If he won't, it probably is just a hit-and-run deal."

"Ask him to leave all the information — facts, figures, prices, his name, and perhaps the name of the finance company that will take over payments. Then shop for price comparisons, and ignore side deals or gimmicks."

—"Don't be in a hurry, and for goodness sake, don't sign anything just to get rid of a salesman."

Unique Rifle Only Clue In Lover's Lane Double Murder

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — For the first time in a year a photograph of an unusual side-loading .22-calibre rifle has been released by police officials.

The gun was made in 1903. Ballistics proved it was the murder gun.

Finding it last weekend.

Diane, a practical nurse, and Leslie, a garage mechanic, had parked near Piper Lagoon. They had been dating for a year.

Police know the slayer, carrying 410424, crept up behind the car and shot Dixon twice through the back of the head.

The girl was forced into another car and driven through the centre of this Vancouver Island city. Eight miles from Piper Lagoon, her car, hit a rock.

Dixon, after, shot the girl between the eyes. Then she was beaten with the rifle and her body covered with dirt and parts of an abandoned car.

Eight after the time of the slaying, a motorist knocked on a door nearby and asked Yvonne Barclay, 19, to help him move his car out of a ditch where it had slid after hitting a rock. Police believe it was the killer's car.

The trail ends there. Says Sgt. Purdy:

"The case will never be closed until we find the killer."

SEE THE GUN

It was Jun. 29, 1963, that two boys looking down wells in skating on Long Lake just north of the and saw a rifle stock beneath the ice.

It was a .22-calibre, semi-automatic Winchester Model 63 serial number 410424, and it differed from most similar makes in that the loading mechanism was housed in the butt.

Club Travel Planners Elected

OLIVE BRASSINGTON — GUNTHER ACTROS

Planning to attend the same theatre festival, two clubs are merging for this occasion to charter a Canadian National coach. This novel approach to cut expenses was explained by Mrs. Olive Brassnche, newly-elected travel convenor for her Ladies' Club, and Mr. Gunther Actros, well-known theatre personality and drama teacher. "Each club had sufficient members . . . about 30 . . . to obtain the UN Party Fares discount of 20% explained Mrs. Brassnche. "Even now and above CN's rock-bottom Red and White fares. But by travelling together, we can charter a CN coach, for even greater savings." Mr. Actros added "Our students could not have afforded the trip by themselves, but the CN Charter Coach Plan gives us our own air-conditioned coach with savings as much as 35% — and places the festival within our means. In fact, we are planning to use the Canadian National Group Travel Plans for all future excursions."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

"Like the Beatles, soft drinks and male commercials," Sen Casey, the Yankees and Gumshoe hatwise, the National Hockey League system of playoffs is strictly for the birds," the man said.

"I hold no brief or favor for any of the NHL clubs. I am a hockey man but attach no allegiance to any of the professional scalp-hunters.

"One of my forebears fought with Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham, but I'm not a Canadiens fan.

"I spent several months in Toronto on several separate Sundays. That lets the Leafs out.

"I was jilted by a gal from Detroit who threw me over because I said the Tigers were a minor baseball team. That relieves me of favoring the Red Wings.

"Once on a hunting safari we ran short of grub and were forced to eat stale, brown bread and half-baked beans for a week. I went no part of Boston.

"During a visit to Chicago several years ago, I stayed in a hotel near the stockyards. The wind was in the wrong direction for three days. That censures me from any allegiance to the Black Hawks.

"A New York friend of mine told me to avoid the marriage, insurance, and horror if necessary and back the Yankees to win the world series last year. The Dodgers fattened them four straight. So, phooey on the Rangers.

"Harry Balough, jeag steer departed, who was one of New York's most famous ring announcers, used to bellow in his chosen Brooklynese 'and may the better participant emerge triumphant.'

"This, undoubtedly is what is the case with the National Hockey League playoffs. The cream of the year's contestants' emerging triumphant are the club owners whose exchequers are fattened to almost extravagant proportions by the host of summer baggage gates.

"Look at the current standings. You've got teams that finished in third and fourth places in the standings fighting to see which is the better team of the league with the Stanley Cup the cover up.

"In my opinion the club which staggers through a heavy schedule of seventy games and emerges with the better won and lost record is the best in the league. They have proven they are the better club.

"A third or fourth place team can win positional honors by the skins of their teeth and then have to battle through a series of seven games at the most to claim the top honors.

"Playoffs are all right when played on a sectional basis, such as the American and National Baseball Leagues.

"Can you imagine the furore which would erupt in the United States if the baseball moguls decided on a playoff system such as we have in pro hockey to decide the world series contestants?"

"Picture the proud Yankees winning their league flag by a large margin, having to playoff with, say, the lowly fourth-place Washington Senators. Or the high-flying Dodgers well out in front being forced to wage play-off war with a tired or fourth place squad.

"You'd think the Alaska earthquake was doing a re-run in Gotham and Los Angeles.

"On league performances this season and by virtue of their standing finish the Montreal Canadiens are the rightful champions of the NHL, Stanley Cup high jinks to the contrary."

Flatbush Fans Mourn
Giants Get 'The Dook'!

Old wounds, six years in healing after Walter O'Malley separated the faithful from their beloved Dodgers, have reopened. Duke Snider, the pride of Flatbush, has gone over to the still-hated Giants.

Snider, 37, was acquired by the Giants—San Francisco vintage—from New York Mets in a straight cash deal Tuesday. The silver-haired slugger may start alongside Willie Mays, another New York folk hero who went west, in the San Francisco outfield tonight when the Giants meet Milwaukee Braves on the West Coast.

Old-line Dodger fans and newbread Met rooters were dismayed by the second passing of the Duke. But Snider welcomed the move and the Giants, who have been after the veteran for some time, were equally happy.

Snider came to the Mets a year go after 16 seasons with the Dodgers in Brooklyn and Los Angeles. He appeared in 139 games in 1955, frequently as a pinch hitter, and batted .243 with 14 home runs and 45 runs batted in.

Snider has hit 402 career homers, 10th highest total in history, and takes a .286 lifetime batting average to San Francisco.

The Giants, loaded with right-handed power, plan to use the left handed hitting Snider primarily in pinch-hitting roles.

Ullman Sparks Wings To 4-3 Victory

By DAVE BETTS

TORONTO (CP)—The mighty Toronto Maple Leafs, defending Stanley Cup champions, were brought to their knees Tuesday night by the most underrated player in the National Hockey League.

Norman Ullman, a 26-year-old reservoir of energy, threw in his vote with the entire hockey world when he admitted: "It was one of the best games I've ever played."

Ullman, a Detroit Red Wing centre who has always played in the shadow of such stars as Ted Lindsay, Gordie Howe and Alex Delvecchio, sliced deeply into the confidence of the Leafs when he set up an overtime goal by Hammale Larry Jeffrey that gave the Wings a 4-3 win and tied the Stanley Cup finals after two games.

But that was just the climax to an all-star evening.

In the 60 minutes of regulation time and 7:23 of overtime, it seemed to the Leafs that Ullman was on the ice for almost a week.

GOOD BOTH WAYS

He scored a goal, stole the puck, killed penalties, unified the power play, gave goalie Johnny Bower indigestion and tore up large hunks of Maple Leaf Gardens ice with his relentless skating.

The goal and assist moved Ullman, the fourth - highest scorer in Detroit history, within six points of the playoff record held by Chicago's Stan Mikita. In 1962 Mikita moved 21 points in 12 games against Toronto and Montreal. In nine games this spring Ullman has seven goals and eight assists.

Ullman's punch belonged to Jeffrey and the Wings from the opening faceoff, but a two-goal pilgrage by Leafs Red Kelly in the third period threw it into extra time and threatened to overshadow Ullman's performance for the hundred and umpteenth time in his career.

The overtime was a sorry mess for the champions. They managed only one weak shot on Terry Sawchuk while the determined Wings fired eight hot ones at Bower and bagged the puck as if they had a mortgage on it.

RELAY PERFECT

Then Ullman grabbed it along the boards, dodged a check, slipped around another Leaf and dumped a perfect pass to Howe in the corner.

So many Leafs were chasing Ullman that Howe found himself uncovered in front of the net. He screamed at Howe. The puck was relayed, the red light flashed and the jubilant Wings went into a communal bear-hug.

One of the saddest of a sorry collection of Leafs was Gerry Ehman, a strong right winger called up from the American League, who scored the tying goal with only 43 seconds remaining in the third period.

"What does it matter now?" he moaned. "It's just another loss."

Earlier Toronto goals were scored by Allan Stanley and Red Kelly. After Ullman's tying goal in the first period, Detroit made it 3-3 by the end of the second on goals by Floyd Smith and Ed Joyal.

HOWE HOT

Manager-coach Jimmy Skinner of Toronto admitted this year's edition of the Wings is tougher than the group his club destroyed in five games in last year's final. But he was too preoccupied with assessing flaws within his own team to dawdle over praise for the Wings.

"There was too many spectators at this game—my forwards. They just stood around and watched. They didn't go out for something to happen. Our forwards lost the game for us. They were outclassed."

Abel was more confident about the rest of the series.

"Ten have to say we have the advantage. It's a best-of-five series now and we have three games at home."

'LONG AFFAIR'

Except for a hectic flurry in the third period, the Leafs never became involved in the game, playing in the Detroit end. At one point the Red Wing wrecking crew kept the puck inside the onto blueline for almost three minutes.

Sawchuk had a routine night with 30 saves while Bower bounced around like a ping-pong ball in a wind tunnel to block 26 shots, many of them from close in. Ullman's deflection was which was the outstanding unit on the ice.

The Wings, who left for their Toledo, Ohio, retreat, shortly after the game, will continue their usual practice of no press teas. But the Leafs have an appointment with Imlach on the Gardens ice today before they take a late train to Detroit.

WILL RELEASE PURSE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Government has agreed to release about two-thirds of the $2,500,000 it tied up from the Sonny Liston Cassius Clay heavyweight title fight won by Clay. A spokesman said the government's financial interest would be protected by a lien covering more than $800,000 against Liston and his wife.

BOWER'S DIVE ENDS IN FLOP — Goalie Johnnie Bower of Toronto Maple Leafs is upended by a flying stick as he makes a dive for the puck in a gaggle of players in front of the Leaf net. Detroit Red Wings won the second game with Maple Leafs in the Stanley Cup finals. First game in the best-of-seven series went to Leafs. (CP Photo)

Orioles Whip Chisox; Angels Win
Twins Tag Tribe; Tigers Wallop Kansas

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Given a little help, Leon Wagner may push Cleveland Indians up a notch or two in the American League standings. But he isn't quite ready to overpower the muscular Minnesota Twins all by himself.

Wagner, whom the Tribe acquired from Los Angeles Angels last winter to bolster their unimpressive offensive power, started earning his pay early, driving in four runs Tuesday with a home run and a single. But the Twins bounced back for a 7-4 victory, tagging the Indians with their fifth straight opening-day defeat at home.

Apart from Detroit Tigers, who walloped Kansas City Athletics 7-3, and New York Yankees, whose date with Boston Red Sox was rained out, the first round of AL inaugurals offered little comfort to the home team.

Baltimore Orioles knocked out rookie-of-the-year Gary Peters in the seventh inning and Boog Powell tagged reliever Hoyt Wilhelm with a two-run homer in the eighth in whip Chicago White Sox 5-3, ending a string of five successive victories in home openers for the Sox. Los Angeles blanked Washington Senators 4-0 in their opener Monday.

Two Tribe innings, it appeared, sent Wagner's pocket brimming. He opened the third inning with a home run off Camilo Pascual and added a single in the fifth after he had walked and stolen second. Bert Rutley topped the league in almost all offensive departments last season.

Vic Davalillo, who had singled, scored on Wagner's single in the third after he had walked and stolen second. Bert Rutley topped the league in almost all offensive departments last season.

Vic Davalillo, who had singled, home a run in the first inning. Rohl had opened the inning with a home-run shot.

But the Twins have begging away. Jimmie Hall's two-run double in the fifth chased Cleveland starter Modest Grant. Jerry Walker gave way to Pete

Koufax Deals Cards First Shutout

Willie Hits Two Homers

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Staff Writer

When Sandy Koufax strikes out only five batters in a game, it ought to be good news to the opposition. But it doesn't help much when he doesn't give them any runs.

Sandy took up Tuesday night where he left off last season, turning in one of his shutout specialties as Los Angeles Dodgers opened defence of their National League championship by whipping St. Louis Cardinals 4-0.

There were 50,451 in Dodger Stadium — the largest of the opening day crowds — when Koufax began to whip an assortment of fast balls and curves out of his effortless motion. And when it was over, he had fittingly pitched the first shutout in the National League.

Koufax, a 25-game winner last year with 11 shutouts to his credit, was joined in the Dodger victory by Willie Mays, who hit two home runs in five-home salvo that gave San Francisco Giants a 4-3 opening-game victory over Milwaukee Braves.

Slevers' three-run homer powered Philadelphia Phillies to a 6-3 victory over New York Mets and Billy Williams' two-run homer in the 10th inning led Chicago Cubs to an 8-6 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates.

Houston Colts and Cincinnati Reds, who opened play Monday, were not scheduled.

Mays hit a two-run homer in the fifth and clubbed out Wes Covington with a solo shot in the eighth.

BROKE TIE

Jim Hart, Orlando Cepeda and Tom Haller also homered for the Giants, who broke a 4-4 tie in the sixth on Cepeda's single, a wild pitch and a single by Haller. Juan Marichal, 25-8 last year, was the winner on a seven-hitter.

Toronto Leads Cage Finals

TORONTO (CP) — Barry Howson's 24-point outburst, 14 of them on foul shots, paced Toronto Kings to an 80-65 win over Winnipeg Buffalos Tuesday and a 2-0 lead in the best-of-five series for the Canadian senior men's basketball championship.

Third game of the series will be played tonight. If a fourth is necessary it will be played Friday.

The Buffalos, who lost the opener 79-60 Monday, took an early lead in Tuesday's game but trailed 30-36 at half time and ran out of steam in the final 20 minutes.

In The Dressing Rooms

By DAVE BETES

TORONTO (CP) — Manager-coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs said there were too many spectators at Tuesday's 4-3 overtime loss—his forwards.

The forwards just stood around and watched the play," Imlac said dejectedly as Detroit Red Wings celebrated their overtime win that tied the Stanley Cup finals 1-1.

"Our forwards lost the game for us. They were out-hustled all the way.

"The team played good hockey for 15 minutes and the rest of the time they couldn't get hold of the puck."

Imlach said an overtime loss is no more crushing to morale than a defeat during regulation time.

"What the heck. It's just another hockey game. This makes it best-of-five series and it looks as if it's going to be a long drawn-out affair."

Detroit winger Larry Jeffrey bagged in a pass at 7:31 of the first overtime period. The Leafs got only one shot on Terry Sawchuk in overtime compared to eight by Detroit against Johnny Bower.

One of the longest faces in a dressing room full of sad countenances belonged to Gerry Ehman, a recruit from Rochester Americans who scored for the Leafs at 19:17 of the third period to send the game into sudden-death overtime.

SHOT HITS SKATES

"Bathgate's (Andy) shot hit my skate and it bounced in," he said. "But what does it matter now. I suppose it would have been a big goal but now it doesn't mean one thing."

Imlach said his team will practice today and take an afternoon train to Detroit for the third and fourth games Thursday and Saturday. In contrast to the Wings' habit of relaxing between games, the Leafs have booked ice at Detroit Olympia for between-game workouts.

Imlach expressed confidence that the Leafs will be able to win the best-of-7 games and go on to their third straight Stanley Cup.

"This outfit just can't win five, six, seven or eight big ones in a row. They've never been able to get it together all season and I guess they can't do it now. In that Montreal (semi-final) series they came up with the big ones that they had to take and I know they can do it again."

TORONTO (CP) — Tenacity is a difficult word to define when used in the sports world. Fighters who continually get off the floor have it. Athletes who play with painful injuries have it. And Detroit Red Wings, led by Norm Ullman, have it.

Ullman capped on of the finest performances seen in Stanley Cup playoff history Tuesday night when he helped set up his club's winning goal in a 4-3 overtime thriller over Toronto Maple Leafs.

"I have to admit it was one of the best games I've ever played," said Ullman.

"I felt really good out there. On that winning goal by Larry (Jeffrey), I got the puck along the boards and tried to draw some Leafs over to me. Then I saw Gordie (Howe) in the corner and gave it to him. He whipped it over to Jeffrey, and that was it."

Jeffrey said he doesn't know what he would have done had he missed on the chance.

"It was a perfect pass from Gord. I yelled to him when I thought I was set up and he put it right on my stick. I just flipped it and it was in."

HAVE ADVANTAGE

"You have to say we have the advantage now. It's a best-of-five series now, and we have Sid."

Eastern Allan Cup Final

Record Favors Woodstock

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Woodstock Athletics finally managed to break a 18-year-old jinx and, on a record, are only one step away from a berth in the Allan Cup finals.

The Athletics, for the first time in 16 years of senior hockey, have advanced past the Ontario Hockey Association circuit. On five other occasions they reached the group finals—but no further.

Tonight the Athletics play host to Ottawa Montagards, Ottawa area champions, in the opening game of a best-of-seven Eastern Canada final.

If past performances are any indication, Woodstock should be a strong favorite. In three playoff series the Athletics won 12 of 15 games.

They won their OHA semi-finals against Welland Buriloads in four straight games, were extended to six games by Galt Hornets, and won in five games against Rouyn - Noranda Aces-ettes of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association.

In 26 home dates, including schedule and playoff games, they have lost only twice. In eight home playoff outings they have gone undefeated.

SCORED FIRST

Montagnards upset over Windsor Maple Leafs in the Eastern Canada semi-finals, edging the heavily-favored Nova Scotians 3-2 in a best-of-five series.

This is only the second season in senior ranks for the Montagnards although they have a number of senior hockey veterans.

Seals Grab 3-1 Lead

SAN FRANCISCO (CP)—Lou Haley tipped in a loose puck for his second goal of the game at the 15:34 mark of overtime Tuesday night to give San Francisco Seals a 5-4 victory over Los Angeles Blades and a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Western Hockey League final.

Omaha Wins CPL Title

OMAHA (AP)—Omaha used a big first period Tuesday to whip St. Paul 5-3 and win the Central Professional Hockey League final playoff series 4-1.

Goals by Bill McEneny, Lee Jonsson and Gary Peters fired Omaha to a 4-1 advantage after the team deadlocked 1-1 in the opening period. St. Paul made it 3-2 before the period ended and then was no scoring until Omaha scored twice in the last period.

Too Thoughtful, Gentle

'Uncle Baz' Not Sports Editor Cartoon

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP)—Small-framed O'Meara, despite the hazard and wear of 31 battle-weary movie-goer's-wide, up the way a sports writer should look—the bat in a slight stance, mouth stick between the teeth, eyes glinting behind horn-rimmed glasses.

But Baz O'Meara, as he is bylined in the Montreal Star and known to several generations of sportsmen, is too thoughtful, too gentle a man to complete the classic caricature of a sports reporter as a flip - tongued punster.

A recent stroke has slowed him down and his once-daily column of comment in the Star, the Passing Sport Show, is less frequent now.

But he is still a fast man with an anecdote, drawing on a lifetime reservoir of names and dates and big moments to produce an ever-fresh yarn. And he can turn a subtle phrase or engineer a gentle joke with the best.

As for his work, Baz says, "I won't quit. Not until they carry me out."

STARTED IN OTTAWA

He's been at it for over half a century, since he signed as a cub reporter with the old Ottawa Free Press as a 19-year-old who had failed to find romance punching an adding machine in the post office and working as a railway freight clerk.

After four years chasing fire engines, writing obituaries and covering service-club speeches, he landed a job as managing editor of the Niagara Falls Record, only to have the paper sold from under him after a few months.

He had time for a stint as a feature writer with the Ottawa Citizen, before joining up and serving as an artillerman in the First World War.

Back home, he joined the Ottawa Journal and friends steered him into the sports department as an outlet for style and a color in his writing.

WON'T QUIT—Baz O'Meara, 72, retired as sports director of the Montreal Star in 1957 but has continued to write his sports column. The column now appears only thrice weekly because of a recent mild stroke O'Meara suffered. "But I won't quit," he says. "Not until they carry me out." (CP Photo)

Hockey was established as his first and greatest love in the sports world when he began covering the old Ottawa Senators in 1919—two years after formation of the National Hockey League—and saw the home team win seven NHL championships in a decade.

SHIFTS TO STAR

The NHL remained his prime assignment when he joined the Montreal Star in 1929 and continued so after he became sports editor eight years later, until he left the beat in 1956 as senior statesman among NHL writers.

The following year he retired after 30 years at sports editor—though he continued to write his column—and more than 700 colleagues and sports celebrities from across Canada and the United States paid him tribute at a testimonial dinner.

His colleagues are admiring and targets of criticism in his columns seldom smilk for long. "He has a fantastic memory for names and dates," says fellow Star columnist Elmer Ferguson, "and I never saw a man faster with words."

Baz himself, despite his trailing fly-by-night-and-fumble-cub reporter's world, maintains that "I've never felt the need to compete against anyone."

And his insistence on working at his own pace in a competitive business often caused wonderment among deadline-conscious colleagues.

SMOOTH, WITH HUMOR

"He's a smooth writer with just enough humor to keep from being unkind," says Ferguson.

Targets of his ribbing tend to retaliate in kind.

Baz recalls an episode in his Ottawa Senator days when a burly defenceman he had criticized in print was given a penalty and, spotting O'Meara at the press table behind the penalty box, clambered right through the box and advanced menacingly on the writer.

Muttering "I'm for it now," Baz was ready to break into a sweat or a run, when the defenceman leaned over him, broke into a grin, asked what time it was and retired laughing to the box.

Scrupulously honest in his reporting, Baz occasionally permits himself a sly dig that pleases Montrealers.

Writing about the Montreal-Toronto NHL semi-finals this spring, Baz commented that a head - hunting tendency among the Maple Leafs was costing them in penalties and concluded:

"If the Leafs lose on Saturday night . . . they will be in deep jeopardy and that is where they PLAYS THE PONIES

While hockey gets most of his attention, he follows the horses with zeal and a "system" that baffles his friends.

"He has a system for betting that he's worked out on his own," says Ferguson, "and he complements these strange markings and figures with tips, as many as 15 on a single horse."

Colleagues maintain that the mysterious system's chief drawback is that it seldom pays off, but Baz remains inscrutable, the only sign of a bad day at the track a litter of torn pari-mutuel tickets around his desk.

Basically, despite his readiness for humor, Baz sees sport as an important element in society with a potentially significant role.

Sport should be another word for friendship, he says.

"Friendship is the most important quality that one derives from sporting associations and it might be the instrument to bring East and West together in a spirit of amity and goodwill."

Twins Tag

Ramos after walking the first two batsmen in the sixth and Rich Rollins greeted the newcomer with a two-run single that put the Twins ahead to stay.

Jim Perry, the third of four Minnesota pitchers, got credit for the victory with Walker being charged with the loss.

The Orioles also hit for distance, getting homers from Johnny Orsino and pinch-hitter Joe Gaines before Powell's game-winning blow. The Sox had the consolation of chasing Baltimore starter Milt Pappas, whose lifetime record against them is 12-3, in the sixth inning. Stu Miller, who took over from Dick Hall in the seventh, was the winner.

A 37-mile-an-hour wind that blew fly balls into extra-base hits was a decisive factor at Detroit, where homers by Billy Bruton and Norm Cash of the Tigers were matched by Kansas City's Jim Gentile and Manny Jiminez.

It was an inauspicious debut for Vern Handrahan, the Athletics' 25-year-old right hander from Charlottetown. He took over from loser Orlando Pena in the sixth inning and promptly tagged for three hits, including Bruton's two-run homer, before retiring in the seventh.

Jet Powered Hydroplane Runs Ashore At 300 MPH

PARKER, Ariz. (AP)—A jet-powered aluminum boat roaring along at an estimated 300 miles an hour ran ashore on Lake Havasu Tuesday and a helicopter trying to rescue the driver, who jumped out, crashed in shallow water.

A witness to tests of the Hustler, aimed at breaking the world water speed record, said Taylor got up to about 300 miles an hour along the four-mile test run and lifted to slow in time. He flipped off his cockpit canopy and jumped before the boat hit the shore.

Taylor landed in shallow water about 100 yards from shore. The boat hit the beach with its motor still going and scraped about 25 feet up a steep incline.

Saskatchewan Election

Woodrow Stanley Lloyd, CCF Party Leader, No Rookie

REGINA (CP)—The April 22 Saskatchewan election will be the first faced by Woodrow Stanley Lloyd since he was named premier and provincial CCF party leader in November, 1961.

Mr. Lloyd, however, is anything but a raw political rookie.

He stepped into the premier's job vacated by T. C. Douglas, now national New Democratic party leader, after more than 18 years experience in politics.

Since then he has had to contend with the explosive 1963 crisis over the medical care insurance scheme introduced just as he became premier, two by-election losses, the defection to the Liberal party of a cabinet minister, a number of cabinet changes and the need to build confidence among his followers, a task that any new political leader faces.

He has weathered these crises with equanimity and now has at least one bit of luck going his way—an economy buoyed to record heights by an unprecedented wheat crop and growing industrialization.

JESSE AT LIBERALS

Mr. Lloyd's campaign has been largely a prompting of the government record in providing "more abundant living" through services such as the medical care scheme, combined with sarcastic jibes at Liberal campaign methods.

Mr. Lloyd, 50, is a soft-spoken former schoolteacher who wears glasses, sports a moustache and smokes a pipe. He and his wife Victoria have four children and in mid-1963 became grandparents.

The premier's normally placid personality, which changes quickly in moments of extreme anger, is in sharp contrast to that of his dynamic, silver-tongued predecessor. He had avoided the limelight before becoming premier and more than one party worker wondered if he had enough "color." That picture appears to be going now.

Mr. Lloyd is 1961 inherited from Mr. Douglas an economy beset by a disastrous 1961 wheat crop.

Doctor resisting to the medical care scheme went on result in a three-week boycott and a government compromise with the medical profession on some portions of the scheme.

MINISTER QUIT

But perhaps the toughest blow the premier had to face was the resignation from the CCF party and cabinet of J. Walter Erb, the man who as health minister helped pilot the medical care legislation through the legislature. Mr. Erb, protesting government handling of the medical care plan, subsequently joined the Liberals.

That and byelections whittled the CCF standing in the legislature from 38 seats in 1960 to 34 at dissolution. There were 21 Liberals.

Mr. Lloyd first was elected to the legislature at the age of 30 years ago.

DEVELOP DRUG

MANCHESTER, England (CP) — British scientists have produced a drug that could considerably reduce the number of radiation deaths in the event of a nuclear war, Dr. Lasdev Lajtha of Christie Hospital says: "It can successfully deal with twice the amount of radiation previously considered lethal for man."

LANDS AT LAST

LONDON (CP) — A Royal Navy survey party has made the first recorded landing on Cook Island, sighted but unexplored by Captain Cook in 1775. The survey party from Protector, an ice patrol ship, is working with the British Antarctic Survey in a detailed investigation of the little-known South Sandwich group of islands.

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

There are taxpayers each year who lose out on exemptions because they are of the opinion that to make a claim for a dependent, such dependant must reside with them. Any person the taxpayer supports who is related to him by blood, marriage or adoption, may be claimed for exemption, if such person qualifies as to age and income.

If the dependant has income in excess of $950, no claim is allowable. If the dependant is over 21 and is of an employable age, there is no claim. The fact that the taxpayer is supporting a relative who is unemployed but otherwise of an employable age, does not give the taxpayer any claim to exemption.

A son supporting a parent in another city may claim exemption for them, to the extent of $300 or the amount of his contributions, whichever is the lesser. If more than one child contributes to the support, apportionment each is allowed to claim a portion of the $300, but the total claimed between them must not exceed $350. If one contributes more than the other, the $350 must be prorated according to their contributions.

Many taxpayers who support their parents who are over 20, still do not claim them because they are in perfect health and the word "infirm" on the return leads them to believe they have no claim.

A better word would be "unemployable." It is a well known fact an employer will not hire anyone over 20 because he considers them infirm even though the person is in perfect health. In cases like this the son should make the claim for the parents as for employment purposes as they are "infirm."

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems please enclose a self-addressed five-cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

Question 1. Can I claim my widowed father who lives in another province? He has no income except his old age pension. I send him $30 per month. He will not live with us on account of our small children. No one else assists him.

Answer: Yes, you may claim $300 for him.

Question 2. I am single and I support my brother aged 52. He cannot do work due to his age. We live in a small apartment and he does the housework and gets the meals. What can I claim for him.

Answer: Claim $1,000. That is the equivalent to married status.

51,300,000 U. S. Homes Have Television Sets

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Researchers of the Nielsen Company estimate that 51,300,000 homes in United States have TV sets and the average set is in use 5½ hours daily during mid-winter and 4¼ hours daily during the summer.

The authoritative rating service says set ownerships is heaviest—85 per cent or more homes in the northeastern U.S. It is lightest, 57 per cent, in the south.

Viewing starts with fewer than 250,000 sets in use, and climbs sharply to a mid-day peak of 15,000,000 homes. By mid-evening, sets are in use in at least 34,000,000 homes. The peak period is between 8 and 9 p.m.

There are 540 commercial TV stations in 48 states, an increase of 30 since 1963. Alaska and Hawaii were not included in the Nielsen survey.

VACUUM FILLED

The vacuum which the studios had provided by holding back too long had been filled by Independents like Dick Powell's Four Star and MCA's Revue (which later swallowed Universal).

The facts of life are that few if any of the big studios would be operating without television. All of them have gone through periods of suffering huge losses from 20th Century-Fox showed an almost $40,000,000 deficit in 1962.

Such losses could never have been survived without new sources of revenue from television: 1. The sale of old movies; 2. The production of series. The former has provided quick, much-needed capital. The latter has only brings revenue; it also cuts down overhead and keeps crews busy during slack periods.

Marriage of Movies, TV Finally Made Official

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A bit of history passed with scant notice this month.

The Association of Motion Picture Producers and the Alliance of Television Film Producers announced they were combining to form the Association of Motion Picture and Television Producers.

This represents an important transition in the patterns of the entertainment industry. It's a wedding of movies and television now is sanctioned with a marriage license. The upstart television has taken its official place as partner of the movie business.

The wedding could have come about only through change of personnel and circumstance. Louis B. Mayer and other film pioneers would not have countenanced it. They had carved empires by playing to masses in theatres; they couldn't understand giving away entertainment.

They thought if they ignored television it might go away. Their stars weren't permitted to appear on it.

But as television zoomed and movies declined, changes had to be made. The Columbia Pictures ranks to make films for television, then Walt Disney. All the others eventually joined suit—they were too late to effect a monopoly, which their studio facilities and skills might have provided.

LIZ IS CLEO VI

Joseph L. Mankiewicz' "Cleopatra" is the sixth known motion picture dealing with the legendary Queen of the Nile. Undoubtedly, it is the most-publicized and, at $40,000,000, the costliest.

The first "Cleopatra," the record shows, was filmed in France in 1908. It was followed by two more silent treatments, one made in Italy, the other in and made elaborate up to they — in the United States, in 1934, with famed cinema vamp Theda Bara starred. Then, in 1935, "Cleopatra" made her talkie" debut in a celebrated Cecil B. DeMille version, in which Claudette Colbert portrayed the Egyptian temptress.

The most prominent feature of the story was Gabriel Pascal's 1945 recreation of George Bernard Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," in which Vivian Leigh played the Nile beauty.

In 20th Century-Fox's current epic, movie queen Elizabeth Taylor has the title role, with Rex Harrison as Julius Caesar and Richard Burton as Mark Antony. The DeLuxe Color spectacle is now in its 6th day of a highly successful showing at the Belle with showings at 2.00 and 8.00 at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Western Allan Cup Finals

Winnipeg Withdraws Maroons

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons' management informed the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association today that the club is withdrawing from the Western Canada Allan Cup finals.

General manager Rod Holohan told the CAHA the withdrawal is in the face of a losing battle to avoid a Wednesday game in Saskatoon April 22.

Maroons are unable to get a team committed for the mid-week contest, third game in a best-of-seven Western final with Saskatoon Quakers of the Saskatchewan Senior League.

The third game originally was set for Friday April 24. Because of an abbreviated semi-final between Saskatoon and Kimberley, the date was moved up two days.

Negotiations towards a solution bogged down Tuesday.

Page immediately told Holohan to put a team on the ice and the series is scheduled to open Friday night in Winnipeg or face forfeiture proposition.

Maroons, who had arranged to get time off work for the third game as originally scheduled, have been unable to arrange to get away for the rescheduled mid-week encounter.

REVIVE HEAD CUTTING

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Temenggong Jugah, paramount chief of Sarawak's Dyak tribe, told a political rally at Penang that when and if Indonesian guerrilla infiltrators show up "we will have to revive the old Dyak tradition of head hunting and cut off their heads as decorative ornaments for our longhouses."

Teachers Pushed Into Re-applying For Jobs, Claim

LAKEFIELD, Ont. (CP)—Six former teachers who were once employed by the grey-listed public school board here said Tuesday they were pushed into re-applying for their jobs before any work agreement was signed.

They and 19 others quit their jobs last May following a salary dispute which led to the grey-listing of the board by the two federations representing the men and women teachers. Grey-listing is a form of boycott used by federations against school boards.

The teachers were given until March 31 of this year to re-apply for their jobs. They were contained in an agreement reached between the board and the Federation of Women Teachers Associations of Ontario and the Ontario Public School Teachers Federation.

"We were in effect being pushed in our positions in a school in which no legal agreement had been reached between the board and our federations," they said in a letter.

Two of the teachers, Mrs. Irvin Ward and Mrs. Jean Lovett, applied for their former jobs before the deadline was up. Still without their jobs are E. G. Sloan, former principal; Harry Schaefer, Stan Mills, Mary Annie Darling, Mrs. Audrey Read and Miss Bertina Smith.

Miss Beavis said she has accepted a job starting in September in Riverside, Ont., near Windsor, and Mrs. Read will teach near Bowmanville, Ont., 19 miles east of Oshawa.

The former teachers charge that under regulations set out by the Teaching Profession Act which states "a member shall refuse to accept a board of trust relations with federations are unsatisfactory" makes it "clearly improper" the 17 teachers now employed by the board —in defiance of the federations censure — by not complying with the regulations.

Samuel Murphy, of Peterborough, 10 miles south of here, counsel for the board and chairman of the board, said the teachers were not pushed into re-applying for their jobs.

The agreement between the board and the federations had not been officially ratified, but it had been agreed to by both parties," he said.

Educational War Against Cigarette Smoking Started

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal health department fired the first shot in its educational war against cigarette smoking Monday, issuing a pocket-sized reference book on the hazards of smoking to 19,000 Canadian doctors.

The book is a 170-page summary of British, American and Canadian studies linking cigarette smoking with lung cancer and other diseases. A French-language edition now is being prepared.

It is the first official publication to appear as a result of the Canadian Conference on Smoking and Health held by federal and provincial health authorities here last November.

The book, a compact, soft-covered edition, is planned as the keystone of the health department's $400,000, five - year educational program to acquaint the Canadian public with the hazards of cigarette smoking.

Doctors and other professional medical people are getting first look at the book because health department authorities feel that the public turns to them for example and guidance.

WILL PREPARE KIT

The book will be followed in about three weeks by an information kit intended for wide distribution to the public. It will be made available through the provincial health departments.

"Cigarette smoking is a serious hazard to health which requires aggressive corrective action. Since we now know that preventive action is possible and feasible, our emphasis must be placed on prevention, through discouraging the cigarette habit among Canadians."

The reference book begins with Health Minister LaMarsh's statement to the Commons last June in which she announced the educational program.

The program, which is being conducted by the federal health department in co-operation with provincial health authorities, is aimed mainly at young people.

Plane Shakes Engine Loose, Lands Safely

MELBOURNE (AP)—A four-engined Australian airliner lost a propeller and part of one engine moments after taking off from Melbourne Tuesday but landed safely an hour and 41 minutes later after shaking off the damaged engine.

The DC-6B, carrying 59 passengers and a crew of six, headed out over Port Phillip Bay and landed after the hull of the engine fell into the bay.

Parts of the propeller and engine showered suburban areas, severing power lines, crashing onto houses and narrowly missing children playing in a school yard. No casualties were reported.

Firm Gains Wide Reputation Selling Repulsive Products

LONDON (CP)—There's a firm down in Somerset gaining a world-wide reputation for repulsive products that it sells by the tin.

The latest to benefit are Australian possums. Once they were bothered by unfriendly dogs. Now they stride past the snarling brutes with quiet confidence. Says the firm's sales director, E. G. Harrison:

"After a spot of research our backroom boys turned out an aerosol can. If the dog gets a bit menacing the postman just sprays him. The smell should make the animal think twice before biting a hole in the postman's leg."

The firm also produces odorants and deodorants that attract fish to dry flies, prevent mixed litters of pigs fighting each other, make purse-snatchers weep, indelibly dye bullion bandits and deter feather-pinching and cannibalism in poultry.

But dogs are the firm's prime target — the area of their greatest success and their greatest disappointment.

STOPS MOST DOGS

In response to an urgent appeal from a chain - store owner, the firm produced a repellent in a spray pack that, used twice a week on a shop front, stops most canine intruders from doing their normal business. The same repellent is used extensively by gardeners for trees and flower borders and is scenting the humid of urban country with curzoling lamp posts.

But Harrison confesses that even the maniest spray the firm can produce is useless against the really determined dog.

"Once a dog has developed the habit of going to the same tree, nothing can break him of it. The repellent will work only with strange dogs."

New Hope Seen For All-Canada Pension Scheme

Robarts Offers to Join Federal-Quebec Talks

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson confirmed Wednesday that far-reaching negotiations on pensions plans and other matters are under way with Quebec and the other provinces.

Speaking with care in the Commons, apparently because of the ticklish nature of the negotiations, Mr. Pearson said the federal government "is having discussions with the government of Quebec and with other provinces on pension plans and related matters."

"I hope to be able to make a full statement on this matter in a day or two, but pending the completion of these discussions it is very difficult for me to say anything in the House," he added.

This was in reply to Conservative Whip Eric Winkler (PC—Grey-Bruce), who asked about

No Arrests In Raid On Station

MONTREAL (CP) — Police have apparently smashed the plans of militant separatists to establish a clandestine radio station.

The Quebec Provincial Police anti-terrorist squad raided an apartment on Berri Street in the northeast-end Wednesday and seized a quantity of broadcasting equipment.

No arrests were made. The squad had the apartment under surveillance for some time but no one showed up.

"We hoped someone would come along but after watching for a few days no one appeared and we decided to go in," said Chief Inspector Gerard Houle.

The equipment—a transmitter console and modulator — was stolen Nov. 28, 1963 from the French-language station CHEF in Granby, Que., 45 miles east of Montreal.

Some television parts believed stolen in the Montreal area and an array of separatist pamphlets and literature were also seized in the raid.

RECOVER DYNAMITE

A day earlier the squad recovered nearly 500 sticks of dynamite and a large number of detonators that were believed part of a 700-stick haul from a construction camp in the Laurentians last year. This theft was blamed on Le Front de Libration Quebecois, smashed last summer with the arrest and conviction of several persons.

That seizure was made in the attic of a summer cottage near St. Jerome, Que., 35 miles north of Montreal. But again there were no arrests.

The dynamite was stored in hermetically - sealed containers and the detonators wrapped in sleeping bags.

Meanwhile, Inspector Houle disclosed search warrants have been issued for the arrest of two sus-

House Ready To Vote

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — The fight over whether your vote carries more or less weight than the fellow's in the next riding—and by how much—nears the showdown stage in the Commons today.

All issue is a clause in a government bill providing for establishment of 10 independent commissions to handle the job of redistributing federal constituencies.

It says the voter population in any riding must not be 30 per cent more or less than the provincial average. This would cut deeply into rural ridings, many of which now have populations far smaller than most city ridings.

Liberal and NDP members favor the 20 per cent figure. Most of them have most city ridings.

GETS SECOND READING

Wednesday the bill received second reading — approval in principle—with all parties backing the idea of giving the redistribution job to non-political

Major Mineral Fine Is Made Near Timmins

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP) — Texas Gulf Sulphur Company announced today that it has made a major discovery of zinc, copper and silver in the Timmins, Ont. area.

The announcement was made by Claude T. Stephens, president of Texas Gulf Sulphur, at a press conference.

"This is a major discovery," Stephens said. "Preliminary data indicates a reserve of more than 25,000,000 tons of ore."

Stephens said Texas Gulf holds the mineral rights in 70 per cent of Kidd Township. It

Bugle That Sounded Charge For Light Brigade Still Good

LONDON (AP)—Even with a hole in it, the bugle that sounded the charge of the Light Brigade still sounds good.

I know, I tried it.

As an old bugler with an inferior embouchure, I was able to generate a blast that alarmed a half-dozen workers at Sotheby's, the elegant London auctioneers.

Embouchure is a fancy way of describing how a bugler forms his lips to toot a bugle. As that eminent bugler Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong once said:

"Without it you ain't going to wake nobody up."

Nearly 120 years after bugler Billy Brittain set off one of the most tragic charges in military history, the old brass bugle, properly tooted, could rouse a regiment.

With documents proving its authenticity, the bugle will be auctioned April 20.

"There's considerable American interest in the bugle," said a Sotheby's spokesman.

"A group of retired British generals and other officers are talking about raising a fund to see that the bugle stays here."

On the morning of Oct. 25, 1854, there were 607 men in the Light Brigade. One was the bugler, a 20 - year - old Irishman. They were assembled in a valley near the Russian port of Balaclava in the Crimea.

At an officer's order, Britain sounded the charge. With sabres drawn, the Light Brigade charged, smack into 30 Russian field guns.

The guns blazed and, before the day was ended, came close to 400 men of the brigade in what has been described by some historians as the worst blunder in British military history.

The bugler fell, badly wounded.

When he was lifted from the battlefield he begged that his bugle be taken with him.

He said the bugle was caused by a Russian lancer.

The bugler was hurtled to field hospital where he was nursed by a British nurse, a Mrs. Farrell. A letter she wrote goes with the bugle. She said a sergeant of the 17th Lancers "keeps telling him to pluck up and get out and blow another charge, but there never was any hope."

Brittain died of his wounds.

The bugle was given to his family. The family sold it in 1901 to a Mr. Baker. Sotheby's said the seller is too elderly and ill to be interviewed.

HERE CHICKIE, CHICKIE, CHICKIE — Rossville, Georgia, residents turned chicken chasers when a poultry truck overturned and dumped 4,000 chickens onto the town square. But, owner Grady Allen said he'd like to see the ones that got away. Allen said only 2,000 of the freed fowls were recovered.

Canadian Steelmakers Most Productive So They Want to Be World's Best Paid

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's biggest union—the United Steelworkers of America (CLC) (D)—opened a two-day convention today with a veiled demand for the world's top pay for Canadian steelworkers.

William Mahoney, national director of the 100,000 - member union, told the 300 delegates from across the country that Canada's basic steel workers have surpassed United States steelmen in efficiency and productivity.

"Although Canada's steelworkers now are the world's most efficient and productive, they are not the world's most highly paid," he said.

His statement was interpreted as the opening volley in contract negotiations starting in June with the two big basic steel producers—the Steel Company of Canada and Algoma Steel Corporation.

He said Canadians' smelter workers turned out a ton of steel in 8.6 man - hours last year, compared with 9.9 man-hours in the U.S. in 1962, the latest comparable yardstick. At the same time, the wage cost per ton of steel in Canada was $23.04, compared with $31.96 in the U.S. last year.

In his report to the union, Mr. Mahoney dismissed the argument that Canadian workers can never become the world's best paid—even if they deserve it.

He dropped a broad hint that the Steelworkers union would modify wage demands in return for price cuts in basic steel costs.

"If Canadian steelworkers are turning out steel more efficiently, they shouldn't Canadian metal fabricators and Canadian consumers see some of the savings passed on in the form of lower prices?" he asked.

In reply, he contended that a drop in living costs can be as helpful as an increase in income. In addition, lower raw material prices would help eliminate the differential in wages between primary metal and metal fabrication.

His report set the stage for the two-day meeting that will ring hammer out the general policy goals of the union in the next year. The Steelworkers convention is also a warm-up affair for next week's session of the so-called "parliament of labor," the big biennial convention of the Canadian Labor Congress.

Mr. Mahoney took a swipe at the insurance industry for its attack against medical and contributory old-age pensions.

"Openly, arrogantly and with clearly selfish intent, our billion-dollar private insurance industry has decided to clash with the progress at any cost," he charged.

He called for greater political action by organized labor—without specifically relating it to the New Democratic Party, Labor's acknowledged political arm.

"Only direct action by labor can balance the direct action by capital which is so obvious in Canadian political life," he said, pledging support for the next stage more active local political participation of union members.

12 Train Robbers Get Long Terms

CP from AP-Reuters

AYLESBURY — Twelve men today were sentenced to prison for terms up to 30 years for taking part in the £2,600,000 (£7,800,000) great train robbery Aug. 8—the greatest haul of cash loot in modern times.

In handing down the stiff sentences at the end of trials lasting 57 days, Judge Edmund Davies told the men:

"You have been convicted of complicity in a crime that in its enormity is the first of its kind in this country. I propose to do all within my power to ensure it will also be the last of its kind.

"Your outrageous conduct constitutes an intolerable menace to the well-being of society. Let us clear out of the way any romantic notion. This is nothing less than a sordid crime of violence by vast greed.

DESIRES VIOLENCE

"The motive of greed is obvious. As to violence, anybody who has seen that nerve-shattering engine driver can have no doubt to the terrifying effect on law-abiding citizens of a concerted assault by armed robbers."

Seven men were given 30-year sentences, two got 25-year terms, one 24 years, one 20 years and one three years.

APPROVES IDEA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission gave the signal Wednesday to the Communications Satellite Corporation to construct a communications satellite system intended for the United States, Canada and Western Europe. The authorization is only for construction. Further authorization will be needed before the satellite can be placed in orbit and used in experimental or commercial service.

Poll of Civil Servants Latest B and B Development

OTTAWA (CP)—A poll of federal civil servants and a suggestion for a new tribunal to settle certain educational disputes are the latest developments in research and design to go forward on the controversial topic of bilingualism and biculturalism.

The poll is being launched this week by the Civil Service Commission of Canada and features 18 questions on the individual civil servant's own background and his attitudes to various bicultural issues.

The 75,000 civil servants affiliated with the federation will probably be the group most affected by the recommendations of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

The proposal for a tribunal suggested in Quebec City Wednesday by a French-language organization as a means of settling educational conflicts involving cultural groups and provincial governments.

News of the proposal came as the president of the National Women's Liberal Federation—a Montreal mother of eight children — branded Canadians "lazy" in the matter of learning more than one language.

Mrs. J. O. Asselin spoke in both English and French in making the charge at a meeting of the Ottawa Women's Liberal Club.

She said English-speaking Canadians must show that they have "largeness of spirit" at this time in the country's history.

"We must not deny or distort French Canada's aspirations," she said.

The key question in the civil servants poll reads, "should civil servants be required to speak both English and French (A) in all parts of Canada, (B) Ottawa and (C) outside Ottawa in areas where the minority language is spoken by the following percentages of the public served by that office: Up to 20 per cent, 30 per cent, 40 per cent or 50 per cent?"

The poll also asks whether both English and French should be given equal status as official

Jobless Record Best Since '57 As Spring Comes

Improvement in Quebec Sets Pace for Nation

OTTAWA (CP) — Above-average job expansion in Canada cut unemployment to an estimated 458,000 in mid-March, down 11,000 from a month earlier and 80,000 below the jobless level a year earlier, the labor department and bureau of statistics said today in a joint report.

The March unemployment figure represented 4.9 per cent of the labor force compared with 5.4 per cent a month earlier and 8.6 per cent a year ago.

Employment rose by 30,000 between February and March—a period when employment usually shows a slight decline—and compared with a year ago there were 310,000 more persons with jobs—a rise of 3.3 per cent.

The jobs picture in brief, with estimates in thousands:

	Mar.	Feb.	Mar. 1964	1963
Labor force	6,729	6,690	6,512
Employed	6,273	6,223	5,963
Unemployed	458	467	549

The monthly report is based on a survey of 35,000 households across Canada in the week ended March 21. Since figures are based on a sample crosssection of the population, they are estimates and not precise totals.

DOWNTREND CONTINUES

The report indicated a continuation in the basic trend toward lower unemployment. The jobless rate, adjusted to discount seasonal factors, was 4.6 per cent of the labor force—the lowest since 1957 — compared with 4.7 per cent in February and 5.8 per cent in March last year.

The 93,000 cut in jobless totals from a year earlier was reflected in all regions of Canada, and the report said that almost all of the decrease was among men.

Of the 458,000 unemployed, some 277,000 had been unemployed for three months or less, 121,000 had been jobless from four to six months, and 58,000 for seven months or more.

The report said that with most previous years employment has decreased slightly between February and March, the rise there was "a strong improvement" in non-farm employment, which rose by 52,000 in the month while farm employment declined by 13,000.

AGRICULTURE UP

Over the 12 months there was a 309,000 gain in employment outside agriculture, with about two-thirds of the rise coming in manufacturing and service industries. Farm employment was 54,000 down from a year earlier.

The March employment total included 4,415,000 men, down 1.3 per cent from a year earlier.

This gain compares with an increase in annual rate of increase of 1.4 per cent during the last five years. The number of women with jobs rose by 160,000 over the year to 1,858,000, a gain of 9.5 per cent.

Employment was higher than a year ago in all regions, with gains ranging from 2.6 per cent in the Prairies to 7.1 per cent in Quebec. There were increases of 2.4 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, 2.5 per cent in Ontario and 3.4 per cent in British Columbia.

Says Pres. Gave Him 600 Shares

TORONTO (CP) — G. Kelly McLean maintained once again Wednesday that Ralph K. Farris, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company, personally handed him 600 NONG shares and directed their delivery to four officials of Ontario municipalities.

The former assistant to Farris was testifying for the second time at the company presidents trial on two counts of perjury.

It has been charged that the 53-year-old Vancouver financier swore falsely before Ontario government inquiries when he said he was unaware of the disposition of 14,000 NONG shares handled by Continental Investment Corporation of Vancouver and that he did not direct the distribution of 600 shares among municipal officials.

Defence counsel Joseph Sedgewick questioned Mr. McLean about a Comwebb official's testimony that the 600 shares in question were mailed to Mr. McLean at NONG's office in Toronto.

The witness identified a letter as being one he sent Comwebb as acknowledgment of the receipt of 600 NONG shares.

"Isn't it clear she shares were addressed to you and you must have got them because you acknowledged them?" Mr. Sedgwick asked.

CAME FROM FARRIS

"I got them from Mr. Farris," Mr. McLean replied.

He also repeated his earlier testimony that there was attached to the packet of shares a list of four persons who were to receive 150 each. They were Wanda Miller, former mayor of Haileybury; Ernest Cates, former mayor of Bracebridge; William Moore, former solicitor for Orillia, and Wilbur Champ, former mayor of Orillia.

(All four held those positions when the municipal municipalities granted gas distribution franchises to NONG.)

Mr. McLean insisted on the truth of his earlier contention that in 1957 he sold 300 shares to Mr. Moore—at a meeting in Mr. McLean's aunt's home in Barrie—and that 150 were to go to Mayor Cramp.

Mr. Moore denied at the trial that he ever agreed with Barrie to collect shares. He maintained that he received only 150 shares, for which were to go to his law partner.

Mr. Cramp told the court he got 150, but he gave them Vancouver.

"I know what happened," Mr. McLean maintained, "and why I say happened, happened."

WAS UNCO-OPERATIVE

Under cross-examination by Mr. Sedgwick, the witness admitted being unco-operative with the RCMP when they began inquiries in 1963 in connection with the disposition of NONG shares.

"I didn't want to become involved—I'd just as soon have stayed right out of it and not be here at all," he said.

"We can share your feelings," Mr. Justice Dalton Wells replied. The judge has presided over the Supreme Court jury trial—expected to run into next week—since April 7.

Mr. McLean pointed out he was not under oath when Mr. Sedgwick said, he told RCMP investigators he never received the 600 shares.

"You consider it all right to tell lies when you're not under oath," Mr. Sedgwick asked.

Brazen Stowaways Hobnob With Captain for 3½ Weeks

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) For 3½ weeks Dutch artist Fritz Meyer and his wife hobnobbed with the captain of the Dutch liner Willem Ruys. Then the skipper found out they were stowaways.

"Just imagine," capt. Herman Van Den Heuvel told reporters. "These people introduced themselves to me at a cocktail party and I thought they were a fine couple. During the voyage I saw them at several parties. I even had a bottle of wine with them."

The Meyers were hoping to return to Australia. They had come here as immigrants in 1956 but had gone back to Holland two years later.

The shipping line wants full payment—$810—or else it will return them to Rotterdam.

City Merchants Oppose Proposal From Chamber

Belleville Chamber of Commerce transportation committee drew fire last night from the merchants, with a proposal of railroad dayliners that might carry Belleville shoppers to Toronto for shopping hours. The proposed dayliners were to be for the benefit of business men, transportation committee chairman Ken Cook explained later, but some merchants still thought shoppers might use them.

The proposal was reported during last night's general meeting of the Chamber, in the Legion Hall. It was, Chamber president J. C. Houston reported in his opening remarks, the first general meeting held by the Belleville Chamber other than annual meetings. There more such meetings have been proposed for this year. It was also one of the fastest-moving meetings in Belleville history — nine committee reports were delivered within an hour.

Fifth committee chairman to report, Mr. Keith said his committee plans to operate an airfield for the city, to ask for a highway link between Highway 401 and Highway 2 at the east end of the city, and to ask about the possibility of a dayliner to leave Belleville for Toronto each morning, and return in the evening. The dayliner proposal drew an objection from liaison committee chairman I. Shulman, and from several other members.

STAFF IS CUT

Reporting for the finance committee, F. Deacon said that a staff cut and a move to cheaper quarters during June would help the Chamber save money. Income last year had been about $14,000," he said, "and the Chamber went $880 to the red. The Chamber paid no income from Industrial Commission work this year, he said, and even with a $2,000 grant from the city income is only $12,700. With decreased expenses, however, and with increased membership and income from the project at the Belleville Fair, the Chamber may make enough this year to pay off last year's debts."

The civic affairs committee had only one firm recommendation, reported chairman J. Argatoff, that the old police station in Market Square be preserved after the move of the police department for new quarters. Tentative proposals included river- and harbor improvements, an accelerated program for development of Zwicks Island and the possibility of a second arena for the use of the Belleville Minor Hockey Association.

The public relations, tourist and convention committee is particularly interested in bringing conventions to Belleville, reported chairman R. Keel. The committee proposes to provide entertainment for the wives of convention delegates, he added.

During the Ontario Building Officials convention in Belleville this year, he said, the Chamber would sponsor tours of the Corby distillery and of the Avon Jewelery plant by the ladies and a hat show at the Yacht Club. Other projects now being developed included the Belleville Information booth and a map of the city and a shops and service guide.

WILL EXHIBIT AT FAIR

Reporting for the industrial promotion committee, D. Boyd told of plans to rent the Manufacturers' Building at the Belleville Fair this year, and to ask local industries to submit space in the building to show their products.

Program and membership chairman G. Hume spoke of a campaign, begun 10 days ago, to bring 50 new members into the Chamber for this year.

Plans for the development of a consumer protection bureau, which would protect Belleville citizens from "undesirable firms" selling "misrepresentative goods" were given by business information committee chairman D. J. Barrett. The committee has received 400 complaints last year, Mr. Barrett said, and acted on 152 of them. Belleville Chamber will be asked to fill out a "public complaint form," which was forwarded to the offending business, with a covering letter from the Chamber. If no action resulted, he said, the Chamber was willing to follow up with legal action in concert with persons lodging the complaint.

Hopes Raised For Settling Doctors' Strike

CP from AP-Reuters

BRUSSELS—Hopes of conciliation in the Belgian doctors' strike were raised today, 16th day of the strike.

Behind the hopes was the statement Wednesday by Social Affairs Minister Edmond Leburton who told reporters the government would consider a suspension of the strike movement a goodwill gesture that could lead to negotiations.

Previously, Premier Theo Lefevre had insisted that only the end of the strike could bring about new discussions on reforming Belgium's controversial health insurance system.

The doctors have been conciliatory. A spokesman told reporters the doctors considered that the talks, which broke down early Sunday, were only suspended.

Four Speakers Present Ideas At Horticultural Meeting

An enthusiastic audience attended the regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Horticultural Society, when three local "specialists" in various fields of horticulture gave a highly instructive talk that had its roots in personal experience.

The panel, moderated by Mr. R. Phillips, head of the science department in Moira Secondary School, was composed of Mr. R. Norris, also of Moira S.S., who spoke on outdoor gardening; Mr. Ken Wood of the Research Branch of the Dominion Entomological Laboratory; Mrs. George Balser, greenskeeper at the Bay of Quinte Golf and Country Club, and Mr. H. Hodgson of the staff of O.S.D.

WATER GARDENING

In order of their speaking appearance, Mr. Norris first introduced the audience to the pleasures of water gardening. A pool may form a central or focal point of a garden. A cascades would idle to your area, and a fountain, patio or sitting-out area. It may have a cooling effect on the area in hot weather. He demanded dimensions' stressed the need for a depth of from 24 to 30 inches—a safety measure for the fish. The pool may be any size that finances permit. He gave a caution about the fish. The pool may be any size that finances permit. He gave a caution about many magazines provide detailed plans, ranging from the "poverty" to the "millionaire." Depth is essential, however, since the lilies will need relatively deep water. Water Gardens of Ft. Stanley, was the firm recommended as the suppliers of plants for water gardens, while the fish may be procured at the local stores. It was interesting to see a number of the audience that the fish can be left in the pool all winter covered over the same as the lilies. A plastic drain pipe leading from just below the pool's rim will provide a means for keeping Each summer, in August, the yards where small children gather careful supervision would be necessary. The pool must be in full sun.

HOUSE PLANTS

On the subject of house plants, Mr. Norris first had advise on the errors most frequently made. For the average house, plants are often also advocated type since they discourage water loss. Clay pots are suitable in greenhouses conservatories or in planters, hence. Plants should not be planted in jardinieres or plants without being in pots of their own for the sake of prime importance, no plant can survive any length of time in the plants and borders of the modern home. If such devices are part of the scheme of home decor, rotation of plants was strongly recommended. Light is an absolute necessity. Of equal importance is the soil and here the recommendation was to buy prepared soil. Since the roots of a house plant are confined, the soil should be of the proper texture and fertility. Prepared soils provide three. Southern exposures are bright ones for winter, but in summer, so plant can stand it inside the glass.

LAWNS ARE STARVED

Most lawns are starved to death was the message of Mr. Balazs. His suggestion that the end of October is the time to think of a good lawn for the next season was a challenging one. Early spring care includes an early mowing to remove the old dead growth. When new growth commences a good feeding with a 7-7-7 fertilizer should be applied at the rated-over lawn at the rate of 15 lbs. to 1,000 square feet. This feeding is followed at the end of June with one at the rate or 10 lbs. to 1,000 square feet and a third in the same proportion in September. White

Judge Anderson Presides in Union Dispute

TORONTO (CP) — A conciliation board opened hearings Wednesday into a contract dispute between Toronto's three daily newspapers and the International Typographical Union (CLC).

Company and union representatives met for six hours Wednesday during the day and late into the evening with Board Chairman Judge J. C. Anderson of Belleville. The hearings were to resume today.

Spokesmen for the newspapers—The Telegram, The Star and The Globe and Mail—and the union were not available for comment Wednesday.

Centre of the dispute is the question of union demands to extend the practice of setting bogus type and to give the union jurisdiction over the computers when they perform work done now by printers.

The setting of bogus type is the practice under which printers are paid to reproduce type from mats supplied by another newspaper or some other source.

The union wants the system, originally designed to preserve jobs from technological advances, expanded to cover other sources of mat material. Mats are paper-mache moulds of type or illustrative material.

The new computers would eliminate the need for operators to control over linotype machines, except for a monitor. The union basically wants jurisdiction over the computers when they perform composing-room work. The position is opposed by the newspapers.

'Exasperated', Charged With Beating Son

A widower charged with assault after strapping his seven-year-old son, today was placed on suspended sentence for a year by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

"The man is working under great difficulties," said the magistrate. "I am not upholding him but the boy suffered no great injury."

The charge was laid against John Franklin Maracle of Shannonville after his son, John Junior, had received the strapping April 8.

OPP Constable Robert Grieve testified Mr. Maracle said the boy had been giving difficulty for some time, in school attendance and in removing tools and foodstuffs from their home. Mr. Maracle's wife died three years ago and three other children had been placed with relatives.

The day of the incident Mr. Maracle returned from work to find the boy had not been to school and articles were missing from the home. When his son denied taking them he threw him a strapping with a small belt." Examined later by a doctor in Belleville the boy was found bruised over his body.

Children's Aid Society social worker Geoffrey McDermand said there had been no previous incidents at the Maracle home. that the family had been steadily employed for a considerable number of years with the CNR and there was no record of willful behavior.

Magistrate Wills said the boy obviously had exasperated his father.

"I realize you have difficulties," he told the accused. "You also realize when you're dealing with children you've got to hold your temper."

WOULD BLOCK SALE

The civil complaint claimed that the proposed acquisition would greatly restrain competition in the manufacture and sale of urethane chemicals and foam.

EARNINGS SOAR

Kinsmen Club Party Enjoyed By Large Crowd

The Kinsmen Club held their annual dinner for welfare projects such as operating the swimming pool and the eye clinic at the Columbus Hall on Wednesday evening with a large turnout. Mac White, was master of ceremonies for the dinner and a few words were given by Frank Walker, president, Ronald Belanger, Deputy Governor of the district, Lee Grills and Paul Russell speaking for Robert Temple, who was unable to be present.

The Cozy Grill catered for the dinner and it was delicious. It started with a shrimp cocktail, a steak and all the trimmings including a fine Greek wine. The members appreciated the spread and gave their praise to Louis Tehilas who was in charge.

At the conclusion of the dinner the decks were cleared and those present enjoyed a few games and a social evening. This affair is one of the best "Stag" events of the year and it gives the club a splendid amount of money to carry on their projects throughout the year.

City Hall Conciliation Talks Held

Contract negotiations between the city of Belleville and the Canadian Union of Public Employees Local 140 continued this morning at city hall.

Sitting in on this morning's meeting was Norman Soady, conciliation officer with the Ontario Department of Labor. Discussions were between local union officials and the city council finance and personnel committee.

At the adjournment of discussions just before noon today, Floyd Milton, president of the union local representing city hall employees said results of the meeting would be placed before union members at a meeting late this afternoon.

Alert Officer Brings Youth Into Court

An alert OPP constable who unexpectedly solved a hit-and-run accident on the way to work today lodged a Belleville youth into court on five traffic charges.

The result has cost 19-year-old Donald Richard Stapley a total of 11 days in jail and $150 in fines.

OPP constable Jack Chase said he investigated a hit-run accident at Bayside March 27 in which Mrs. Kathleen Radbourne, of Trenton, unsuccessfully pursued an unknown automobile as far as Belleville after it struck her car. The only clue was some beige paint scrapings on the Radbourne vehicle.

The following day, constable Chase told Magistrate T. Y. Wills this morning, he was reporting for duty when he spotted a damaged beige-colored automobile on Stanley Street. He signalled the driver, who identified himself as Stapley and confessed he had been in to an accident the night before.

"I asked him where and he said Bayside," the constable recalled.

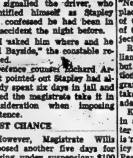
Defence counsel Richard Arnott pointed out Stapley had already spent six days in jail and asked the magistrate take it in consideration when imposing sentence.

LAST CHANCE

However, Magistrate Wills imposed another five days for driving under suspension; $100 for leaving the accident and $50 for having no car insurance.

"This is your last chance," the magistrate bluntly told Stapley.

"Your record shows . . . no regard for the public. You intend to drive a car if, and when, you see fit and to blazes with the law — that's just about it."



"If you are caught again with a flagrant, deliberate violation of the law like this you are going to jail again — for a substantial period."

He gave Stapley a month to pay his fines and advised him: "You can borrow the money or sell your car or something like that. There's no use speaking to me any more."

press reports that Ottawa has offered Quebec a package deal on cost-sharing programs.

Earlier, Paul Martineau (PC Montmorency - Two Mountains) asked whether it is true that secret negotiations are under way, and Mr. Pearson said: "Negotiations are always taking place between the government of Quebec and the government of Canada on a variety of subjects."

Reports circulating the Parliament buildings varied, widely but spoke of a major renegotiation of basic cost-sharing programs, federal - provincial tax talks, and the Quebec and Canada Pension Plans.

Key man in the negotiations in addition to the prime minister and members of his cabinet is reported to be Tom Kent, policy co-ordination adviser to Mr. Pearson.

Premier Roberts confirmed in the Ontario legislature that the negotiations have involved him to the extent of at least one telephone conversation with Mr. Pearson.

Mr. Pearson called him Tuesday, Mr. Roberts said, to say negotiations were under way with Quebec and Ottawa plans. Mr. Roberts said he assured Ottawa he was willing to meet the Quebec government and try to devise a pension plan which would be suitable for all of Canada.

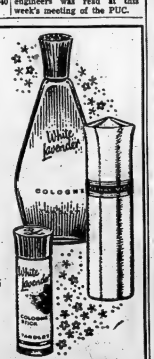
Senior Citizens Plan Bus Tour At Meeting

TRENTON — Tuesday night the members of the Trenton Senior Citizens' Club met in the Recreation hall on Ontario Street to plan the chartered bus trip to Upper Canada Village on June 24. The seniors intend to "see all the sights along the way," to quote one member.

A short business session was conducted by the president, Mrs. Emma Panter and the 24 members present enjoyed a game of euchre, with prizes going to Mrs. A. Potts, Mrs. L. Phillips, Mrs. A. Coon and A. E. Parker.

The meeting was brought to a close by the singing of "Till We Meet Again," after a light lunch was served.

LOOK FOR WATER



While the water survey taken over the past year by Ontario Water Resources Commission in the Trenton area doesn't indicate an immediate shortage of water, the members of the Trenton Public Utilities Commission have been advised by the OWRC to "look around for further wells" in the well-area of Murray township.

A letter, outlining preliminary findings of the OWRC engineers was read at this week's meeting of the PUC.

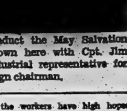
Salvation Army Canvass Will Open in May

TRENTON — Plans were laid for the May Salvation Army Red Shield canvass for funds in the Trenton area at yesterday's annual Red Shield dinner in the Gilmour Hotel, and E. M. Parker Jr. was named chairman for the campaign.

Assisting Mr. Parker will be Howard Hallick, James Uttley, Eric Smith, "Moe" Jeffrey, Thomas Hetherington, Doris Webb, all from Trenton and all from special groups or with special offices for the drive.



Reeve Douglas McMaster of Murray township will take on the rural division of the campaign; Mrs. Lois Balnard will be the Glen Miller captain; H. J. Madill will organize the May 4 blitz in Frankford; Mrs. Margaret Irving will work in Middleton Park, and J. Simpson and H. McMullen will conduct the campaign in Brighton.

A one-night blitz is planned for May 6 in Trenton, Frankford and Brighton. The Batawa representative for the drive has yet to be appointed. Captain James Johnson of the local corps will act as secretary.

This year, the objective for the Trenton area is $5,000 and the workers have high hopes of repeating last year's feat of "going over the top." Last year, the objective was $4,300 and $5,021 was realized.

Yesterday, Col. A. P. Simester of Belleville was the guest speaker at the dinner. Col. Simester commented on the high calibre of the workers and the 300 canvassers they represent, and said that he felt sure the drive would be a resounding success.

The False Report

Monday of this week brought a report that Nikita Khrushchev was dead.

This proved false.

In the days of Stalin, a report of his death would have been received with elation, the news that the report was false with disappointment.

Some people may have reacted in similar fashion to the report about Khrushchev and its correction. But not all.

In fact, here in the editorial office of The Ontario Intelligencer, one colleague said "Thank God!" when it was known that Khrushchev was still alive and well.

We rather fancy that sentiment was echoed in foreign offices and embassies throughout the Western world.

This does not mean that the West regards Khrushchev as a friend.

On the contrary, he is an implacable enemy and a clever, powerful one.

But he is also a man who have given plain evidence of sharing with us in the West one all-important conviction—that the human race has achieved much, is capable of achieving more and that its survival ought to be the primary objective of life.

Khrushchev is ruthless, but he is not a madman. He has given no indication of megalomania. Even his sudden fits of rage have an earthy quality which reminds us of our neighbors, our friends or of ourselves when we are provoked.

After some of the "great men" in recent history, either Hitler and Mussolini and Stalin, Khrushchev comes as a relief. Facing him is like meeting a man with a club in a public square in daylight, after a nightmare spent groping in a dark alley playing blind-man's-buff with a maniac wielding a knife. By contrast, the situation is almost comfortable.

It may well be that when Khrushchev dies, or is ousted from power, his successor will also be what Khrushchev himself would call a reasonable man—a man bent on having his own way if he can get it without paying too high a price, but a man not prepared to rush smiling to Gotterdammerung, to bring the world to a flaming end if he cannot rule it. It may be, we say, that Khrushchev's successor will be a man of his own type, but we cannot be sure.

And so amongst his acknowledged and unswerving foes Khrushchev has many who pray for his survival and his retention of power, who would be shocked by his death in much the same way in which he must have been shocked by the death of President Kennedy. Khrushchev was fortunate in that Kennedy's mantle fell on another man of the same type. It is to be hoped that he has the Russian equivalent of President Johnson groomed and waiting in the wings.

Awards for Acting?

Could it be that the Academy Awards this year were actually given for acting ability?

This possibility arises as the result of those chosen to receive Oscars this year.

Sidney Poitier is a Negro and, in a predominantly white society, no Negro can hope to be considered the ideal man. To say this is not to exhibit racial prejudice but merely to recognize a fact—beauty lies in the eye of the beholder and the beholder almost invariably clings to his own kind.

As Patricia Neal, while those who saw "Hud" may find their memories quarrelling with the current description of her as the "slovenly" housekeeper, she was far from meeting the qualifications of a glamor girl.

Movies today are a mixed crop. There are some which are magnificent and many more, alas, which are deplorable. The easing or lifting of censorship has made possible both serious films dealing with controversial subjects and a rash of sensational pictures appealing to the lowest emotions.

The net result is on the profit side. A little leaven, today as thousands of years ago, leaveneth a whole lump.

Baring the Question

One of Anne Landers' recent correspondents writes to tell of a mixed pyjama party, attended by a number of her sister's at college. She comments, apparently in amazement, that both boys and girls at these parties actually wear pyjamas.

Would she be happier if they didn't?

The only part of the so-called national wealth that actually enters into the collective possessions of modern peoples is their national debt.—Karl Marx.

One Doesn't Have to Speak French to Be Bilingual

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — This business of Bilingualism and Biculturalism is not all political blood, sweat and tears.

It is not all serious. It is Quebec and on Parliament Hill, one of the saving graces is that at least some people could be retaining something of their sense of humor.

Now nothing can be quite so serious, or nobody take himself so seriously as one of the Quebec MPs holding forth on the rights and privileges of French Canada and English Canada's supposed indifference to them.

This is hard, fundamental stuff, and in the cloud of political dust that swirls around it, just about the last place to look for any glint of humor to come shining through.

But it can happen . . . and that it does just might be interpreted, happily, as a hint that it is not really all that serious as to be threatening the de-confederation of the nation.

It happened on the other day when Real Caouette's wildly nationalistic and almost-Separatist little band of Quebec Creditistes presented an amendment to a bill before the Commons.

DORRA

Oshawa's mild - mannered Mike Starr, Conservative M P for Dorra, Ontario, heard the matter, and just about everybody's friend, said that maybe it would be a good idea if the text of the amendment in English, too, so that he and other "Bilingual" Members could more exactly understand it.

Bilingual, that is, like several other Parliamentarians, but not necessarily in French.

"When are you going to learn the Ukrainian language?" asked the Minister Without Portfolio, Yvon Dupuis, called across the floor of the Commons.

"Already have," beamed Ukrainian-born Mike Starr, "learned it at my mother's knee."

"French, I mean," grinned Yvon Dupuis.

"Soon as you learn Ukrainian," shot back Mike Starr amiably.

"Ne zdorovia," laughed Yvon Dupuis back in Ukrainian.

"A votre sante," chuckled Mike Starr, which as you'll readily know, is not bilingual in French for "Ne zdorovia," which is Ukrainian for "Cheers" or "Here's looking at you."

Small thing, you say.

Look at it this way . . . Mike Starr, Ukrainian-born, made his point . . . there are more ways of being bilingual than speaking French as the "Other" language.

ONE-WAY BILINGUALISM

Citizenship and Immigration Rapp, Conservative MP for the Saskatoon-area constituency of Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale, underlines the point that there are considerably more than Ukrainian - or French - Canadians in this country, has tried a bit of German and Russian in the Commons.

(The '61 census list English Canadians as 57.23 per cent, 30 per cent of the population; French-Canadians as 30.4 per cent; other Europeans 22.6; ethnics, point seven); Indians and Eskimos, 2.5 percent.)

Just as a matter of fact and casually, Lloyd Francis, Liberal MP for Carleton, has been pleading for "equal rights" for English-Canadians.

The sharp issue of bilingualism cuts close to the political bone for Lloyd Francis, whose constituency encompasses a large section of West End Ottawa, is populated mostly by Federal Civil Servants, all but a few a 1,900 of them English-speaking. They have been getting a little nervous about what they regard as favoritism to French-Canadians whom, many of them are learning, are, in fact, going to be taking over more than their proportional share of the Federal payroll in the new era of bilingualism.

Lloyd Francis is campaigning to "make Bilingualism truly bilingual," as he puts it. And this is a little spot, especially for the Quebec MPs so loudly clamoring for equal rights.

For right now, mildly but stubbornly, protests Lloyd Francis, Bilingualism is actually more unilingual. In the National Capital, a bilingual Civil Servant is a French-Canadian who speaks English and can repeat MOT, an English-Canadian speaking French.

Odd, but true.

International Treaties Are Worthless

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: Agreements of the treaties between independent nations are as meaningless as cheques written on non-existent bank accounts; there is not a nation in the world that would not denounce and repudiate any treaty it had signed if it felt that changed conditions threatened its welfare under the terms of the agreement.

An important man writes his memoirs in order to enhance his posthumous fame — and yet, in nine cases out of ten, such publication simply diminishes his stature, for the memoirs of important men reveal their petty side as much as they are hardly aware of.

Those most addicted to the phrase, "Let's be honest," are always confronting us with platitudes that aren't worth facing.

A woman can forgive a man for doing the wrong thing more easily than she can forgive him for attempting the right thing at the wrong time; for her sense of justice is less rigid than a man's but her sense of appropriateness and timing is much more highly developed.

Almost every bridge player thinks he plays at least a level better than he really does — and it is this very delusion that prevents him from ever actually playing as well as he thinks he does.

The movie that should be engraved over the entrance to every university and other institution of higher learning is the one proposed by Whitehead for scientists and all other philosophers: "Seek simplicity, and distrust it."

War is simply an extension of politics — and it is folly to believe that it will ever be eradicated from society, as long as political causes to be a sovereign entity and become subordinated to moral authority.

(Those, by the way, who insist that war is in man's "tendency" in the human animal should ponder the words of Fairfield Osborn in the book "Plundered Planet," where he says: "Warfare as practised by man has no parallel in history within the more highly developed animal populations of this earth there is no other war than there ever been similar destruction within a species itself.")

The whole idea of truth punishment is that only those who profit by it learn are capable of profiting from it; for the undeservable punishment only resents more and augments resentment, more desire to return the injury in kind.

The great weakness of our times is not political, or social, or ideological, but technological, that for the first time in history it is now possible to provide a more abundant life for the many without taking away from the few, to augment rather than transfer wealth.

The opening of the new Bay of Quinte High School next fall will be a momentous anniversary in the educational history of this city. The opening of a new high school in any community is an event of profound significance for many reasons. Not only is such a new school an indication of the physical growth of the community which it serves, it is also a reminder of the invaluable service which good schools to their communities in particular and to the county as a whole. The opening of the new high school should bring to all concerned a sense of pride and achievement in the completion of a vital and valuable work.

In the past the Belleville Collegiate has had an outstanding academic record among high schools in the province; in recent years this record has been shared to some. Credit for this achievement must be shared by the principal, the staff of the Collegiate, members of the Collegiate Board and by a hiring of capable teachers, and the students themselves.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have heard that sitting under a floorscent lamp can cause loss of hair. I have been studying under such a lamp and my hair seems to become thinner. Recently I was told about a wood who became completely bald from studying under a fluorescent lamp. — F. Y.

I know of absolutely no evidence of any such thing; if it were true, the powerful rays of the sun would be a thousand times stronger. (And studying would make you bald, either.) I'd want more than somebody's say-so before believing the story and various household chores bring a dull pain.

I smoke about a pack of cigarettes a day and drink lots of coffee. I am 23 and have two children. I have never consulted a doctor about this. Can you give me some hints. — Mrs. E. F.

After all these years, I'm not about to start trying to diagnose aches and pains by mail.

Nevertheless, your letter gives me an idea that may do you — and others — some good.

Quite a few people, I know, will go around for months, just as you have, with their chests or other parts of their bodies in pain. They won't go to a doctor until they get so sick they can't help it.

There are other people who run to the doctor every time they have a hangnail.

Neither is the smart way. Ideally, we'd be better off if people had a check-up doctor twice a year, but many won't go it.

So let's get back to you, Mrs. E. F., instead of hurting — and worrying — consult your doctor and give him a chance to correct the trouble. It may be just something like intercostal neuritis, which isn't serious.

The important thing is to find out. If it isn't serious, it still deserves correction. If it is the beginning of something more dangerous, than now is the time to tackle it.

But don't keep putting it off.

Besides, going to the doctor when something of this sort crops up is a fair to middling substitute for regular checkups.

Dear Dr. Molner: We were reading about trichinosis and wondered if leaving pork in the refrigerator for any length of time wouldn't make the germ grow. — Mrs. A. C.

No, because trichinosis isn't caused by a germ. It is a very tiny worm which, if present in pork is in encysted form. That is, it is dormant, curled up in a kind of cocoon.

When eaten, the shells are dissolved by the digestive juices. The worms then begin to grow to full size, and produce thousands of new larvae which work their way through the blood vessels and tissues of the body. The resulting pieces (often in the muscles) then go on in turn become encysted. On the other hand have a trail of toxic materials which is the dangerous stage of the disease, although sometimes this will create virtually permanent irritation.

Can Trade in Old Suits

Waterloo Times

The trade-in plan, which has long been in use for the purchase of durable goods, has now been extended to men's wearing apparel and whether such a notice will snowball into other categories is a question.

Alexander's chain of New York area department stores, in an effort to step up boot sales, decided on the new wrinkle in selling men's suits. The response was terrific and the scheme is to be extended to all of the chain's stores.

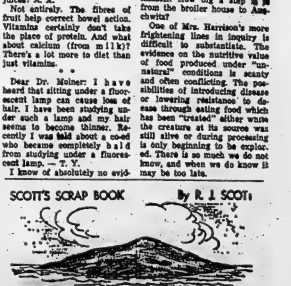
No longer will the man of the house have to throw his old, worn-out suit into discard. The chain store has set a price tag of $7 on it, regardless of condition, when a new suit is purchased.

Men welcomed the opportunity, apparently, of being able to make the down payment just as has been done over the years in the purchase of a new automobile, electrical appliances and other durable goods, when they went into the market for few wearing apparel namely suits or a coat.

Women can sit silently by and watch the male being able to cash in on obsolete and worn out clothes and sneering when they will be able to use their wardrobes of coats, dresses and shoes in first payment on more up-to-date styles.

Competition is keen in the clothing industry, especially in the metropolitan areas, and any plan to boost sales is given a trial. In the case of Alexander's, the approach for the present, through the extension of the trade-in pencils, has been a success.

Is Our Food Poor Quality?



Manchester Guardian Weekly

Are modern intensive methods of food production cruel to living creatures? Is human food produced by such methods lacking in nutritive value, or even positively dangerous to human life? Are we justified in subsidizing, as a social measure, the production of food which may be of inferior quality?

These are the three main questions raised by Ruth Harrison in a book Animal Machines which Mr. Harrison has appeared her subject as a simple inquirer, without preknowledge, who has in her investigations met with evasion after evasion . . . and sometimes with distortion of fact which I was supposed to be swallowing." This must excuse some obvious gaps and one or two misconceptions in her book. Nevertheless she has produced a study which is likely to make an even greater impression than Rachael Carson's Silent Spring.

In her journeyings through the dark corridors of broiler houses, the laying battery, the intensive veal house, and the slaughterhouse, Miss Harrison is distressing introduction to slaughter methods in the poultry packing station. Mrs. Harrison has seen and reported on the extreme cases in the typical. This does not invalidate her plea for more effective and up-to-date legislation to ensure that no creature is subjected to unnecessary suffering either during its lifetime or at the moment of its death. It is shocking to learn that poultry, bung up by the legs and head downwards, do not have to be stunned before having their throats cut, that fish are gutted while still alive, that man's ingenuity has not devised a stunner which will operate with sufficient speed in the slaughterhouse throughout. Mrs. Harrison does well to labor the point that the search for increased profit is inadequate to measure a moral problem, and to expose the cruel contemporaries which come from interested ignorance. Settlement of vested interest are concerned with cruel practices which pay handsome dividends. The fact is that an increasing contempt for many forms of life may be leading to a callous disregard of life at large, to a contempt for man himself. How big a step is it from the broiler house to Auschwitz?

One of Mrs. Harrison's more frightening lines of inquiry is difficult to substantiate. The evidence on the nutritive value of food produced under "unnatural" conditions is scanty and often conflicting. The possibilities of introduced disease or lowering resistance to disease through eating food which has been produced under what the creature at its source was still alive or during processing is only beginning to be explored. There is so much we do not know, and when we do know it may be too late.

THE GEORGE BLEECKER HOUSE
Dundas Street East, opposite Hospital

Our Architectural Heritage

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

Few people who admire the fine white frame house across from the hospital at 260 Dundas St. are aware of its historical associations. It is the homestead of George Bleecker, who with his brother Tobias, was the first owner of all the land from the bay shore to Station St. and from Bleecker Ave. to Macdonald Ave.

George and Tobias were the sons of Solomon Bleecker, a refugee Loyalist. The brothers bought their 300 acre farm in 1822 and split it down the middle. Tobias taking the western half and George the eastern half. Two years later George built a tiny one-and-one-half storey farmhouse on his gable end toward the Dundas Road. In the late 1840's when his income and family had increased, George added two rooms facing the highway to the front of his house.

Although Georgian architecture was out of style in 1824, farmers, who like George Bleecker, were forced to be their own carpenters, uncon sciously built simplified Georgian dwellings. They had no talent or money for complicated joinery, so they copied what they remembered of their childhood homes.

The 1824 section of the Bleecker farmhouse had flat sheets from 2 to 6 inches wide for chair rails and baseboards. One surviving newel post is a square piece of wood chamfered and tapered by hand. The house included the usual stone-walled cellar underneath and a sleeping loft above.

When he was ready to enlarge his home by building two large reception rooms at the front, George Bleecker chose a curious mixture of three styles.

He was somewhat imitative enough to stick to the rectangular gable-ended central hall plan of his Georgian forebears.

But he revealed his American origins and his British sympathies by including American inspired Classical Revival pillars and British Regency windows in his new building.

The new United States had been erecting massive Greek and Roman Temples for some time before Canadians began copying them in the 1840's.

In the Bleecker house the Classical columns shrink back to become eight slightly rounded pilasters spaced evenly across the front of the house. The wide double front door with its rectangular transom is the Classical taste, but the big French windows are of Regency inspiration.

The original verandah was probably a Regency awning-roofed one, running around three sides of the house. The whole facade is a pleasing and harmonious reduction of the Classical temple form to the requirements of domestic architecture.

George Bleecker, like his fellow pioneers, built and improved his house for generations to live in and enjoy. For 140 years it has served its purpose with charm and grace.

But, this spring the old house will be sacrificed to 20th century progress. It will be demolished to make way for a modern apartment building.

More Accurate Tax Returns Are Received

OTTAWA — Many more Canadian taxpayers are filling out their income tax forms accurately this year than last, according to the latest figure from the Department of National Revenue's taxation data centre here.

This conclusion emerges clearly from an analysis of the T1 Short Returns processed by the centre's electronic computer to date, the majority of which call for refund payments to be made to taxpayers.

As of March 29, 1963, 135,435 forms of taxpayers entitled to refunds had to be changed, or 13.7% of the total. As of March 31, 1964, the number of forms requiring correction had dropped to 59,654, or 6.5% of the total. Expressed another way, in 1963, 970,212 or 78% of returns involving refunds did not require changing as of March 29, while this year the number of correctly filed returns involving refunds has risen to 790,213 or 86% of the total.

Tax computations by the centre's electronic division are speedier and more efficient than former laborious and time-consuming manual systems. However, electronic computation requires a high degree of accuracy to achieve the desired results and the Department this year, in its public service promotion, has in addition to encouraging early filing, given special assistance for accuracy in the form of special pamphlets and increased counselling services at the counters of local and regional taxation offices.

The two sought were identified as Andre Wattier, 23, and Robert Rodon, 20.

Most of the stolen arms have been recovered.

GETS 20 YEARS

HAVANA (AP)—Frank Carl Emmick, a former president of Havana's American club, was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment Wednesday on charges of being in the service of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, Swiss embassy sources reported. Emmick, who was convicted last week, will serve his sentence in the island of Pines prison, the informants said.

commissions. Ever since Confederation it has been handled by a Commons committee, giving rise to fierce disputes.

By law, Commons ridings must be adjusted after each decennial census to take into account changes in the population. Traditionally, rural ridings have been allowed to have smaller populations than city ridings, on the theory it is more difficult to get around to constituents in thinly-populated areas.

Today, the House continues with clause-by-clause study of the bill. This normally is the final debating stage. By unanimous consent, it was decided Wednesday to leave Clause 13—the contentious one—until the end.

Richard R. Southam (PC—Moose Mountain) said it would be wrong to make rural ridings larger. It would work a great hardship on MPs who are already having trouble getting around to talk to constituents.

Transport Minister Pickersgill, who is guiding the bill through the House, said the government will readily accept changes supported by a large group of MPs. But he indicated that any change in the tolerance figure would have to be put to a vote.

HEARD IDEAS

Earlier in the sitting the House heard some suggestions for rules changes designed to make Parliament more effective. They came from a committee headed by Stanley Knowles, NDP member for Winnipeg North Centre and an expert on procedure.

One proposal is to give speaker Alan Macnaughton more power to control the oral question period which opens each day's sitting. Another would provide a 30-minute period Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights for special debates on matters suggested by MPs.

Barry Mather (NDP — New Westminster) presented a motion calling for the payment of old age pensions at age 67 by 1967. It was talked out in the hour allotted to private members' business and did not reach a vote.

Atlantic 76,000 (89,000); Quebec 171,000 (201,000); Ontario 105,000 (138,000); Prairies 59,000 (70,000); British Columbia 45,000 (51,000).

Regional unemployment rates showed Ontario and the Prairies below the 6.8-per-cent national average. March jobless rates, with year-earlier rates in brackets:

Atlantic 13 per cent (15.3); Quebec 8.8 (11.0); Ontario 4.3 (5.7); Prairies 5.3 (6.3); British Columbia 7.0. (8.5).

languages in all parts of Canada.

In suggesting the educational tribunal, the Quebec group—Le Conseil de la Vie Francaise—said the constitution already has made the federal government the arbiter in legal disputes but that this role should be made more effective.

It said this role should go to a federal body removed from politics and composed of representatives of the two principal ethnic groups chosen outside Parliament.

MAKES SUGGESTION

The organization, which aims to develop and maintain French culture throughout North America, made its suggestion in a brief it plans to submit to the royal commission.

The brief outlines the educational situation as it affects French-speaking Canadians outside Quebec and says this situation remains acute for such elements.

The civil servants are being asked to fill in their bilingual questionnaires and return them unsigned by May 15.

The questionnaires then will be fed into an electronic brain which will spend up to two months analyzing the results.

A third question asks whether the federal government and business should provide intensives to their employees to encourage fluency in both English and French on the job.

The interviewee is asked to reply yes or no to the questions or to check off one of several possible answers.

national pension plan.

He said if the Ottawa-Quebec negotiations made advances toward this end, "then the great efforts and frustrations of the last few months will have been justified."

Mr. Robarts reiterated what he told reporters Tuesday—that he feels a national retirement plan would be the best thing for Canada.

Parliament At a Glance

WEDNESDAY, April 15, 1964

Prime Minister Pearson said new negotiations are going on between Ottawa and the provinces over pension plans.

Labor Minister MacEachen said the Seafarers' International Union has no "no-cost-ship" lists in its offices.

A move to speed up Parliamentary business including holding late night urgency debates was proposed in the Commons.

Renewed pleas were made to safeguard rural representation in any redistribution of Parliamentary constituencies.

A private member's proposal to give old age pensions at age 67 in 1967 was talked out.

Women's Christian Association Elects Officers at Annual Meet

On the occasion of the 94th annual meeting of the Women's Christian Association, the board met at the home of Mrs. Ralph Morton.

In the business meeting which followed, the treasurer, Mrs. E. Hickey, gave a detailed financial report showing sources of assets and an accounting of disbursements for the past year, and stated that the residence, at 58 Highland Ave., has successfully operated for eight years.

DISBURSEMENT OF FUNDS

Mrs. H. Thompson's report on the disbursement of the Corby Order showed that it had been used to bring cheer and comfort to many of Belleville's needy people and appreciative letters of thanks were read from many of the recipients.

Fees were collected and Mrs. N. Edwards read the slate of officers for 1964, submitted by the nominating committee.

Mrs. Purdy and Mrs. Hickey expressed the appreciation of the board to the retiring president, Mrs. W. S. Willis.

During the year some decorating was done at the residence and care taken to keep the building in good repair.

APPOINT REPRESENTATIVE

At the end of 1965, Mrs. Fake's term of office as representative on the Hospital Board expired. Since he declined to retire, member of the board interviewed Mr. John Legate, who agreed to succeed Mr. Fake as representative on the Hospital Board.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

The human heart hungers for love.

We fear the loss of affection and want forever to be assured and re-assured that love is available. Those who doubt their own value have a particularly poignant and almost-insatiable need to be certain of the love of others. The more we fear aloneness, the greater our insistent demand for love.

Often, we complain more than we should about imaginary or falsely real aches and pains in order to get a bit of pity. But we err when we allow pity to take the place of the affection we crave but do not get. Ironically, the more we are pitied, the more we may be disliked. Nobody can pity another, too often, too long.

SEARS FOR LOVE

Our search for love will end in frustration if we will link it to neurotic fears of rejection. While it is a normal human desire to want to be loved, it is less than normal to couple this positive feeling to a negative impulse — the fright of being overlooked, discarded, unwanted. Happy love, unlike unhappy sympathy, is based on reciprocities; it wants the wanted, not the unwanted. Only compassion will endure the pitiable, and then, no longer than is necessary. Happy, normal love, is linked to the heroic, not to the despairing, defeated moods of life.

This is not to deny the fundamental, life-giving quality of human compassion. We properly extend ourselves to those who are weaker and who stand in need of our attention. But it is really our compassion, not our love, that leads us in the direction of these humane concerns. We are ready to give the "victim" what we think a victim requires — immediate attention. But not our enduring, unceasing and total concern; this, we will save for those we "love".

PITY AND LOVE

So, then, to avoid confusion between pity and love let us not seek the former when we cannot get the latter. If we will not recognize the difference between these, we will lose our balance, slipping on the shifting quicksands of our unreal world. For we will be up-ended by the turns of a vicious circle; the more we lack true affection, the greater our urge to be pitied; the stronger our desire for pity, the greater our imagined pain; the sharper our pain, the more powerful our wish to be pitied.

Let us remember: no-one loves anyone he must pity. Love or pity. One or the other, at one time or another, but never both, together.

Canadian Fashion & Fad

By pegg rogers

CONTRADICTIONS ARE IN FASHION

Dame Fashion decrees that this spring we must look like ladies. We wear ruffled blouses with frills at the neckline and frills protruding from the sleeves of our suits. Our cocktail and dress-up dresses of lace have frilly jackets and cascades of Laces. Even some of the newest play shorts are covered with lace! All this is a bit of a shock after seasons of simple tweeds, "A" line overblouse dresses, unstructured skirts and French cuffs and sporty hats.

Paris says wear pretty feminine colors, but to contradict, along with frilly blouses and daintily shoes will dressy heels and cut-out trimmings. According to the fashion dictators, all these worn together and at the same time spell instant high fashion.

No longer is the wide - brimmed hat the hat for spring unless it happens to have a turned-up black brim, which sweeps down over the face like a sugar scoop. If it is centred with a huge mum flower that makes it even better!

Spring flowers are not new, but this year we have to wear them below the waistline and midway between the pelvic bones. No longer can we tuck a sprig of lily of the valley in our lapel and call it fashion.

We noticed a model at one of this spring's shows wearing a thin band of green tied in a cat's whisker bow around her neck. Her dress had a low, scooped neckline! Bows — big, floppy or small and crisply neat, are all part of this surge to the feminine look. This look is strange when you consider that the silhouette itself is not shaped definitely to the figure. It still suggests the figure, skimming it lightly.

NEW COMBINATION

The look is certainly feminine. but the biggest and newest color combination is not feminine. Black and white, mixed in geometric prints and abstracts do not suggest frilly femininity at least not to me.

Navy has returned with a flourish. There are navy suits and coats, but navy is actually featured in many evening dress lines. It has been a long, long time since navy has appeared on the evening scene, but in this season of contradictions it has happened!

Pin stripes and chalk stripes are in the news for suits. They have such a talent for slimming the figure that I predict they will sell like wildfire. The opposite must be said about the multitude of checks abounding in all the suit and coat stores. Checks, except the most minute, seem to add a few pounds.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers care of this Paper.

President of I.O.D.E. Defends Organization

CALGARY (CP)—Critics of the IODE do not know what they are talking about, the group's national president, Mrs. D. W. McGibbon of Toronto, said Wednesday in an address to the annual meeting of the Alberta chapter.

Its members have been called social climbers and pseudo-patriots, as well as ultra-conservative, blue-blooded, undemocratic, Mrs. McGibbon said.

Mr. Garfield Cooney, 3rd of Thurlow is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

VIEWS CHANGE

"Now all that has changed," Mrs. McGibbon said. "We urge our members to get out and vote and to take an interest in the affairs of their community, province and their country.

"Every year a proportion of our work and funds go to the newly independent nations in Africa, Asia and the West Indies. In this field I believe the IODE has been a leader. I believe our approach has been progressive and in keeping with the spirit of the new Commonwealth.

"As for being discriminatory . . . in the early years we were primarily Anglo-Saxon with a good number of French and Jewish members. Today, thanks to our nationalist, like Canada, the order is multi-racial."

She said the IODE stands for the belief of all British peoples in British parliamentary democracy and tolerance "the foundations on which our country has been built."

WANTS ONE VERSION

In an interview at Regina earlier Wednesday, Mrs. McGibbon said that if O Canada is selected as Canada's national anthem she hopes English-speaking Canadians can get together on a single version.

"Most Canadians sing one of the two most common versions. But there are actually about 25 English versions," she said.

She also said the IODE faced a strong challenge in changing its image. The motto, Patriotism Through Service, remains, but "we are like it or not, a most organizations have an image." She said the IODE is not the sock-knitting group of the Boer War.

"It is an alive and active group of women who did a great deal of work and public service."

Country Store Is Theme Of Minerva Chapter Tea

A cut-out of a pot-bellied stove set the scene for the "Country Store" theme of the tea given by Minerva Chapter of the Eastern Star at the Masonic Temple on Wednesday afternoon. Piled in front of the stove were blond logs, and adding to the decorative interest at the entrance were evergreens complete with a bird feeder, pussy willows and pinecones.

Convener for this event was Mrs. Ila Sine, Past Matron, with Mrs. Russell Cooper convening the tearoom, and Mrs. Mae Fiskle kitchen convener. Fifty varieties of articles were on sale as they would be in a country store. One unusual feature was the counter where the men were the clerks selling perennial plants, rose bushes, shrubs, and potted violets among other things, with Mr. Adams supervising.

The tea table was displayed many styles and patterns to choose from. Here those in charge were Mrs. Gladys Batchelor, Mrs. Evelyn Tebworth, Mrs. Hazel McNevin, Mrs. Isobel Woodcock and their guests.

The home baking table held a tempting display of cooking and was supervised by Mrs. Dorothy May, Mrs. Evelyn Elliott, Mrs. Ethel Jordan, Mrs. Marjorie Bowling, Mrs. Mae Finkle, Mrs. Ila Sine and their group.

Mrs. Edna Dobbs and Mrs. Frances Marner looked after the Parcel Parade. The miscellaneous table was in charge of Mrs. Alberta Ireland, Mrs. Eva Heath, Mrs. Marjorie Collyer, Mrs. Elizabeth Helm and their group.

The candy booth did a brisk business with Mrs. Nellie McBurney and Mrs. Dorothy Nichol and their group making the sales.

Mrs. Kay Bushell, W.M., and Mrs. Marion Collyer, A.M., gave a warm greeting to the guests as they arrived. Treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. Nellis Clarke, P.M., Mrs. Minnie Moorman, Mrs. Christie Reid, P.M., and Mrs. Florence Bolten.

Mrs. Georgina Randall and Mrs. Howard Walker invited the guests to the tearoom where small tables looked most attractive, each with a miniature wheelbarrow, holding apple blossoms and a bird. On the table was a larger wheelbarrow formed the centrepiece holding pink snapdragons and pussy willows interspersed with mauve iris. Two tri-branched candelabra held pale pink and blue tapers and silver services graced each end of the table. Presiding at the tea table were: Mrs. Lucile Brickman, DDGM; Mrs. Marion Heath, EDDGM; Mrs. Helen Bell, W.M., of Marmora; Mrs. Helen Hall W.M., of Campbellford; Mrs. Dorothy Ellis W.M., of 55; Mrs. Betty Palmer, W.M., of Quinte; Mrs. Gertrude Ellsworth, W.M., of Trenton; Mrs. Bernice Brown, W.M., of Colborne; Mrs. Grace Vanner, P.M., of Minerva, and Mrs. Nellie Cooper, P.M., of Minerva.

Exhibition of Paintings Gives Added Interest at Tea

Art students of Philippa Faulkner provided added interest to the spring tea at St. John's Parish Hall on Wednesday afternoon with an exhibition of their work. Sponsored by St. Joseph's Parish Council, the tea attracted a fine crowd, and was a place of warm hospitality on a cool April day.

Mrs. C. Murphy, president of St. Joseph's C.W.L. and Mrs. Mon, Miss D. Walker and Miss Bernice Grills. The Misses Carolyn and Marlene Mitchell sang a selection and were accompanied at the piano by their mother, Mrs. M. Mitchell. Miss Sandra Weese played a piano selection.

Mrs. Wilfred Clare read an address to the happy couple and on behalf of the relatives, presented them with a purse of money. Other gifts were also received.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Walker and sons from Bancroft; and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sweetman of Niagara Falls.

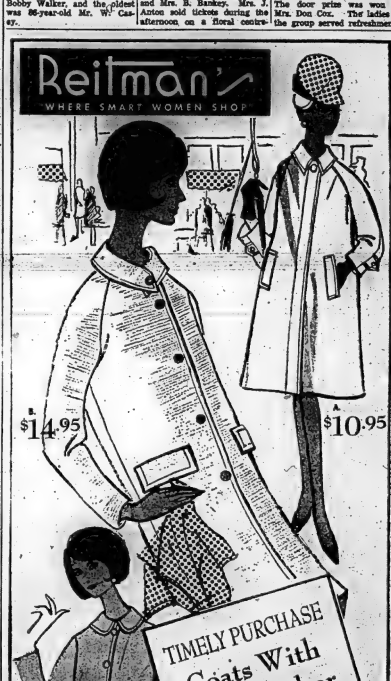
place which was won by Mrs. Ronald Livock, 37 McDonald Gardens.



Mrs. Faulkner mingled with the guests and discussed points of interest concerning the paintings, which were displayed around the walls. They were done in two media, oils and water colors. The subjects included still life; portraits, winter and summer landscapes. Two eleven-year-old students, Bruce Latchaer, Jr., and Marny Simmons showed considerable promise. The other exhibitors were adults with more advanced subjects. This feature of the tea gave local color and interest.

Successful Living

Overdose of Aspirins Will Not Cure Problem

DEAR DORIS — A few weeks ago I took an overdose of aspirins. I still haven't figured out why. I spent a week in the hospital. I am supposed to see a psychiatrist next month. But I can't wait; I need advice and I need it fast.

Since I've returned home from the hospital I've been treated like a kid. I've never complained about this for I haven't enough nerve to complain to my parents.

Knowing that nobody knows about it makes me feel good. But when all the crowd is over and we're getting ready to leave my mom will say: "Don't be late. You need your rest." Then they start asking questions.

DORIS CLARK

But I'm not myself. I jump at what everyone says. I find myself crying when I'm alone. When I'm around my friends I laugh, but inside I'm crying.

How can I forget? How can I be myself and go and see the psychiatrist next month? — HELP.

DEAR HELP — I know. You want your friends to think of you as a going concern. Not a drag.

Don't forget, though, that even teen-agers get sick and have to take special care while they're getting better. It's just nobody's business what took you to hospital!

Your psychiatrist will want you to clear this, and many other things, with that loving, caring mother of yours. Once you start talking to her and stop bottling up all your tensions, you'll have a better chance of getting really free of the aspirin bottle.

DEAR DORIS — We farm, with the 27-year-old boy now the only one at home. He at times gets into tantrums over nothing. (I don't do things well enough for him.) I just have to walk off. The wife blames me when he blows up against me.

I have been looking for some way to break up with him these last years, but I am too far in years to farm alone at 70 and he, I feel, would lose out, perhaps buying the latest in a combine, etc And he lacks diligence.

I asked the wife to act as a sort of cushion, help make conversation, play any game of pretense in the interests of cordiality. She is quite capable but no peace keeper. I just can't get her help.

I would like a friendlier home. Otherwise the time passes and our lives get wasted. What should I do? What can I do? — UNSETTLED.

DEAR UNSETTLED — It is already far later than you think. Away back in those early days of marriage you and your young bride started drifting apart. She took the boy's part, you kept quiet, foolishly. Are you sure you are right in balking your son's ideas of progress? Don't let the unfair treatment of many years blind you to the fact that your son is now a man.

Once he sees you are not stubbornly holding to outworn ideas, you can ask for reasonable discussion with some hope of getting it. And do ask.

Confidential to CAROL — Drop your false friend. You have given her one chance to make amends, and she has broken her promise. And don't worry, because people soon learn that such a girl invents her tales. Would your friends have come to you if they had believed her?

(Longer, fuller replies were sent to correspondents enclosing a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Senior Citizens Sponsor Fine 'Spring Tea'

Hazlett of spring blooms and potted plants formed a lovely setting in the Recreation Centre, Pinnacle Street, yesterday afternoon when the Senior Citizens' Club of Belleville sponsored their first annual spring tea.

Conveners for the successful event were Mrs. M. Clapp and Mrs. H. Luffman who warmly greeted the guests at the entrance to the hall. Here the focal point of interest was the attractive tea table covered with ecru cut-work cloth, centred with a colorful arrangement of pink and blue tinted nurnes and flanked with pastel colored candles in multi-branch candelabra.

TEA POURERS

Those presiding at the silver tea services throughout the afternoon were: Mrs. J. Robinson, Mrs. H. Scales, Mrs. N. Calbery, Mrs. G. Gist, Mrs. Lloyd Dorsp and Mrs. Norm Carter. Other ladies of the group assisted with the replenishing and serving tasty refreshments.

The quartette guest tables were also in keeping with the decor, each covered with an embroidered luncheon cloth, centred with a solitaire pastel shade candle in silver candle holder, and silver cream and sugar trays.

There were two sales tables, with the candy table convened by Mrs. H. Vickers having a generous supply of maple creams and fudges, while the homebaking table with Mrs. F. Bly and Mrs. Ferguson in charge was laden with a bountiful supply of pies, cakes, tarts, cookies and homemade bread and buns.

Soft background music for relaxing while having a cup of tea was rendered by Mrs. L. Adams at the piano.

Mrs. F. Cook was treasurer for a most successful event and the club extended thanks and appreciation to each and everyone who helped in any way.

Winners of the door prizes were: Mrs. Milne, Mrs. Fox and Mrs. Lloyd Dorsp.

Later in the evening the club held their mid-month meeting with a large attendance. President Brennan opened the meeting and a report of the afternoon tea was given.

To conclude the evening's entertainment cards were enjoyed with the winners: ladies, Mrs. Longhurst, Mrs. Sizes Claus and Mrs. Lottie Fox; men's, Mrs. M. Doyle, Mrs. J. Robinson and Albert Johnstone. Door prize, Mr. A. Johnstone.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. R. Taylor and her committee.

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: I have some white goblets with short stems that I use for family tables at lunch or dinner. They're good looking, but they are made of plastic. Even so, since they make a good appearance, would it be possible to use them at company dinners? The saleswoman from whom I bought them said they may be used in any type of setting, but a few friends I've asked do not share her opinion. May I ask yours? — Mrs. B. S., Detroit, Mich.

Answer: Plasticware, whether goblets or dishes, are not correctly used for any type of dinner party, even if it's a highly informal one. It is used though, for al fresco dining, even when company's present and, if well-designed, you might even be able to get away with using it for an informal lunch. But for dinner, your best china and glassware, as well as your best silver and linens, are in better taste.

Question: A girl from my home town will be visiting this city for a weekend shortly and I've arranged to take her to dinner and to a show while she's here. She'll be travelling with her aunt, and they will be staying at a midtown hotel. When I call for her, should I go directly up to their room to fetch her, so that I can say hello to her aunt properly? Also, when I take her back to the hotel after our date, may I take her to the door of her room or only to the door of the elevator? Her family is very proper, so I want to behave in a very correct manner. — T. A., New York City

Answer: When you call for the young lady at her hotel, announce your arrival on the house phone in the lobby. Your date then will tell you whether to come up or wait in the lobby until she comes down. Don't just barge up without an invitation. When you take her back to the hotel after your date, you should see her directly to the door of her room rather than leave her in the lobby or at the elevator.

Reducing is not easy. It takes character. I know because I do it and it is extra hard for me because I test recipes all day long and have to adjust my calories to my tastetesting. Now prove you have intestinal fortitude. You feel so good when you are slim.

Red Favored Color for Children

The brilliant shade of the Mountie tunics was seen in garments for every climate, every occasion, from sleepwear to ski clothes.

For girls, red appears on its own or teamed with classic navy trails—beige or gray. Bright red corduroy shaped a pre-teen's low-waisted school dress, worn with a navy raincape lined with the same corduroy.

And the fiery fashion extended to boys' wear. A co-ordinated wardrobe for the younger set included a double-breasted red blazer and white shirt to be worn with white shorts or gray flannels.

The stylish leather look comes to the youngsters in the form of beeskneede, a fabric from Holland that looks much like real skin.

Stretch fabrics also received a prominent place in the show, one of the jeans being girls' glossy black pants which a model teamed with a fake fur and knit after-ski jacket.

Curious Chile

The Kiwanis Club of Belleville will present its last travelogue of the 11th World Travel Adventure Series, at the Collegiate Auditorium, entitled, "Curious Chile," this Thursday evening, with Nicol Smith as narrator.

"Curious Chile" extends for 2,000 miles along the western country of South America, and for 100 miles inland. The northern portion, one-third, is noted for being the world's driest desert, where any rainfall has ever been recorded, while in the southern third, the rainiest regions of the earth are to be found. Along the backbone of Chile, but 100 miles distant, are the highest mountains of the western hemisphere, and at its tip — Cape Horn — the deepest parts of the Pacific Ocean.

Nicol Smith, who needs no introduction to the adventure lovers of Belleville, has visited many strange and remote places, capturing the interesting features including the primitive Indians; the exotic haciendas; beautiful resorts; copper mines and nitrate plants; the trout fishing, as well as winter and summer sports, and the unforgettable statue of the "Christ of the Andes" on the high mountain overlooking the frontier of Argentine. Lt.Col. Smith is the author of the "Burma Road," and the "Golden Doorway to Tibet".

The Kiwanis Club is to be commended for its fine travelogues, which have been not only things of beauty, but will remain a "joy forever" to those who have availed themselves of this opportunity of world travel from the easy vantage point of an auditorium seat.

Japanese Women Become More Legal-Minded

TOKYO (Reuters)—Japanese women of today are more legal-minded than their pre-war sisters in solving family problems involving a better social status for women.

That, at any rate, is the conclusion reached at a recent round-table discussion by seven women who answer legal queries by women readers of a newspaper. The discussion was held to mark the 500th anniversary of the "lonely hearts column" of the Yomiuri Shimbun, a Japanese national daily newspaper.

In the early days of the column, they said, the letters were full of complaints about the hard and miserable lives women were forced to lead under the tyranny of despotic husbands.

Today, however, many of the letters are concerned with queries about the legal rights of Japanese women.

Answers have also changed in character since pre-war days.

At first, in days when women had little chance of earning their own living, the letters were answered simply with words of encouragement. The writers were urged to bear up and carry on—since they had no chance of doing otherwise.

SEEK DIVORCE

Today, lonely and ill-treated wives may be advised to seek divorce. Under the post - war civil code, a divorcee is entitled to a share of her husband's property, support for their children, and alimony.

Before the Second World War, women had no parental authority and divorcees had to leave their children in the hands of their ex-husbands.

In those days, when the family system was in force, the oldest son was entitled to claim all his father's property and assets. Now, one-third of the property goes to the widow. The other two-thirds are divided equally among the children.

Before the war, Japanese husbands were not required to provide for their wives in any way after death. Nor were they held responsible for their wives' debts while they were alive. A wife's possessions were under the control of her husband.

SNUFF ADDICT

Queen Charlotte, wife of George III, was so addicted to taking snuff that she was nicknamed "Snuffy Charlotte".

ILLITERATE KOREANS

Despite the growing women's rights movement, as of 1960 three-fourths of all illiterates in South Korea were women.

Ann Landers

Vultures With No Proof Deserve No Recompense

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My sister's husband was a salesman. Artie knew all kinds of people.

A few days ago Artie dropped dead of a heart attack. The funeral was yesterday. After the funeral several people came by the house to be with my sister and sit around the way they do when a friend passes away.

ANN LANDERS

Two men whom my sister had never seen before took her aside and told her that they had loaned Artie money. One man said he had borrowed $600 when he had gotten over his head in a crap game. The other fellow said he still had $300 coming from the second Liston-Patterson fight.

My sister was bewildered. She knew very little about her husband's gambling and betting practices. She had never seen these men before and they had nothing in writing. At the moment she's plenty short of cash, but she says if Artie owed the money she wants to pay it. What is your advice? — TRYING TO HELP.

DEAR TRYING — The timing of these birds is interesting.

Since they have nothing in writing — and she never saw them before — I'd advise her to ignore the pressure.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our 15-year-old daughter complains that we never let her use her own judgment or make her own decisions. She put on a great big sell, pointing out that she must learn from experience how to handle money and be independent.

We agreed to give her $400 on her 15th birthday which was exactly 60 days ago. She was to buy her own clothes, lunches, do whatever she wanted with the money, and six months later she was to get another $400.

Last night she asked for the second $400 now because she doesn't have a dime to her name. I wasn't surprised because I saw the foolish things she did during the first week of the "Plan For Independence." She paid $10 for a set of mink eye-lashes and $49.50 for a pair of gold satin lounging pyjamas.

Should we give her another chance? She says she has learned her lesson and that this next $400 will last her six months for sure. Yes or no? — UNDECIDED.

DEAR UN — If you give this 15-year-old numbskull another $400 you are out of your minds for sure.

What do you mean, another chance? To do what — assist the economy? Make out a budget of her normal expenses and give her exactly that — one week at a time and not a dime more.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Our teacher was called out of the room by the principal last Thursday. She put me in charge because I am the class president.

Two of my best friends began to throw erasers and chalk. One eraser hit a girl in the face and knocked off her glasses. The glasses didn't break but the girl is a nervous type and she began to cry. The teacher walked in right in the middle of everything. She asked me for the names of the kids who were out of line. I had to give her the names of my best friends.

They lost their privileges for one week and now they're sore at me. They called me a rat and a fink and a lousy stool pigeon. I feel awful. Did I do right or wrong? — JERRY.

DEAR JERRY — You did right. It was your responsibility to maintain order. If your friends would not co-operate they deserved to be reported. Moreover, your own honor and integrity were on the line. Real friends can't expect you to use influence to cover up for them when they are out of order. Make no apologies — ever.

Banks Denies Giving Orders To Any of His Men to Beat Up Anybody in Court Trial

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown today was to continue cross-examining Hal C. Banks, former president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.), at his trial for conspiracy to injure an official of another union.

The 56-year-old Banks said Wednesday he does not believe in violence and has tried to cut it down in the 15 years he has been in Canada.

Called to testify in his own defence, he spent more than four hours in the witness box, including two hours of cross-examination. He said he has never given orders to any of his men to beat up anybody.

He is charged with conspiracy to assault Capt. Henry Frank Walsh, a former organizer for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild (CLC), with intent to wound, maim or disfigure. The charge carries a maximum penalty of 14 years.

Walsh was beaten up in a hotel parking lot in Owen Sound, Aug. 18, 1957.

Banks said he heard a rumor about the beating from "some member of his union sometime in 1957.

KEPT VIOLENCE DOWN

He told Crown Prosecutor Jean Martineau "one of my big jobs here has been to keep violence down, not to cause it."

Because he did not believe in violence, he had always told his men "to keep their hands on their pockets" if they wanted to stay in the SIU.

He said he had no difficulties in the summer of 1957 with Walsh or his men.

"Were you not fighting over the same men?" asked Mr. Martineau.

"Not in 1957."

"Do you pretend today that there was no conflict at that time between your two unions?"

"I certainly do."

Banks said no conflict developed between the two unions until "much later" and that was settled in the vote won by the Merchant Service Guild.

Returning to Banks' testimony that he heard a rumor of the Walsh beating in 1957, the prosecutor asked him whether he tried to confirm it.

Banks said he had no reason to investigate it. "If any of our men had been involved, I would have heard about it. We had no men in Owen Sound. I couldn't run down every rumor."

Banks denied testimony by Richard Greaves, a former official of the National Association of Marine Engineers (CLC), that he had called Jack Cassidy, Eldon Sheehan and Paul Carsh into his office at SIU headquarters in Montreal and ordered them to beat up Walsh.

Banks denied testimony by Greaves fabricated the story from whole cloth," he said.

He denied testimony by Michael Sheehan, a former SIU member, that he had instructed a bookkeeper to give Casper a raise of $1,000 and that he had told him, Sheehan, that Carsh had "disciplined out" and should be kept out of the union hall.

He denied testimony by Joseph Wood, another former SIU member, that he had boasted about beating Walsh "and me."

Banks described Sheehan as "very anti-SIU, anti-Banks.

"He had been the point of every one of our enemies since he left us. That's been his main job."

He said that, "If Walsh was beaten as a result of a union movement, Greaves had his hands on me.

"Greaves was the one who had the trouble with Walsh, and me."

He said Greaves, Sheehan and Wood, all three Crown witnesses, have perjured themselves on the stand.

Banks faces another trial at the May Assizes, on a charge that arose out of a fight between Greaves in his Vancouver office in 1960.

He and Walsh affair, Casper, now living in California, Richardson and Carsh have all been charged in connection with conspiracies with Banks. Richardson and Carsh are before the courts on charges similar to that against Banks.

Gas Drilling In Lake Erie Is Productive

TORONTO (CP)—Energy Resources Minister Simonett told the legislature Wednesday 23 of 25 wells drilled in Lake Erie last year produced natural gas pools.

He referred to Lake Erie as an important source of natural gas, accounting for 20 per cent of all production in Ontario.

Mr. Simonett said oil and gas drillers are attempting to eliminate any hazards to the fishing industry.

Introducing his department's estimates expenditure for 1964-65, Mr. Simonett said energy consumption in the province reached a record high in 1963.

These were the main figures: 130,000,000 barrels of oil, up nine per cent; 187,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas, up 12.3 per cent and 28,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity, up 4.8 per cent.

WILL DOUBLE USE

Mr. Simonett said his energy studies branch estimates that by 1975 energy consumption will double.

Ontario's production of oil last year amounted to 1,326,000 barrels—only two per cent of the province's requirements.

Ontario's share of the province made up nine per cent of its consumption. Production was up nine per cent to 15,800,000,000 cubic feet.

Mr. Simonett said he would ask Cabinet today for special appropriations for an increased program of development and management, Graves had told me.

"Greaves was the one who had the trouble with Walsh, and me."

He said Greaves, Sheehan and Wood, all three Crown witnesses, have perjured themselves on the stand.

Banks faces another trial at the May Assizes, on a charge that arose out of a fight between Greaves in his Vancouver office in 1960.

He and Walsh affair, Casper, now living in California, Richardson and Carsh have all been charged in connection with conspiracies with Banks. Richardson and Carsh are before the courts on charges similar to that against Banks.

QUEEN'S MESSAGE — Myrna Law, 11, pupil at the Harry J. Clarke Public School, shows letter she received from Queen Elizabeth after writing to Princess Anne.

Belleville Girl Gets Letter From Queen After Writing One to Princess Anne

A letter of congratulations — and sympathy — from an 11-year-old Belleville girl to Princess Anne following the birth of her youngest brother, has brought a reply from Queen Elizabeth.

The letter from the Queen was received by Myrna Law, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Law, 946 Victoria Ave., who wrote to Princess Anne several weeks ago.

With three brothers of her own, one older than Princess Anne and two younger — the same as Princess Anne — Myrna said she thought it would be nice to write and tell the Princess of her three brothers and at the same time offer congratulations — and sympathy.

The expression of sympathy had a double barrelled meaning — regret that the new arrival was not a baby sister as might have been wished and sympathy because the Princess was now outnumbered three to one by her brothers.

Myrna Law has received a reply from Queen Elizabeth's lady in waiting.

The lovely maid Princess Anne had been pleased by the letter that Myrna and that the Queen had been deeply touched.

Yesterday Myrna was the centre of people at the Harry J. Clarke Public School where she read the Queen's letter to her classmates.

Admits Secretly Taking Home Some Documents

TORONTO (CP) — A former Ontario senior civil servant, who is suing two former superiors for conspiracy, admitted him from his job, told the Ontario Supreme Court Wednesday he secretly took home and kept 200 government documents from Ontario public works department files.

John Wesley Clarke, 56, dismissed from his $12,500-a-year position as a director of contract adjustments for the department in November, 1962, said he took the documents starting March, 1961, to defend himself against anticipated charges at a pending grievance procedure.

Mr. Clarke alleges that John D. Millar, deputy minister, and Chief Architect Glen Crehe conspired to remove him from his position. He is seeking reinstatement to the civil service at the same salary and job level.

Charles L. Dubin, counsel for the defendants, asked Mr. Clarke if he knew that documents after the grievance decision had been made in February, 1963.

Mr. Clarke replied he kept the documents because the situation in the department was not cleared after the grievance decision. He objected to being denied his promotion by government and having his work as contract claims adjuster assessed by others in the department.

He was dismissed when he refused to report for reassignment duties at Kemptville, Ont.

Labor Minister Says Lists Do Not Exist

OTTAWA (CP)—Labor Minister MacEachen said in the Commons Wednesday he has been told the Seafarers' International Union of Canada has no "do not-ship" lists in any of its offices—including the fourth floor of the Montreal headquarters.

This information, which he said came from the chairman of the federal maritime union trustees, Mr. Justice Victor Dryer, constituted denial Tuesday night speech in the Commons by Douglas Fisher (ND) — Port Arthur).

Mr. Fisher said a do-not-ship list, or a "registry of charges" list, exists in the fourth floor of the SIU Montreal office building.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) asked Mr. MacEachen to have Mr. Fisher's charges investigated by the RCMP.

The list could be found on the fourth floor, he said. "At least it was there when I was last there and haven't removed it since."

Mr. Orlikow did not say where he and Mr. Fisher got their information.

IS ACCUSED

Since he said he has access to the past of maintaining "do-not-ship" lists under which seamen blacklisted by the unions are unable to get jobs.

Replying to Michael Starr, Progressive Conservative labor minister, Mr. MacEachen also said he has received no protests from the Seafarers' International against a plan for Leonard (Red) McLaughlin, SIU vice-president, to succeed to the presidency of the union.

Mr. MacEachen said the maritime union trustees have had "complete check made in all SIU offices from coast to coast in Canada and are "fully satisfied" there is no do-not-ship list or a registry of charges list.

He also said the trustees have told him that a reform of SIU financing is under "active consideration."

The union charged a probationary fee of $240—which included six months' dues—an initiation fee for full membership of $100, and monthly dues of $4.

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker asked the minister whether he hadn't received a letter from Toronto in the last few days dealing with do-not-ship lists.

Mr. MacEachen said he would check into the matter.

INLAND REVENUE

Britain's 22,000,000 wage earners paid $7,311,801,020 in income tax, bringing total inland revenue duties in Britain in 1963 to $10,534,360,000.

Projects Will Try to Help Elliot Lake Miners Being Laid Off by Hundreds

"ELLIOT LAKE, Ont. (CP)— Two new projects get under way next week to try to help miners in this one-time boom town who now find time running out on them.

Starting Monday, workers will be able to start training for new jobs under the federal government's vocational training program. The same day, a joint department of labor - national service "job-placement project" goes into effect.

Under the job-placement project, miners will file with the NES. Applications will be sent across the country to try to find work for them as the semi-isolated lake area.

Other aids being sought for the workers include relocation payments for those who own rent-free housing and interest relief payment moratoriums for home owners.

This is quite a change for a community that in the middle 1950s blossomed out of the wilderness into a thriving centre of more than 20,000 people.

Production of uranium, however, was suddenly swell in excess of demand and closing after another in Elliot Lake and other uranium centres shut down.

KNELL SOUNDS

The death knell sounded last week for still another of Elliot Lake's four remaining producers when Rio Algom Mines Ltd. announced its Milliken mine would halt operations June 30 when its contracts to sell uranium expire.

Milliken employs 460 miners and, although its shutdown had been expected, it was "a hard, hard blow to take," says Edward Futterer, chairman of the Elliot Lake Improvement District.

The shutdown may affect about 2,000 of the town's remaining 8,500 population, he says.

"The population may decrease by that much."

Of the other producers in this area, midway between Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., only Nordic Mine is not working under a cloud of uncertainty.

Nordic, owned by Rio Algom and employing 380 miners, has contracts running into 1971.

Consolidated Denison Mines, with 900 miners, also will run out of contracts June 30, the same time as Milliken. But Denison officials have not said what the future plans are. There has been speculation it too will close down.

WILL HOLD ON

The other producing mine, Stanrock, will see its contracts to sell uranium expire in December. It employs about 500 miners.

Mr. Futterer says committees have had little success in their efforts to replace Milliken jobs —jobs that mean, according to union sources, about $230,000 a week in wages.

Hopes for a major boost for Elliot Lake through the administration of the Canada Pension Plan being located here have been all but dashed.

Gilbert Gilchrist, international representative for the United Steelworkers Union Lake's fortunes, says the union is particularly concerned about retraining workers and helping them find jobs in other areas.

"Various committees in the area are looking into the possibilities of keeping the mines open.

"We go on record as stating this is a nice thing to happen and urge the government to reconsider extending the stockpiling proposals and to take the realistic approach and are preparing to move the men and to find jobs for them."

Eleven Years in Prison Haven't Tamed Kashmir Lion

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Indian government recleased the caged Lion of Kashmir last week and found that 11 years in prison have tamed him not a bit.

Pausing only to give a quiet tea party for his former warders, 59-year-old Sheik Mudhamad Abdulla immediately began to roar out demands that the future of Kashmir that were bound to make government leaders in New Delhi wince.

In a sense Abdulla is merely picking up where he left off when deposed as Kashmir's independent-minded prime minister in 1953. He was arrested for preaching sedition.

He declares Kashmir's acceptance by India is invalid, wants a plebiscite to settle the future of the state's 4,000,000 people and hopes to turn Kashmir into an independent, democratic and secular sheikdom.

Since he still commands the affection and trust of the Kashmiris—and since nobody else has solved the Kashmir dispute problem — Abdulla is being wooed by certain politicians in India who hope to use him as the possible man of destiny.

MAKING OVERTURES

Pakistan has described as "a bridge between India and Pakistan." He has launched a campaign to persuade Kashmir's Hindu minority that their future would be safe and is making overtures to Pakistan which is ruled over the one-third of Kashmir occupied by Pakistan.

That the Lion has clawed away the Indian government's curtain of pretence that the Kashmir problem is solved is stated.

Prime Minister Nehru, who has invited the Kashmir leader to New Delhi for talks, is faced with two choices.

He can re-arrest Abdulla and put down the Kashmiris' agitation by force or he can try to meet the Lion half way, by granting Kashmir some measure of autonomy without full Independence.

The Indian government has long maintained that a plebiscite in Kashmir would invite religious conflict, especially at a time when the Moslem-Hindu situation threatens to boil over.

Abdulla denies this. He plans to visit President Ayub Khan of Pakistan after seeing Nehru in the hopes of reaching agreement from both sides that independence is the only solution.

Long-Term Uranium Prospects Bright

OTTAWA (CP)—W. M. Gilchrist, president of Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, said last week that efforts to find work for displaced uranium workers has met with relatively little success.

The head of the Crown-owned uranium agency also said in his annual report that the Canadians that there has been no improvement in the outlook for uranium sales, although the uranium industry during the next five years or so.

However, Mr. Gilchrist reiterated that long-term prospects for the industry continue to brighten.

"There are abundant reasons to believe that from 1970 onwards there will be a steady resurgence in world demand for uranium and a restoration of healthy conditions in the Canadian uranium industry."

Mr. Gilchrist said "diligent efforts" had been made by Eldorado, other companies in the industry and the federal government to help uranium communities hard hit by reduced demand for uranium. This included efforts to minimize the disruption of employment and other economic effects caused by the sharp reduction of uranium production.

HAVE SMALL SUCCESS

"On the whole, these efforts have met with relatively small success, although some temporary relief was given in a few localized situations."

The government's decision last year to stockpile uranium until July 1, 1965, helped to extend employment in Ontario's Elliot Lake and Bancroft areas. However, there has been "no development in either community that would provide employment on anything like the scale resulting from operation of the uranium mines."

Alberta House Members Hike Pay Before Proroguing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Alberta legislature prorogued Wednesday and the Manitoba house may end its session today.

The Alberta house sat 39 days, gave royal assent to a record 101 bills and adopted a budget of $414,480,000.

The house passed controversial bills to change the sale of colored margarine, permitting Canadian Pacific Railway and the city of Calgary to proceed with agreements for a $35,000,000 redevelopment scheme and rewriting the Social Labor Act.

Members' total indemnities were raised to $5,400 from $4,500; cabinet ministers' to $11,900 from $15,500 the premier's to $22,400 from $18,500 and the Opposition Leader's to $11,400 from $7,000.

About 40 trade unionists, headed by a delegation from the Calgary Labor council, picketed the legislature Wednesday to protest the bill. They also objected to a section saying a union cannot penalize one of its members for working in a non-union shop unless it can find a suitable work for him in a union shop.

MOTIONS DEFEATED

Three Liberal and one New Democratic Party non - confidence motions were defeated during an all-day sitting Wednesday.

The Liberals charged the government failed to consult interested groups on the location of an art centre; involved the judiciary in political affairs by suggested irregularities in the attorney - general's department, and curtailed the provincial highways program.

The Tory motion assailed the government for not introducing a compulsory medical care program.

When the Manitoba house prorogues, only the Newfoundland, Quebec and Ontario legislatures will be sitting.

In the Quebec house, Union Nationale Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson said the province need 'not consider itself bound by the privy council decision of 1937 that fixed the Quebec-Labrador border.

He said the federal government should ask the 1931 amendment to the British North America Act by not consulting Quebec before submitting the issue to the council.

Acquitted On Charge Of Abduction

TORONTO (CP) — A Quebec race horse owner and his trainer were acquitted in Ontario General Court Wednesday on charges of abducting and raping an 18-year-old high school girl from Stoney Creek, near Hamilton, last January.

Ronald Kenneth Turcotte, 30, of Montreal, owner of the horse owner, and Roger William Sarver, 21, of Rosemount admitted they had sexual relations with the girl — a high-school student — in a motel in Scarborough, a suburb of Toronto.

Turcotte said the girl willingly entered his car, had sexual intercourse with him and decided to accompany the men to Montreal. Kinser said he was not involved with her at the motel.

The girl testified earlier she had decided to hitch-hike to Buffalo because she was distraught about her school work. She had only 10 cents in her pockets.

Canadian Maritime Union Will Never Be Asked to Merge With SIU Says CLC

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian Labor Congress has guaranteed members of the Canadian Maritime Union that they will never be forced against their will to merge their union with the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind).

The guarantee is made in CLC Executive Vice-President Will-iam Dodge in a mimeographed bulletin being distributed to the CMU's 500 Great Lakes members aboard ships in the fleet of Upper Lakes Shipping Company and the Canadian Pacific Steamships Line.

The bulletin—called The Beacon—refers to the recently-arranged peace pact between the government-appointed trustees and Paul Hall, North American president of the SIU. Under this arrangement the trustees plan to take steps to integrate maritime unions in Canada.

The CMU bulletin says the trustees' arrangement with Mr. Hall has led to spreading rumors that the CMU soon will be broken up and its members forced to join the SIU. "We wish to give you this positive assurance—the CMU will continue to operate as the past and will protect its members from interference by the SIU or any other organizations."

MAY BE DISCUSSED

"If the SIU should at some future time in the future become acceptable as an affiliate of the Canadian Labor Congress, the question of a merger of the two unions may perhaps be discussed. However, this will only take place through the CLC and never without free will and consent of the members of the Canadian Maritime Union."

CMU President Jack Staples said he had the CLC's assurance of this. He pointed to Mr. Dodge's bulletin as a "guarantee of this policy."

Mr. Staples said the trustees are endeavoring to serve the interests of all seamen interested in democratically-controlled unions.

"It may appear to be a slow process, but we can assure you that the trustees intend to do a thorough job which they hope will create union democracy and lasting peace in the maritime industry."

This was the first public comment by the CMU on the trustees' pact with Mr. Hall, which has been sharply criticized by New Democrat and Conservative spokesmen in the Commons, as well as by officials of two other unions under the trusteeship, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers and the National Association of Marine Engineers. Both are CLC affiliates.

Reporting on current negotiations with Upper Lakes Shipping Mr. Staples said tentative agreement has been reached on several non-wage issues but talks are continuing.

Saskatchewan Election

Thatcher Makes Pitch With Party's Programs

REGINA (CP) — Ross Thatcher in his first 4½ years as leader of the Saskatchewan Liberal party made a reputation as a vehement critic of the CCF provincial government.

But in the last few months he says he has changed his task and concentrated on presenting his party's programs to the electorate for the April 23 election.

He says his criticism, which got him ejected from the legislature in the 1962 spring session, was necessary to lay the groundwork for presentation of the Liberal "reform" alternative to CCF "socialism."

Mr. Thatcher, whose political career has spanned 19 years, says his opposition to the CCF stems from "bitter personal experience."

He was elected to the House of Commons in 1945 as CCF member for Moose Jaw-Lake Centre. Seven years later he began to make statements in the Commons indicating he differed with CCF policies on matters from pension payments to extreme leftist influence.

He resigned from the CCF in 1956 to sit as Independent and joined the Liberals in 1958. A year later, his criticisms of Crown corporations set up in Saskatchewan by the CCF government so provoked then-premier T. C. Douglas that Mr. Douglas challenged Mr. Thatcher to a debate.

The debate, held on a rainy May day in 1957 in Moosbank, Sask., was anything but humdrum. No winner was declared, but the exposure Mr. Thatcher got when it was carried over a province - wide radio network likely had something to do with his overwhelming victory at the 1959 provincial Liberal leadership convention.

He frankly admits he trod on the toes of other party members, both provincial and federal in his bid to revitalize the Liberal party since 1949.

"We don't all think alike and this is a healthy sign. But decisions in caucus are by a majority vote and I think we'll go into the election campaign a very unified party."

Saskatchewan had almost continuous Liberal government from the time the province was formed until the party was shattered in 1944 by a CCF sweep. There were 31 Liberals and 24 CCFers in the last legislature.

Mr. Thatcher says the most important part of the Liberal platform, in the contention that there is a need for policies to "let Saskatchewan catch up" in the field of industrial development.

"Another major plank — our major plank on agriculture — is the need for much more easily available farm credit in this province."

The Liberals support the medical care plan but would make minor changes in it, he says.

A former hardware merchant and cattle breeder now 46 years old, Mr. Thatcher is a heavy-set man with an out-going personality. Born May 24, 1917, at Nerville, Sask., he went to school in Moose Jaw and won a bachelor of commerce degree at Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., at the age of 18.

He was married in 1938.

Between joining the federal Liberals in 1956 and becoming provincial Liberal leader in 1959, Mr. Thatcher had two federal elections, both in Assiniboia constituency, to CCFer Hazen Argue, his former Commons deskmate who later followed him in defection to the Liberal party.

'Jolly Jawn' Calls The Wings ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Abel, Imlach Predict Third-Bout Win

By DAVE BETTS

DETROIT (CP)—If confidence could win hockey games, there would be no loser in tonight's third bout of the Stanley Cup finals.

Detroit Red Wings, who relaxed at Toledo, Ohio, Wednesday by taking in the horse races, were buoyed by their tenacious 4-3 overtime win in Toronto Tuesday and looked upon the hockey world as their oyster as they prepared for a two-game home-ice stand.

Toronto Maple Leafs, defending cup champions and winners of the first game in Toronto Saturday by virtue of a last-minute flourish, arrived here late Wednesday night in a high-spirited and jovial mood.

Detroit Coach Sid Abel, who says his unusual combination of middle-aged veterans and pick-checked rookies still haven't started in the series as hard as they can, said Wednesday: "We should be flying Thursday night."

Punch Imlach of Toronto, ran the oldest team in the National Hockey League through a stiff workout Wednesday at the Gardens in Toronto and declared: "My guys are more than capable of taking the Wings if they are willing to hustle."

WINGS HAD HUSTLE

All the hustle belonged to the Wings Tuesday when they outshot the Leafs 49-33 and controlled the puck as if it had a steering wheel on it.

Only goalie Johnny Bower, who had no chance on Larry Jeffrey's overtime winner, kept the score from being, say 15-3.

Old pro Gordie Howe, who laid out the pass for Jeffrey's coup de grace, said the whole thing was a mistake, one of the most fortunate mistakes of his career.

"I got caught out there on a line change," said Howe. "Floyd Smith was supposed to be on with Jeff and Normie (Ullman). I guess I'm either too fast or too slow for those kids. I don't know which. It was a mistake at any rate."

That's the type of mistake that the Wings or any team can enjoy in what Imlach calls "a game of mistakes."

Jack Adams, former Red Wing coach and general manager, predicts that his old club now will go all the way to win the Stanley Cup for the first time in nine years.

"The way they're working, they're bound to get results. Anything else than winning the cup would be a blamed shame," said Adams.

Defenceman Carl Brewer, who suffered a rib injury in he seventh semi-final game against Montreal Canadiens, accompanied the Leafs here Wednesday night but said he was not certain about dressing for tonight's game.

CARL PLAGUED AGAIN

Brewer is having his second straight year of playoff problems. In last year's series he broke an arm which kept him out of action until late in the fall. The rib separation suffered last week forced him to the sidelines for the first two Detroit games.

Spare defenceman Kent Douglas and extra forward Ed Litzenberger were left in Toronto, while Imlach and his final lineup for tonight would not be decided until just before game time.

One of the big factors in Detroit's win over Toronto and their come-from-behind semi-final victory over Chicago Black Hawks was the team's ability to surmount cold and overwhelm the favored opposition with their relentless drive.

How attribute it to the players' respect for Abel and to Abel's easy - going coaching method.

"The players would do anything for Sid," says Howe. "He just tells us to give 100-per-cent effort and assures us there will be no complaints no matter what happens. This seems to give everyone a lift, especially the kids.

The 13,800-seat Olympia was sold out early for the games tonight and Saturday. The Detroit and Windsor Ont., areas are blacked out for home television.

The fifth game will be in Toronto Tuesday and the sixth, if necessary, back here next Thursday.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

The newly-formed Eastern Ontario Baseball Association emerges from its organizational cradle in Port Hope Friday night, cuddling important excerpts from a proposed league constitution.

The executive, headed by President Jack Carson of this city, consisting of outstanding baseball men of the province will go to the "floor" for ratification of rules and by-laws, some of which may prove controversial.

The executive consists of first-vice Arnold Wade, Newtonville; second-vice Bill Rawlinson, Peterborough, third-vice Jim Gilmer, Port Hope; secretary-treasurer Spero Annis, Peterborough, and assistant secretary C. R. Carveth, Newcastle.

The association executive plans to take over a rigid control of baseball in this part of the province.

It has divided the territory into three zones. Representatives of the zones will be added to the main executive body.

It is suggested the association will operate on an individual team basis rather than leagues and associations as originally planned.

In other words a club may join the association even if its league decides to remain neutral. But non-member teams will not be eligible to participate in playdowns.

A constitution clause which will likely draw argumentation from the working body is the suggested one-game automatic suspension of a player who has been tossed out of a game.

All umpires' association within the jurisdiction of the association will be requested to join. These will come under the association control. Charges of "provocation" brought by players given the heave-ho will be studied by a special ad-hoc committee.

"Doesn't the operation of the league on a team basis smack a little of dictatorship?" President Carson was asked.

"Not in the least," was his quick reply. "The idea is to eliminate some of the petty bickerings that are prevalent within some leagues, and which cannot be settled satisfactorily to all concerned. Association administration should clear these things up."

A complete program has been set covering the operations of the new association for the 1964 season. This will be presented at the Friday night meeting set for the Legion hall in Port Hope, starting eight o'clock.

Registration of all classifications from minors to seniors will be accepted and an important item on the agenda is the drafting of leagues for these classifications.

The operation of the new association depends largely on the attendance Friday night—and the number of entries submitted.

As a matter of fact I understand its existence depends on the outcome of the get-together.

At a prior meeting it was suggested that some champions of the EOBA would advance to Ontario Baseball Association playdowns. This is a good idea since it eliminates a lot of extra travel, transportation expenses, besides declaring provincial champions before the snow flies.

Representatives of baseball clubs and leagues in this area who favor administration of the sport by a main central body are strongly advised to attend the meeting at Port Hope on Friday.

Allan Cup Western Finals

Maroons Back In Running

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons, who said they would quit the western Allan Cup hockey finals rather than take a time-consuming trip for a mid-week game, are back in the picture because of an anonymous benefactor.

Bob Alexander, Manitoba representative of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, informed the Maroons Wednesday they will be flown to Saskatoon and back next Wednesday so the players won't have to take time off their jobs.

Cost of the charter flight will be paid by the CAHA and a third party whom Alexander refused to identify.

As a result, the best-of-seven series between the Maroons and Saskatoon Quakers will open here as scheduled Friday night with the second game Sunday afternoon.

After the airlift third game next Wednesday, fourth and fifth games will be in Saskatoon April 24 and 27. The remaining two, if necessary, will be back in Winnipeg April 29 and 30.

The debate, which Tuesday night saw Maroons manager Bud Hoohan withdrew verbally from the finals despite a CAHA suspension threat, hinged on a game originally slated for Saskatoon Saturday, April 25, as the fourth in the series. The Quakers later informed the CAHA the Saskatoon area would not be available on that date and it was moved ahead two days to next Wednesday.

CANCEL RACES

LINCOLN, R.I. (AP) — A power failure Wednesday night forced cancellation of a night nine-race program at Lincoln Downs.

Toronto Wins Cage Title

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Kings defeated Winnipeg Buffaloes 75-64 Wednesday to win the best-of-three Canadian senior men's basketball championship in straight games. Toronto won the first game 76-54 and the second 80-63.

Playing coach Fred Ingalsbon of Winnipeg was the high point-getter of the series with 68. Barry Howson of Toronto was second with 50 points in the three-game set.

Ignites Six-Run Outburst

'Moose' Gores Angels With Homer

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The Moose is back in his home pasture.

After a miserable season with Los Angeles Dodgers, Bill Skowron is roaming his accustomed ranges in the American League, where he was nine profitable years with New York Yankees before being shipped off to exile.

The 33-year-old first baseman officially marked his return from the National League Wednesday night with a home run that ignited a six-run outburst in the second inning, providing Washington Senators, his new employers, with their biggest lead in two years.

It also carried last year's cellar occupants to a 6-5 victory over Los Angeles Angels in the only AL game of the day.

Skowron's home run, his first big as a Senator, was his first in the league since Sept. 25, 1962. The single after that homer, which incidentally was against the Senators, the Yankees sent batting for Steve Hodges.

Skowron might not have felt like an alien in the National League, but his .200 average didn't exactly make him feel as if he belonged.

He wound up the regular season with a mere four home runs and 19 runs batted in before erupting in the World Series and helping the Dodgers to a four-game sweep of his former teammates.

HE WAS SOLD

Another two months had elapsed after the series when Los Angeles sold him to Washington. Plummeting from a world champion to a cellar dweller might have been a brutal descent, but Skowron at least is back where he believes he can hit.

Following the Moose's big blow Wednesday night, starting pitcher Dennis Daniels singled to score run, Blasingame and Chuck Hinto drove in the last pair with a triple.

Jim Fregosi had homered with Billy Moran aboard for a 2-0 Los Angeles lead in the first inning. The Angels made it close with two unearned runs in the sixth.

John Kennedy was the fielding star for the Senators, making three outstanding plays at third base. His spectacular grab of Joe Adcock's smash in the seventh halted a threatened rally.

The Senators go after their second victory tonight against Minnesota Twins. The Yankees and Boston Red Sox try to get their season under way for the third time today at New York. Rain washed out their scheduled opener again Baltimore Orioles visit Chicago White Sox in the only other AL game.

BUY WINGER

LONDON (AP) — Liverpool, closing in on the English League soccer title, bought right winger John Connelly from Burnley team Wednesday for $115,000. Liverpool needs only one tie in its remaining four games to clinch the Division 1 championship.

Willie's Third Homer Sparks Giants

Cards Whip Dodgers

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

They're tearing down the Polo Grounds and Willie Mays is ripping up Candlestick Park.

Mays, 3,000 miles and seven years removed from New York's Polo Grounds, hammered his third home run in two games Monday night, touching off a 10-run third inning uprising that carried the Giants to a 10-8 victory over Milwaukee Braves.

It was the biggest inning for the Giants since the team pulled out of New York and moved west after the 1957 season.

St. Louis Cardinals rapped Don Drysdale for five runs in the eighth inning en route to a 6-2 victory over Los Angeles for their first triumph over the world champion Dodgers in five regular-season games.

Bill Virdon drew a bases-loaded walk in the 12th inning that forced in the winning run in Pittsburgh Pirates' 5-4 decision over Chicago Cubs, and Jim Bunning won his first game as a National Leaguer by pitching Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-1 victory over New York Mets.

The Giants started rolling in the third after winning pitcher Jack Sanford drew a two-out walk off Bob Sadowski. Before it was over the Giants had scored nine hits, including a three-run homer by Mays and a three-run double by Sanford his second hit in the inning.

THEY HOMER

Ed Bailey and Eddie Mathews homered for the Braves.

The Cardinals' winning rally also was started by the winning pitcher as Bob Gibson stroked a single. After Gibson was sacrificed to second, Drysdale intentionally walked Bill White but got crossed up on his strategy by hitting Charley James with a pitch.

Key Boyer then rapped a two-run single that broke a 1-1 tie and Johnny Lewis, Curt Flood and Tim McCarver followed with run-scoring singles. Frank Howard got a run back for the Dodgers in the ninth with his second homer in two days.

Cub rookie Fred Norman, supported by Ernie Banks' three-run homer, carried a 4-1 lead into the ninth before the Pirates struck. Stocky Burgess drove in two runs with a ninth-hit single before Virdon singled home the tying run.

In the 12th, Bob Bailey led off with a single against Don Elston and eventually reached third on a wild pitch. Elston issued two intentional walks, loading the bases, before unintentionally walking Virdon.

Bunning, acquired in a trade with Detroit, got his first NL victory when Tony Gonzalez hit a three-run homer in the eighth inning. The blast followed an error by Tim Harkness on a two-out grounder that should have ended the inning.

The bobble ruined a promising day for the first baseman from Lachine, Que., who had three of the seven hits off Bunning and singled in the Mets' only run in the fifth inning.

Allan Cup Eastern Final

Woodstock Takes Opener 7-2

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP)—Woodstock Athletics, who lost only two of 28 home games this season, continued their mastery Wednesday night, walloping Ottawa Montagnards 7-2 in the first of their best-of-seven Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals.

The Athletics got another chance to display their backyard prowess in the second game, scheduled here Friday. The series then moves to Ottawa for two games.

A crowd of 1,500 fans saw the Athletics register their first goal after 58 seconds of the first period. They outscored the visitors 3-1 in both the second and third periods.

Toby Black was the leading scorer for the Woodstock crew, counting twice. Gerry Stringle, Jaard's goal.

Ron Mason, Tommy Wilson, Gord Sampson and Jon Hergott were the other marksmen.

Andre Despard counted both Ottawa goals.

Driver, 20 Picks Whip Over Stick

TORONTO (CP)—Every time 20 - year - old Allan Waddell cracks the whip he drives himself farther out of contention for a jockey career—but he doesn't mind.

Waddell, who combines hockey with harness racing, has three wins, five seconds and four thirds to his credit at Greenwood Raceway. He fired at goals last season to lead South Mountain to the St. Lawrence - Ottawa Valley League championship.

"But I wouldn't consider a hockey career now," Waddell said Wednesday in an interview. "The racing and hockey seasons clash and I would sooner race than play."

Waddell grew up with horses on his father's farm at Oxford Mills, Ont. about 50 miles south of Ottawa. When he was 16 he began driving at such tracks as Connaught, Blue Bonnet and Richelieu. Last year he guided 60 winners at Blue Bonnet and Rideau-Carleton Raceways.

Three years ago he was scouted by Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League but as yet is still a free agent. He hopes to play for Morrisburg, Ont., intermediate hockey team next season.

Pickerel Run 'A Trickle'

INNISVILLE, Ont. (CP)—A few years ago the walleyes moved up the Innisville River and rapids by the thousands as they struggled to reach their spawning grounds.

But this year for the fourth successive spring the number of pickerel moving upstream from Mississippi Lake has been reduced to a trickle compared with other years.

The annual pickerel migration to spawning beds at the Innisville gaps sanctuary just above the village of Innisville was a major attraction in past years for fishermen and tourists. At the height of the run, the river and rapids became a seething mass of wriggling fish tumbling over each other as they headed upstream.

However, again this year the number of pickerel moving to the spawning beds can be seen only in small schools. This may be due in part to the coldness of the water.

Mrs. W. P. Kilfoyle, operator of a small store at Innisville, 60 miles southwest of Ottawa, who has watched the run for the last 44 years, said Wednesday that only small schools of walleye are moving upstream in dribs and drabs.

MAY IMPROVE

"The ice had gone from the river, but the water still is cold," she said. "We expect that with warmer water there will be an increase in the run but we don't expect a spectacular one this year."

Spectators may watch the run from two bridges spanning the Innisville River. Fishing is not permitted during the run.

The spawning grounds are located in shallow Sandy Bays a short distance upstream from the village. After laying their eggs—as many as 20,000 a fish —the pickerel return to the lakes a mile or so downstream.

Conservation officials have no explanation for the heavy drop in the annual run but local fishermen believe that it is caused partly by overfishing of pickerel in Mississippi Lake.

The lands and forests department restocked the lake last year with some 500,000 pickerel fry. However, it will be three or four years before these fish —or those which survived— move upstream to spawn.

CHOOSE SITE

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP)—The University of Waterloo will be the site of the 18th annual all-Ontario high school track and field championships May 30. Sponsored by the Ontario Federation of Secondary School Athletic Associations, the meet is expected to attract more than 600 male competitors from about 200 schools.

NHL May Offer New Cup Trophy

TORONTO (CP) — Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, thinks it's time his organization offered a new trophy.

"I've been thinking about it for about three years now," said Campbell. "We should have a trophy to honor the best player in the Stanley Cup finals. The details haven't been worked out yet because I would like to get ideas from various people.

"Baseball and football have special awards for a player who is outstanding in the World Series, National Football League and Grey Cup finals and I think we should have something along the same lines."

Campbell admitted this is strictly his idea and that he has not discussed it with league governors.

Reminded that the awards presented in baseball and football are not league honors but are sponsored commercially, Campbell replied:

"We certainly wouldn't have this trophy sponsored. The league would put up both the trophy and money. There are any number of people the award could be named after. But, as I say, all I have is the basic idea right now. The details have to be ironed out. The governors of the league would have to make the final decision."

Horse Drops Dead During Stretch Run

MIAMI (AP) — Fog Bank dropped dead in the second race at Gulfstream Park Wednesday and started a two-horse spill that sent jockey Eddie Truman to hospital.

Fog Bank, apparently suffering a heart attack, went down in the stretch drive and Truman fell heavily to the track.

Busy Wac, under William Mountjoy, also went down, and Ramblin Wreck threw his rider, Walter Blum.

Truman was reported to have apparently suffered a dislocated shoulder. Mountjoy was bruised and shaken. Blum, leading rider at the meeting with 44 winners, suffered no injuries but cancelled his mounts for the rest of the day.

West Wants Two-Loop Jr. League

REGINA (CP) — The Leader-Post says junior hockey officials will meet within the next two weeks in an attempt to establish a format for a two-division Western Canada junior hockey league.

A typical story says Frank Boucher, commissioner of the Saskatchewan Junior League, will invite the support of all Prairie clubs in establishing the loop, which could be in operation by next fall.

One division would comprise Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon, Regina and two Winnipeg teams. The other would have entries from Estevan, Weyburn, Moose Jaw and Melville, all in Saskatchewan, and Brandon and Flin Flon in Manitoba.

Under the new plan, each National League team would be asked to contribute $25,000 to the league and the money would be divided proportionately among the 12 clubs. In return the NHL could handle the distribution of players through a pool or draft.

To become a reality the plan first must be approved at a meeting of Western Canada junior officials, expected to be held at Estevan.

ALS SIGN END

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference announced the signing Wednesday of Lou Fogle a 22-year-old offensive and defensive end from Clemson College, South Carolina. Fogle, six feet two inches and 225 pounds, was the second leading pass receiver with Clemson in 1962.

Mighty Centennial Event

The Longest Canoe Race in the World!

By ARCH MacKENZIE

OTTAWA (CP) — Efforts to sell the idea of the longest canoe race in the world to Canada's 1967 birthday planners are to be made this year.

The plan is to have 50 two-man teams of paddlers start Oct. from Edmonton Monday, May 25, 1967. If all goes as scheduled, the survivors would reach St. Helen's Island at Montreal 103 days later on Sept. 2. Prize money might be as much as $100,000.

En route the entrants would traverse by paddle and portage the historic route originally traced by Samuel de Champlain in 1815, Pierre Radisson in 1651 and others in later years, including Henry Kelsey in 1691-92 and Sir Alexander Mackenzie.

It was the all-Canadian route for the fur traders who first provided the linkage between regions that were to become the Canadian nation.

The idea was first suggested by Gene Rheaume, Progressive Conservative MP for the Northwest Territories. He turned it over to Ivo Fiin Flon, Man., men with experience in handling that northern community's annual Gold Rush Canoe Derby which is run in three 50-mile sprints.

WON'T BE NON-STOP

Mr. Rheaume's brother Jim and Norm Tyson have worked out suggestions for running, financing and planning the event. After further discussions with them, Mr. Rheaume then hopes to submit a final proposal to John Fisher, commissioner of the Centennial administration.

Some features of the draft planning to date:

—Mr. Rheaume says he has had responses from some canoe clubs but, more important in his view at this stage, a promising reaction from people who seem to like the idea.

—The entrants would be limited to 50 two - man teams, perhaps five from each province wearing provincial colors.

—The proposed course would have to be examined in detail and covered by race officials in 1965. It follows the North Saskatchewan River from Edmonton to Manitoba and then continues downstream touching Lake Winnipegosis, Lake Manitoba, the Assiniboine River, Red River, Lake Winnipeg, Winnipeg River and eastward via lakes and rivers to Lake Superior, Lake Huron, the French River and then the Ottawa River at Mattawa, Ont.

—The race would be run on a day - by - day basis with the winning team being the one holding the total accumulated time and the schedule tied to centennial celebrations along the way.

SUGGEST LOTTERY

An added feature might be a mobile exhibit of early exploration and fur-trade relics or displays accompanying the racers at least part of the way.

A lottery is suggested as a way of financing the cost, amounting to perhaps $1,000,000. However, this would require an amendment to the Criminal Code and it seems unlikely at this time.

Other possible means of financing are federal-provincial-municipal grants, a federal grant or promotion of all or part of the race by commercial sponsors.

SELLING CANOE RACE — An Edmonton-Montreal canoe race, the idea of Gene Rheaume, Progressive Conservative MP for the Northwest Territories, will be proposed to Centennial Commissioner John Fisher as part of 1967 Centennial celebrations. The plan is to have 50 two-man teams of paddlers start from Edmonton May 24 and run mainly along the Saskatchewan River, across Lake Winnipeg and Northern Ontario and along the north shore of Lake Superior, arriving at Montreal about Labor Day. PLAN SOCCER LOOP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bert Miller, chairman of the British Columbia Soccer Commission, said Wednesday the first step has been taken toward organizing a West Coast soccer league which he predicts will be operating within three years. He said a special meeting will be held in Los Angeles April 23. He proposes a league with two entries from Vancouver and one each from Calgary, Edmonton, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Awards Unique Exhibit Of Professionalism, Glamor

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Academy aftermath—

For the knocking and the ribbing it gives the annual Oscar event remains a unique exhibit of glamor and professionalism.

Everyone gets weary of the parade of recipients with their effusion of thanks. But what would we do in their shoes? The same thing, probably.

The point is that the Academy Awards are a contest. That's why most of us sit through the dreary speeches and the limitless commercials to find out who is going to win.

That doesn't mean that Oscar can't be improved. As Debbie Reynolds pointed out before the event, lack of participation of Hollywood's top names is shocking. Only a handful of stars outside of those who were presenters or nominees attended.

Five or 10 years ago, most of Hollywood's big names put on their best furs and feathers to make the Oscar bash the ultimate in 'glamor.'

Today the studios no longer wield the power to make the stars turn out in numbers, and apparently the actors feel no civic responsibility to do so. Monday night Rock Hudson appeared in white tie and tails to usher cameras into the auditorium at the beginning of the telecast. Then he dashed home to watch the show on television.

PARTY VIEWING

Many other stars form parties to view the Oscar cast on the home screen. They wouldn't think of driving all the way to Santa Monica (five to 10 miles) and facing those crowds.

This year's results evoked as much satisfaction as any since 1956, when Marty came through with the clinkerdin win. The crowd was pulling for Sidney Poitier, who won for Lilies of the Field made in 14 days, over much more costly entires. The fact that he is a Negro was not overlooked by the voters, but that does not detract from his performance.

Patricia Neal, whose Hud role was scarcely more than supporting, scored another popular victory. Again, sympathy was not overlooked, since she has been plagued with personal tragedy. But she also is a consummate performer.

Melvin Douglas won over the highly touted John Huston and Hugh Griffith.

The British beachhead didn't materialize, although the voters were happy to reward Tom Jones, Margaret Rutherford and Tony Richardson. It was a well-balanced ballot, and everyone, including some of the losers, were pleased.

PLANS COMEBACK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Veteran tennis star Pancho Gonzales announced Wednesday he is returning to the professional wars, ending a retirement of almost three years. Gonzales, 35, said he would compete in the full series of pro tournaments mapped out by the International Professional Tennis Players Association starting May 19 at Washington, D.C.

Canadian Press Sports Editor

"Frank Udvari is the worst referee in the National Hockey League," fumed Toronto Coach Punch Imlach. Punch's remarks were made last Saturday after the first period of the Detroit-Toronto Stanley Cup game with the Red Wings ahead 3-1.

A few reporters were around to record the words, but where was Punch after the game, which Maple Leafs won 5-2 on a pair of third-period goals? He had vanished from the Leaf dressing-room before reporters could get to him.

And no wonder. It certainly would have been a twist to hear a winning coach complain about the officiating while his athletes were whooping it up.

Imlach's appraisal of Udvari followed the pattern set by coaches in playoffs, and during the NHL season, over the years. They, and some of their players, make probably a dozen or more mistakes during a game and they take the heat off themselves at times by picking on the guys in striped shirts.

SID ABEL FINED

Udvari, a 39-year-old insurance man from Kitchener, Ont., has been officiating in the big leagues for seven years, has had his share of barbs directed at him. Two years ago, Coach Sid Abel of the Wings said, among other things, that Udvari was "gutless" when he awarded Chicago Black Hawks a disputed goal in the Stanley Cup semi-finals.

Abel was hit for a $300 fine by League President Clarence Campbell.

This prompted Vern DeGeer of the Montreal Gazette to do a little researching. It showed that charges against NHL officials spoken man by team officials and players have resulted in fines totalling $3,300 plus since 1961.

This total, said DeGeer doesn't count the $25 and $50 fines.

DeGeer recalled the spring of 1961, and another Stanley Cup playoff between Detroit and Chicago. The Wings won the fourth game of the best-of-seven series 3-1 and after the game Chicago Manager Tommy Ivan charged that the two winning goals were scored with two men in the Hawk penalty-mouth and that Udvari "didn't have the guts to call it."

TROUBLE-FOLLOWS HIM

Campbell rapped Ivan with a $300 fine and Udvari with a $200 fine against then Chicago Coach Rudy Pilous who added a few choice remarks.

Earlier that season, Jack Adams of Detroit was tagged for $200 after saying Udvari of "trying to run Howie Young (a Red Wing chatel) out of the league." And Imlach gave up $200 after a Toronto - Montreal game when he suggested that the "three stars" of the evening were Udvari and his two linesmen.

Incidentally, DeGeer recalls, the 1961 Cup final cost Coach Toe Blake of Montreal Canadiens $2,000 when he took a swing at another referee, Dalton McArthur.

Wins $63,721, Takes It Home In Cold Cash

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A former public relations man won a $63,721 twin double on a single bunch bet at Golf stream Park Wednesday and took the winnings home in cash.

The winner, Vincent Palmisano, 50, of Miami, said "with me opening a restaurant next week, this money sure came at an opportune time."

Palmisano said he found a piece of paper on the floor of the restaurant Tuesday night bearing the numbers 3, 7, 8, 1. On a hunch, he based his selections on the numbers and walked off with the big prize. He turned down a check, usually given for a big payoff.

Only one ticket was sold on the winning combination.

The last horse in the twin double, BeHast, figured in a $77,040 twin double on March 26 when the ninth race on that date and paid $67.40. He won the ninth race again Wednesday and paid $47.

The other horses in Palmisano's winning combination were Swift Stream in the fifth, $14.40; Brilliant Noelle in the sixth, $5.80, and Gallant Chief II in the eighth, $20.80.

The record twin double payoff is $84,114.20, won here March 3. The $63,721 was fourth highest of the meeting.

Format of "The Nurses" To Undergo Some Changes

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—After two years and more than 60 programs, there are going to be some changes in CBS' The Nurses.

"We've got to find a way to enlarge the show's platform and involve more people — mostly men—connected with the hospital," says Executive Producer Herbert Brodkin.

The producer believes the television fad for "realistic drama" is just about over.

"I don't think there's anything wrong with them — great playwrights have always been able to deal with serious stuff, but they were able to turn it into good entertainment. I don't think Hollywood can do that, not with all its limitations and pre-censoring of scripts."

WON FIRST AWARD

Twilight Zone creator Rod Serling won the first Peabody Award ever bestowed on a writer for his 1956 TV drama, Requiem for a Heavyweight.

CBS Reports Wednesday night tackled tobacco's economic, moral and ethical implications raised by recent British and U.S. government reports linking cigarette smoking and cancer.

The subject affects an $8,000,000,000 year in taxes provides income for almost 1,000,000 persons and is of concern to doctors, clergymen, educationists and parents.

The program covered carefully, and with fairness, all shades of opinion. Tobacco industry spokesmen had an opportunity to state their positions as well as government officials, representatives of broadcasting, advertising, school authorities and students themselves.

Canadian Team Learned Something Says Bauer

Communist Athletics 'Window-Dressing'

VICTORIA (CP)—The coach of Canada's hockey team in the 1964 Winter Olympics says an aim of Eastern European teams was "to goad us into penalties and possibly rough play, and then equate this with Western culture in its advanced state of decay."

Rev. David Bauer said the Canadian team's tour of Russia and Czechoslovakia showed that Communist countries are pouring the bulk of their finances into military and space projects and the rest as "window dressing" for peaceful coexistence.

"Athletes and artists are part of the window dressing—part of a philosophy that is alien to freedom and is, in fact, oppressive."

Father Bauer, a teacher of philosophy and theology at St. Mark's College of the University of B.C., said the Canadian players "learned something equivalent to two years on the university level."

"They learned what it is that distinguishes us from other nations of the world. That is that we are free beings."

Speaking to a meeting of Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night, he said the Russian hockey team "practised four hours a day for the last five years."

"In three months, with a team 4½ years younger, we stayed nip and tuck except for the very last."

Father Bauer recalled that after Canada's last game at Innsbruck, it lost to Russia, "zero mathematician had gone to work on the final standings and dropped us from third to fourth."

One of the players, Marshall Johnston, on hearing the decision had thrown a chair, Father Bauer and his teammates and said:

"We can safely conclude that the shepherd and his flock have been fleeced."

ESCAPE TO WEST

MINDEN (Reuters) — Two young East German glider pilots who had never flown a powered plane made a daring 60-mile escape to West Germany in a stolen private aircraft early Thursday. They made a blind takeoff in darkness from an airfield under the noses of Russian military units, and landed in a cornfield here. Their they two-seater single - engined plane came down about 800 feet from a landing area in a perfect landing.

Mets Pulled 'Fast One' On Dodgers

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Los Angeles Dodgers of the National League charged movement loss this delighted with the New York Mets' deal of Duke Snider to San Francisco.

When the Dodgers parted with the veteran outfielder for $40,000 last year they figured they were doing the last-place Mets a favor.

Buzzy Bavasi, general manager of the Dodgers, said Wednesday that the Mets "called me three or four times. They cried that they needed Snider for a gate attraction. They also said the deal would help the league and help their club."

"So what happens? They turn around and sell the guy to the Giants without even the courtesy of a phone call to me, asking if we want to buy him back."

Would the Dodgers have bought him?

"Before letting him go to the Giants? Yes."

"Truthfully, I don't feel that Snider's going to the Giants will change the complexion of the race, but I'm a little burned up in principle."

First Picton Cubs, Scouts Hold Banquet

PICTON (Staff) — About 118 attended the annual Father and Son Night of the First Picton Cubs and Scouts held last night at the Parish Hall of St. Mary Magdalene Church.

The First Picton is the oldest troop in Picton having received its charter back in 1921, when Rev. Lewis Barber was the rector at the Anglican church.

The First now boasts of having 35 Cubs and 16 Scouts, and also has one more singular distinction. They have a man and wife as Cubmaster and Scoutmaster. Peter Nash is the Scoutmaster; his wife is the Akela, or Cubmaster.

One of the highlights of the evening came when Cub Jeffrey Cowman offered a toast to the fathers. Sheriff Herbert J. Cull- ver responded to the toast, offering his sincere congratulations for an excellent job by the young Cub.

Another highlight came when seven Scouts put on a one act play showing the trials and tribulations of an editor publishing a magazine.

Elzwanian Bill Strachan, who has probably taught more young people to swim than many people twice his age, announced that 21 Cubs had passed their tests and were to be awarded Kiwanis Club crests.

The crests were presented by Dr. Lionel Dockrill, past-president of Kiwanis.

Member Picked To Serve on 3 Committees

PICTON — Prince Edward-Lennox M.P., Douglas Alkenbrack has been appointed this year to serve on three committees for the government and to serve on four Progressive Conservative party committees and secretary to the committee.

He is a member of the agriculture and colonization committee, of the mines, forests and waters committee and of the miscellaneous petrols bills committee, all standing committees of the House of Commons. These appointments were announced April 10.

In the Progressive-Conservative party caucus, he has been named a member of the agriculture, external affairs, forestry and industry committees, and secretary of the trade and commerce committee.

Car Rammed From the Rear

PICTON — At 5.20 p.m. yesterday a rear-end collision on No. 14 highway two miles south of Rossmore caused damage estimated at $400 to a car driven by Miss Mary Jean Waterhouse, age 20 of R.R. 1 Ameliasburg and a vehicle being driven by 45-year-old William Charles Rutan of R.R. 1 Bath, Ontario.

Provincial police said the Waterhouse vehicle was slowed down and had stopped to make a left hand turn, when the Rutan car smashed into the rear of it.

There were no injuries reported. The accident is still under investigation.

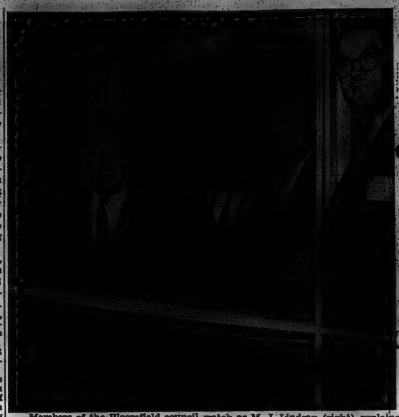
Bloomfield To Have New Phone Exchange



PICTON (Staff) — On Sunday, April 19th, some 650 Bell Telephone users in the Bloomfield area will have brand new phone numbers.

This is the day the Bell Telephone Company will throw the switch that will connect Wellington, Bloomfield and Picton into one toll free exchange. It will then be possible for any subscriber in these three Prince Edward County areas to phone each other at no cost, for long distance charges.

The Council of Bloomfield, and other guests were taken on a tour of the new Bloomfield Exchange Building on Wednesday afternoon by Mr. M. G. Sweeney—and his associates, from Belleville. These men explained in detail just how the new system works.

Mr. Sweeney estimated it would cost the company $300,000 for the changeover.

Actually it means that the 650 subscribers who live within about a five-mile radius of Bloomfield, and who have been on the Picton exchange using the prefix Greenwood, will now be changed over to Bloomfield and will have the prefix of 393 preceding their four digit number. Yes it will be necessary to dial all seven numbers.

A word of advice to anyone wishing to call anyone living in the Bloomfield area -- look up the number in your phone book -- it will save you a lot of time.

OTTAWA, QUEBEC AGREE ON PENSIONS

All Provinces, 'Even Ontario', Likely Included

Nature of Compromise Is Being Kept Secret

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa and Quebec have reached a preliminary agreement on compromise proposals for a national retirement pension plan and the other provinces—even including Ontario—are expected to agree, a highplaced government source said today.

The source, declining to be identified because of Prime Minister Pearson's plan to announce details in the Commons Monday, said the federal government now is awaiting replies from the premiers of the other provinces to the compromise suggestion.

The nature of the compromise is being kept secret while the provinces consider it, but the source told The Canadian Press that there now is complete agreement between Ottawa and Quebec and it is of a nature that seemingly will be eagerly accepted by the other provinces.

Prime Minister Pearson is known to have been in direct touch with Premier Robarts of Ontario on the compromise, keeping him informed of the negotiations undertaken with Quebec by senior government officials.

As behind-the-scenes negotiations continued in the hope of producing a pension formula acceptable to Ottawa and the provinces, the question of constitutional roadblocks was raised in the Commons Thursday.

George Nowlan, former Progressive Conservative finance minister, asked whether the government is considering holding a constitutional conference on possible amendments to the British North America Act which would permit the proposed federal pension scheme to embody benefits now considered a provincial responsibility.

Mr. Pearson, who promised to make a statement in the Commons Monday on the latest pension developments, said he hoped that the federal plan could embody such benefits without having to convene a full-scale constitutional conference.

He also hoped to throw some light on this question in Monday's statement.

In the Quebec legislature Thursday, Premier Lesage renamed tight-lipped on negotiations.

Mr. Lesage, asked by Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson whether there was any good new news to report from Ottawa, said he hadn't been talking with Ottawa but understood the "sun is shining as brightly in Ottawa as it is here."

Gen. de Gaulle Has Undergone Minor Operation

Expect French Leader In Hospital Ten Days

The 73-year-old president entered the hospital Thursday night about 8 p.m. and was operated on about 8 a.m. today.

The operation lasted slightly more than one hour, the sources said, and was performed by Professors Pierre Aboulker and Roger Courvelaire.

De Gaulle is expected to remain in the hospital for 10 days, informed sources said.

The staff of the hospital's Pavillon Ollie Ward were told at about 10 a.m. that Gen. de Gaulle's operation had been "satisfactory," the sources said.

The staff was asked to maintain strict secrecy over the operation, the sources added.

FOR GLAND TROUBLE

The commercial radio station Europe No. 1 said the president underwent a "slight" prostate gland operation.

Sources close to the office of Premier Georges Pompidou told reporters the operation—the second which they did not disclose—had been envisaged for some months and said there was no cause for anxiety.

De Gaulle is known to understand French political chess, sitting two and wounding a third Turk in patrol.

SEE PATROL MOVE

In the second clash, the Greeks say a four-man Turkish patrol was seen moving out on Bondag (White Cliffs Peak), the main Turkish stronghold and last line of the Turkish defence before the vital main road from Nicosia to Kyrenia, passing through the pass about 1,000 feet down the mountain.

The Greeks claimed they opened fire on the Turkish patrol from their own advanced position on a nearby peak less than 150 yards from Bondag, with the result that all four Turks were hit.

MAKARIOS RETURNS

President Makarios returned here by air Thursday night from a six-day trip to Athens and confirmed he had invited former EOKA independence leader George Grivas to return to the island to head the newly formed 30,000-man National Guard.

"But he (Grivas) has not yet accepted my invitation," the archbishop said.

Mountain Skirmishes Continue

CP from AP-Reuters

NICOSIA — Skirmishing between Greeks and Turks high on mountain ridges overlooking the strategic Turkish-held Kyrenia Pass, 10 miles north of Nicosia, broke out again today —for the seventh day running. Canadian UN forces are trying to bring peace to the area.

The sound of heavy machine-gun fire and the crack of rifles reverberated off rocky cliff faces and deep defiles for about two hours, beginning soon after 8 a.m.

Greek sources claimed that in this time they forces twice wiped out Turkish patrols advancing toward Greek-held positions. There was no Turkish confirmation of these claims.

Greek sources said in the first skirmish a three-man Turkish patrol was noticed climbing up a steep mountain slope. They called upon them to surrender, instead of which they opened fire on Greek positions. The Greeks say they returned the fire, killing two and wounding a third Turk in the patrol.

Members Asked To Help

TORONTO (CP)—Arthur A. Wishart, Ontario's new attorney-general, asked members of the legislature Thursday to assist in drawing up legislation which would carry on the fight against crime while not infringing upon civil liberties.

Mr. Wishart, speaking in the legislature for the first time since he became attorney-general three weeks ago, referred to a forthcoming meeting of the legal bills committee to consider Bill 99.

It was this bill which included a section—later killed by the legislature — that would have granted unprecedented powers to the Ontario Police Commission.

Attorney-General Wishart said it was the duty of all members to aim at an effective legislation which would control and prevent an invasion of organized and syndicated crime in Ontario society.

At the same time, members must be certain the rights of individuals were not being taken away. Mr. Wishart said he was sure these two aims could be made compatible.

CASE RESIGNED

Frederick R. Cass, former attorney-general, resigned March 23 after the legislature killed the section of Bill 99 which would have allowed the police commission to imprison persons who refused to testify in secret before it.

Two days later, after the adjournment of the legislature for Easter, Mr. Wishart, 60, was appointed by Premier Robarts to succeed Mr. Cass.

Donald C. MacDonald, leader of the New Democratic Party, recommended possible use of strike-tapping to seek out crime criminals. The government should make a study of electronic advances which allow listening in to telephone calls without the actual physical tapping of wires.

Elmer Sopha (L—Sudbury) chided Mr. MacDonald for his stand. "I always thought the socialists were great defenders of civil liberties," he said.

Mr. MacDonald also rapped the government for its "monumental insensitivity and fumbling ineptitude" in introducing Bill 99.

STATES THEORY

Andrew Thompson (L—Dovercourt) said that Mr. Cass was pressured into introducing Bill 99 by other cabinet ministers and that former attorney-general opposed the legislation.

He said the "men really responsible" for the bill still sit in the house.

Everyone Most Jubilant In Timmins Over Discovery

TIMMINS (CP) — "I know everyone in town is jubilant—if they're not, they should be."

That was the excited reaction Thursday of Le Dr. Villeneuve, mayor of this Northern Ontario mining community, following the announcement by Texas Gulf Sulphur Company of a major zinc, copper and silver strike a few miles north of here.

And everyone was jubilant. Normal work came to a virtual halt as thousands of people thronged the streets, stopping each other to talk with happy excitement about the strike could mean for the future.

For Timmins, which had lived the last two decades under the cloud of seeing its gold mines edging closer to shut-down, it was boom-town time all over again.

"We can look forward to a future, instead of extinction," J. P. Bartleman, one of the town's pioneers and a former mayor, said. "It won't be long before the population of Timmins is doubled."

Excitement and bubbling optimism presented a sharp contrast to the doubts and concern that all residents had lived with for years.

Although Timmins is the centre of one of the world's greatest gold-producing areas—more than $1,500,000,000 worth of the yellow metal had been dug out in its 32-year history—since the end of the Second World War it had found itself, along with most other Canadian communities, caught in the economic squeeze.

Mr. K. Is 70, No Surrender To Old Age

MOSCOW (Reuters) — A proud and unlike Premier Khrushchev said today becoming 70 would not slow him down any because he had she will to work.

"Man may work if he has the will to work, and this is the main thing," the Russian leader said at a Kremlin ceremony in honor of his 70th birthday.

"One must not submit and capitulate to old age. One must keep one's will under control, be master of it and mobilize one's forces for work.

"The joy of life is not merely living — for all creatures are alive — but it lies in the awareness of living and the collective fight for the community.

"This is happiness. This is man's reward."

New Act Causing Trouble

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — All parties in Parliament have agreed in principle to the idea that constituencies should be redistributed, but as for how to go about it—well, that's another thing.

The argument centers plan, spelled out in a bill that spent Thursday grinding slowly through the parliamentary mill, would establish 10 provincial commissions to reshape the electoral boundaries in tune with the 1961 census.

Objections to it poured forth in ballots.

Gilbert Rondeau (Creditiste—Shefford) said there should be four commissions, not 10. Only the seven members of the Creditiste party in the chamber voted for this amendment and it was turned back by 81 members from the other parties.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) objected to the way the four members of each commission would be selected.

Under the bill the provincial chairman would be named by the chief justice of the province from among judges of his court. One member would be appointed by the prime minister, another by the leader of the National Economy Registers 6.6 Per Cent Gain in Year

OTTAWA (CP)—The national economy, ending 1963 on an upbeat note, registered a 6.6-per cent gain in output during the year as the current long-lived business expansion began to rival the two post-war booms.

Gross national product—total value of goods and services produced — reached $43,027,000,000, the bureau of statistics reported Thursday. The increase was $2,658,000,000 over the revised 1962 total of $40,339,000,000.

With prices rising 1.5 per cent —about the same as in 1962— the volume of national production expanded 4.8 per cent compared with 5.1 per cent in 1962.

The 6.6-per-cent GNP rise echoes in the bureau's report — surpassed the estimate of six per cent made only a month ago by Finance Minister Gordon in his budget speech.

As anticipated, the economy's performance in the fourth quarter was the strongest of the year, with gross national product rising 2.9 per cent from the third quarter to an annual rate of $44,352,000,000. Output in real

Threat Made Against Life Of Diefenbaker

SASKATOON (CP) — Under the watchful eye of police officers, Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker Thursday night laid the groundwork for the Progressive Conservative party's campaign in the Saskatoon federal by-election.

Before Mr. Diefenbaker arrived in Winnipeg Thursday, a Saskatoon station reported that an unidentified person telephoned and warned: "You have just one hour to save John Diefenbaker's life."

There were no incidents.

Two RCMP officers watched in Winnipeg as Mr. Diefenbaker held an airport press conference and changed planes. Plainclothes officers were also among the people who met Mr. Diefenbaker when he arrived in Saskatoon.

Final Testimony in Bank's Trial Is Expected to Be Heard Monday

MONTREAL (CP)—Final testimony at the trial of. Hal C. Banks on charges of conspiracy to beat up Capt. Henry Francey, Welsh is expected to be heard Monday.

The defence closed its case Thursday and Judge Claude Wagner adjourned the trial of former president of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada (Ind.) until Monday when the Crown plans to present one more rebuttal witness.

He is J. Desbarats, 71, of Montreal, a former official of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild (CLC) called by the Crown as a rebuttal witness Thursday, disagreed with Banks' own testimony that there had been no dispute between the SIU and the guild in the summer of 1957.

Welsh, then an organizer for the Guild, was beaten up in a parking lot in Owen Sound Aug. 18, 1957. He testified at this trial that he still limps and has a sore back as a result of the beating.

Capt. Desbarats said that, a few days before Welsh was beaten up, Banks told him it was time to do something to "that punk Welsh."

He said Banks called him to his office to complain that Welsh was having discussions with certain marine engineers.

"Banks appeared very agitated . . . he said 'it's about time to take action, time to do something to that punk Welsh.'

He said Richard Greaves, then an official of the National Association of Marine Engineers (CLC), was with him in Banks' office on that occasion.

In the witness box for close to six hours Wednesday and Thursday, the 56-year-old Banks said he had no quarrel with Welsh that summer, had no reason to want to take action against him, and had never ordered any of his men to beat up Welsh.

Two other SIU members, Eldon Richardson, 28, and Paul Cash, 34, gave damaging testimony to that against Banks—conspiracy to commit assault with intent to wound, maim or disfigure—as a result of the Welsh incident.

Banks also denied Crown suggestions that he was partly responsible for various incidents of waterfront violence in recent years. He said his job was to cut down violence not stir it up.

New Bill Of Rights Planned

By BOB EKELL

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts hinted Thursday his government plans to establish an Ontario bill of rights.

The premier said threats to the rights of the people of Ontario were of such concern to him that he already had taken steps to ensure these rights could not be disturbed in any way.

Without specifically mentioning a bill of rights, Mr. Robarts told the legislature his government intended to ensure "forever and under all circumstances" that civil rights in Ontario would be protected.

Outside the house, the premier declined to tell reporters whether he was speaking specifically of a bill of rights. He referred to it as a "device" to safeguard civil rights "in perpetuity."

Asked when any concrete action could be expected from the government, the premier replied: "As fast as I can do it."

Mr. Robarts brought up the subject during a debate in the legislature on the Ontario Police Commission's report on organized crime, tabled March 19.

INTRODUCED BILL

The same day the then attorney-general, Frederick M. Cass, introduced Bill 99 which included a section that would have granted unprecedented powers to the police commission.

The legislation killed the section three days later after a public uproar over provisions which would restrict on civil liberties. The section would have given the police commission power to summon witnesses and imprison them if they refused to testify in secret.

Replying to him, Mr. Robarts said the government must maintain two principles: It must continue to develop ways to deal with crime in the province; but it must be "ever vigilant" to protect individual rights.

Mr. Robarts said some of the recommendations of the Ontario police commission's report on organized crime were bound to

Millard Will Try to Sell SIU Peace Plan to His Old Union

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles H. Millard, former chief of the Steelworkers Union in Canada, steps back briefly today into his former fold amid signs of reluctant support for his actions as a member of the government's trusteeship over maritime unions.

Mr. Millard one of the three trustees in charge of the five unions in the shipping industry, is in the centre of a behind - the - scenes union battle over the wisdom of the trustees' peace plan for the Great Lakes waterfront.

As supervisor of the Seafarers' International Union of Canada, Mr. Millard provoked sharp criticism for his so-called peace pact with the SIU's North American president, Paul Hall, aimed at restoring labor peace to the turbulent shipping industry.

He is scheduled to appear later today before the final session of the two-day policy conference of the United Steelworkers of America—more as old friend than as a trustee under Parliament's law controlling the labor side of the shipping industry.

The big boss of the steel union—David J. McDonald, international president as well as a vice-president of the AFL-CIO —threw his weight Thursday behind Canadian Labor Congress in handling the maritimes situation.

In a recorded statement to the Steelworkers policy meeting, Mr. McDonald said international unions should "accept and respect" the authority of the CLC in Canadian matters.

The effect of his statement was to strengthen the CLC's hand against the AFL-CIO in the United States, which opposes the government's maritime trusteeship.

The officers of the 1,100,000-member CLC, meeting privately in advance of next week's labor convention, are reported to be preparing a full statement on the latest developments in the marine industry.

The trustees, in the deal with Mr. Hall have agreed to let Seafarers' International succeed to the presidency of the Seafarers' Union in Canada. He will succeed Hal C. Banks, ousted last month by the trustees after a federal inquiry announced him as a corrupt and lawless union leader.

Mr. Millard's statement is being drafted in the wake of sharp criticism of the peace plan from New Democrats and Conservatives in the house and from anti-SIU union leaders.

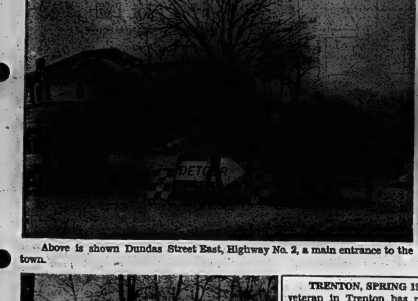
The statement is expected to give support — probably reluctantly — to the arrangements which provide for Mr. McLaughlin's rise to power while promising labor peace on the waterfront.

But sources report the statement could be watered down—even reversed if strong pressure develops from opponents of McLaughlin.

On the economic front, the union reaffirmed its long-standing policy for wage increases, with national parity for all steelworkers, plus a reduction in working time through a shorter work week and extended vacations.

More Bites and Less Bark Needed Against S. Africa

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer



The pressure will soon be on Western governments to put more bite and less bark into their opposition to South Africa's racial policies.

A private conference organized by Afro-Asian countries in London this week is giving serious study to the feasibility and the practical interference will need to be assured that apartheid — separate racial development — could be replaced by a form of orderly government.

Unravel Nature's Code of Life

CHICAGO (AP) — Scientists today announced a major new step toward deciphering the genetic "code" of life itself.

This code determines all your heredity—eye color, size, even partly your chances for long life —and how all living cells behave.

Man's morse code can say anything just with dots and dashes. Nature's genetic code is basically simple too. It uses only four chemical "letters."

But no one knows how nature forms thousands of words or commands with those few letters. A long sentence of these words is a gene.

Now researchers have succeeded in making synthetic bits of genetic material. They know, in advance, the sequence of letters in each simple piece.

These bits of "genes" now can be used to make short pieces of protein—the material all life is made of.

MAY SPELL OUT CODE

By determining what kind of protein is made each time, they could trace back to spell out nature's full code that makes people or animals or plants what they are, and in such tremendous individuality.

The new step is a chemical method of making the synthetic chains of genetic material, or DNA.

These were described to the federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology by a team of University of Wisconsin researchers, headed by Dr. H Godbind Khorana.

volume terms rose 2.3 per cent.

The gain in the October-December quarter was one of the sharpest since the current economic expansion began early in 1961.

The bureau report doesn't call this expansion a boom. But it did that in its first 2¼ years, output in real volume terms rose 17.2 per cent compared with 21 per cent in the comparable period of the 1954-57 capital spending boom and 18 per cent in the 1949-52 Korean War expansion.

The stimulus to last year's growth came from almost every sector of the economy, especially from export sales, consumer spending and capital investment.

Merchandise exports climbed 11 per cent, while imports rose six per cent, to cut Canada's current account deficit with other countries.

Consumer spending advanced 5.8 per cent, buoyed by heavy auto sales, for the largest rise since 1959, while capital expenditures were 7.7 per cent higher than 1962.

On the income side, labor income jumped by 6.8 per cent and before-tax corporation profits rose 7.7 per cent. Accrued net income of farm operators—reflecting sales and year-end stocks of last year's record grain crop—rose 15.5 per cent to the third-highest level on record.

The income available to individuals after direct taxes rose 6.8 per cent—even faster than personal spending. Result was a rise in personal net saving to $2,631,000,000 for the year, equivalent to 8.8 per cent of personal disposable income.

The report noted that after nearly three years of continuous expansion, unemployment still persisted. Despite a rise of more than four per cent in employment in the 12 months to year - end, the seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate was just over five per cent of the labor force in the fourth quarter with output up almost six per cent a year earlier.

The index of industrial production rose 5.8 per cent in the year.

Total exports rose 6.5 per cent from the third quarter to an unusually high annual rate of $5,652,000,000 — mainly to Russian wheat sales.

Investment in new housing, spurred by government housing loans and winter-building incentives, rose 12 per cent, and there were smaller gains in capital spending on new plant and equipment. Consumer spending advanced 2.1 per cent from the third quarter on the strength of heavy new-car buying, up 12 per cent.

Business inventories, after holding steady most of the year, expanded somewhat, but overall spending by governments declined due to cuts in federal outlays.

Minor injuries were caused by those involved in the fights, although there was no property damage.

Addresses of those charged include Ivanhoe, Kaladar, Carlton and Northbrook.

Residential and Commercial Tax Rates Show Decrease And Ratepayers Quite Happy

TRENTON — The 1964 mill rate for the town has been struck — and the news is good.

Residential rate is 90.45 mills; commercial 99.90 mills . . . a reduction of 3.87 mills from 1963's 94.22 residential, a drop of 4.90 mills from 104.90 in 1963 for commercial.

Mayor James MacDonald said that every effort had been made to give the taxpayer the benefit of additional assessment from normal growth and annexation and this year, the Board of Education requirements are lower. The board received higher grants than anticipated in 1963 and this is reflected in the 1964 estimates Education still takes the largest bite out of the taxpayer's dollar, with 42.2 cents going to public and high school purposes. Next highest is the public works' requirements . . . 8.30 cents. Sanitation and waste takes 6.50 cents; the police department budget, 3.90 cents; law enforcement 3.40 cents; social welfare, 6.30 cents; conservation of health, .90 cents; law enforcement 1.40 cents; other protection, 2.70; general government, 3.90; recreation and community services, 2.30; public parking, .90; capital expenditures out of current numbers are 1.30; other uses, 4.00 cents.

"Council's objective," said the mayor, "was to obtain a reduction in the mill rate and, at the same time, construct some of the necessary works which can be done within the capacity of the public works' department." For example, a number of storm sewers and sanitary sewers have been included in the budget. This must be done before road surfacing can be carried out. An addition to the public works building on Meyers Street to cost $8,000 is also included. This will permit the housing of motor vehicles.

EXPECT BUMPER YEAR

"Also," said the mayor, "funds have been provided for some of the basic services needed at the waterfront park on Bay Street. Upon the completion of this work, service clubs will be asked to undertake plaques of the overall plan."

"Present indications are that this will be a bumper year in construction of new buildings in Trenton. The work has commenced on the new A. and P. building. It is expected the new federal building will be started shortly. The demand for housing is increasing and there is more activity in this field than at any time during the past five years.

The land assembly project on Reid Street (formerly North Byron) will be partially developed this year.

All of these augur well for employment and additional assessment in 1964."

The overall budget figure is for $1,883,000, while in 1963 it was $1,758,329.

A complete breakdown of how the money is to be spent this year will be given at Monday night's council meeting.

Mike Weichel Will Present Own Trophy

TRENTON — Oscar W. (Mike) Weichel, Conservative M.P. for Waterloo North, will be the guest speaker at the Vimy-V.E. banquet being held at the Trenton Legion Hall here on Wednesday, April 22.

Arrangements have been made for the Legion-sponsored Trenton Juveniles to be special guests at the banquet. The Legion Juveniles recently won the Ontario Juvenile "A" Minor hockey championship and the Mike Weichel Trophy, defeating St. Thomas three games to two in their titular series.

The town of Trenton is donating a miniature of the Weichel Trophy to each member of the team. The trophies will be presented at the banquet.

The juveniles' Ontario championship is said to be the first won by a Trenton team in Ontario Minor Hockey Association play.

Rod and Gun Club to Build New Clubhouse

TRENTON — The members of the Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Protective Association voted at a meeting in Frankford Wednesday night to erect a $20,000 clubhouse on the association's farm, north of Frankford, this spring, the work to start in the near future. Ten thousand dollars for the project will be raised within the 400-member association; work will be done by the members.

The clubhouse, which will be the largest Rod and Gun Club recreation hall in the province, will be "V" shaped and will contain such things as a kitchen area, a lounge with a fireplace and a basement pistol range.

Sketches of the proposed building were shown to the members on Wednesday by Carl Austen and Roly Whitby.

Club members are assisting Land and Forests officials to guard against poachers at No. 1 dam during the pickerel spawning run. About a dozen members help in the patrols near the dam each night.

At the association farm, pheasants, raised for fall shooting, are starting to lay eggs. Canada Geese are in the pond and the whole farm is starting to take on springlike look.

Grass Fire Always Well Under Control

TRENTON — Reports of a "glow in the sky" from Prince Edward County residents sent reporters scurrying out to Consecon last night, where all seemed in order. A further frenzied and prolonged telephone check finally pinpointed the fire on the farm of Martin Vanderlaan at R. R. 3, Brighton, where Mr. Vanderlaan and his son, William, had set fire to a large field to burn off dead grass. The fire in the field a mile north of Smithfield and a quarter of a mile south of 401 Highway, was never out of control at any time, said Mr. Vanderlaan. He had plowed around the field four times to prevent the fire spreading. However, the anxious neighbors phoned in reports of the fire to the Brighton fire chief, Edwin Boes, and to the department at RCAF Station Trenton.

Trenton firemen were called out yesterday to a fire in a tenant house on the York Road, owned by Gordon Little. Mr. Little was unable to estimate the damage to the roof of the building but said there was "considerable" water damage to the upstairs rooms in the house. Cause of the fire is as yet undetermined.

Children Must Be Fed Says Welfare Officer

SPANISH, Ont. (CP)—Russell Thompson, a provincial welfare department official, said Thursday the department has a responsibility to feed the children of members of the union of electors, who refuse to pay taxes but live on relief.

He said ratepayers in this community, 70 miles west of Sudbury, have complained about the actions of the French-Canadian group, commonly known as the White Tams because of the white berets they wear.

There are no member families receiving relief who are not entitled to it although some have turned down employment opportunities, Mr. Thompson, the Algoma district regional supervisor for the welfare department, said in an interview.

They are treated the same as anyone else, he added. A welfare worker goes into the home and investigates the need and the circumstances.

"It doesn't matter if they wear white, black or blue hats. Relief is granted only on merit," he said.

"We have got to feed their children whether people like it or not. There are no assignment opportunities for them in Spanish and until there are they will stay on relief."

Mayor Charles Thornton of Massey, 15 miles east of here, said Thursday he told one welfare department official that whole council would resign if forced to pay relief to the White Tams.

Nelson Morrissette, chairman of the Shedden Township separate school board, pointed out that the White Tams' Canadians living in Spanish do not support or endorse activities of the group.

Local tax collector Austin Clipperton is a non-resident building owned by White Tammer Maurice Brisson and occupied by a number of other White Tammers, has been placed in the hands of the Sault Ste. Marie sheriff for sale.

He said the property, valued at $8,000, would be sold for approximately $250 in tax arrears.

LIVES ON WELFARE

Mr. Brisson, a father of 18 children, has lived on welfare for the last three years. He drives two cars and acts as spokesman for the local White Tams.

A spokesman for the group at Blind River, 30 miles west of here, said Thursday his group intends to meet the Liberal member of the legislature for Algoma - Manitoulin, Stanley Haidasz.

He said the group has sent Mr. Farquhar a telegram asking him to meet with the White Tams and discuss charges made against them in the legislature this week.

Should We Help China?

Alvin Hamilton is just back from China.

The former minister of agriculture in the Diefenbaker Government says that the Chinese want to buy tremendous quantities of farm machinery, fertilizer, paper, minerals and wheat.

As the man who directed the first large sale of Canadian wheat to China, he probably received authentic information from the Chinese officials with whom he conferred. He is diffident but not modest when they would have to gain by attempting to deceive him.

According to Mr. Hamilton, China has made a "fundamental decision" to attempt to feed, clothe and house its seven hundred million people. That there should be any doubt that a government would embrace such a policy gives us a terrifying insight into the difference between our society and China's, but that such a doubt was justified is easily documented. Not only the Chinese communists in their early years but also the Russian communists attempted to lift themselves by the bootstraps, though knowing this would involve terrible suffering and a heavy toll of human life. That should be, according to Mr. Hamilton, is now to be abandoned. That this decision is basically because the earlier attempt proved ineffective is evident from the fact that Chinese theoreticians are still ready to risk a nuclear war, believing the sheer weight of numbers would enable China to survive.

With its spilt with Russia widening, China is now "hungry for friends," according to Mr. Hamilton.

If he is right, the basic question Canadians will have to decide is whether we should offer a helping hand to a nation which is a potential enemy of such frightening power.

In one sense, this ought not to be a question which Canada should be called upon to answer alone. The decision may well affect the whole world. Yet neither is it a matter which we can let others decide for us, simply following their lead. We ought to forget the immediate profits which might accrue to us, in trade and in friendship with a people who have survived the vicissitudes of thousands of years of changing civilizations. We must also to be ready to accept some short-term difficulties and to put up with some misunderstandings with our closest friends if we become convinced that we can assist a poverty-ridden nation without endangering either ourselves or others.

It is a big decision but one which, if Mr. Hamilton is right in his assessment of China's policy, we shall have to make.

No Politician?

Some have been suggesting that Premier John Robarts may soon be called to lead the Progressive Conservative party in the federal arena.

Those who doubt that he has any such ambitions may, perhaps, find confirmation for this view in some of his recent utterances, particularly his most recent effort to establish warmer relationships with the Liberal regime at Ottawa. He has announced that Ontario will continue to co-operate with the federal government in "shared-cost programs." It would do this, he said, even though the federal government was not trying to force any province to take part.

He referred to programs which, he said, had been of great benefit to Canada, especially to the Maritimes. He seemed to be echoing, in other words, an observation by Prime Minister Pearson on the same day, that Canada cannot survive as a country of "Cadillac and cart regions."

"We are Canadians first and foremost," said Premier Roberts.

This is no way to beat the Liberals—or is it?

Extra, Extra!

We have always respected the worldliness and, err . . . lack of inhibition generally credited to Mexican youth by Hollywood and other sources, but a recent news item shatters our concepts. A newly created office of juvenile control and orientation in Mexico has launched a campaign cracking down on "off campus extra-curricular activities." All well and good so far, but then we read on to find out that the "off campus extra-curricular activities" are just playing hooky!

If that's all the Mexican school authorities have to worry about, maybe Canadian youth have something to boast of on an international school boy level.

A scratch of bitchery in a woman is a necessity if she is to be noticed.—Caitlin Thomas.

Germs Busy on Monday

By Anne Ayalew in Bell News.

Did you know that you're more likely to be sick on Monday than Thursday is you happen to be a woman?

. . . Or that you'll probably take more days off due to illness during the healthiest years of your life than at any other time.

These are just two of the baffling bits of information that were turned up as the result of a survey made by the company's (Bell Telephone Co.) medical department.

This survey concentrated on women, all 14,316 of them, who were full-time employees during 1953.

Some of the findings have left our medical director somewhat bewildered.

Although Dr. D. C. Bew's long years of experience in medicine have left little room for surprises in his chosen field, he admits that as a doctor, he doesn't know why the incidental sickness absence on Mondays should be 40 per cent higher than on any other day.

There also doesn't seem to be much medical logic behind the fact that the number of days of absences among women are in the under 20 age group. This is the period when, although any major illnesses, women are at their healthiest.

Single girls casting a longing eye towards the altar can take heart, too, from the fact that they seem to be healthier than their married counterparts. Married women have to put up with ten eight rate of incidental absence than single women.

Educated germs? we ventured to Dr. Bews during the course of our discussion in the subject.

He didn't think so.

But he has to admit that whatever germs were causing these one and two-day illnesses, they seemed to have decided preferences as to victims.

As well as married women and those under age 20, they favored non-management employees. The survey showed that those in management had a record 50 per cent better than non-management, which incidentally, includes them in roughly the same absence bracke as the girls.

These mysterious germs can prove distinguish between bosses. In groups under female supervision the absences ran 30 per cent higher than in groups with a male boss. But, to even the score a little, the survey revealed that when one female employee reports to a man, the absence record sometimes tends to be excessively high.

You would think it should follow that the more people in a group, the more illness. Not so, say our medical experts. The larger the group reporting to any one supervisor, the greater the frequency of absence, they report.

Whether or not the germs causing the bodily work on some kind of status-symbol system of their own, picking their victims according to age, incidental status, and how many people in the office, nobody knows. But the medical department has been able to put a name to the people most often hit by these sickly bugs. Employees with more than six absences a year are known as sick prone. Those with only six sick prone people can tell pretty early in the game if they've been singled out for special attention.

"The pattern of attendance is established early in the employee's career," says Dr. Bews. And it remains much the same no matter how long the person has been on the job. This type of germ counts loyalty among its supreme virtues and only once it singles you out for special type, there's no shaking it—unless you make a determined effort.

The medical department is hoping that sick-prone employees will make the most of the large advantage of the facilities the company had made available. A talk with a company nurse or doctor will help determine if any medical measures can be taken to overcome their particular problem. A talk with the supervisor might help if the problem is that of an ingrained rather than a medical one.

"Our girls shouldn't feel too downhearted about the survey results," says Dr. Bews, "we still have the best long-term absence record of any big system company."

Bothering him. With a germ bothering him. With a germ that knows what day it is you never can tell what to expect!

Must Consume Abundantly

Hamilton Spectator

The group of educators, union leaders and scientists who suggested to President Johnson that people should be paid whether they work or not, were not living in a lotus land of their own. They were thinking of people who lose their jobs through automation and, because they cannot find work, live on some form of social welfare.

It has been estimated that in Canada some 200,000 jobs cease to exist every week because of technological advances. New jobs are created by an expanding economy, but the race between destruction and expansion is going on all the time.

Prosperity depends upon consumption — the ability of people to buy, use and eat. If they do not get them, they cannot buy and it will not matter whether machines are controlled by men or computers, their products will be superfluous.

It is the problem which industrial countries face today is how to gear their system to the life of a abundance. Thinking in the past has always aimed at satisfying scarcity. In times of excessive abundance there have been depressions until the situation corrected it. self and some degree of scarcity returned and the wheels could start turning again.

Now there is constant abundance, much of it created by technological advances which require very little manabor. If this abundance is to be bought and used, then people must have the money to buy it.

All around us are signs that fresh definitions are needed for work, leisure, education, "man hours", abundance and many other terms. Some of these may have to be completely transformed, others turned upside down to fit them for a technological age.

Many of our attitudes have been shaped by an industrial age of almost two centuries' duration.

Worst Bread In World

Baltimore Sun

In a letter to the editor, Secretary of Agriculture Benson wrote that "adding all the cost of bread—wheat, processing, marketing—we still get the world's best bargain in bread."

As to price, which was what Mr. Freeman was talking about we are inclined to agree. We wish it were as to quality.

The common bread of this country (leaving the more expensive specialty breads out of it) is the worst on earth. It may have everything needed in nourishment, but it lacks essential enriching additives, but it lacks one thing. It lacks breadiness.

Some authorities think that the best common bread is that found in England, solid, crunchy, tasty bread, a bread with body and flavor. The British "national bread" of the Second World War was magnificent—along with tea, it won the war. The Russians make good bread—they will do better by that when they can do.

In all the black-bread countries the staff of life tastes like a staff of life. Tortillas are real bread, and so are chappatties. Only in America . . . We offer no solution to this national problem, and draw no moral. This is an "alas" editorial, pure and simple.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 17th, 1916.

A combined meeting of the city council planning committee, the city parks board and representatives from the Belleville Yacht Club, on Wednesday evening to discuss plans for this year's development program for Victoria Park.

During the past two years the local yacht club have rebuilt the old dressing rooms on the park into a modern club room, while docking facilities have been constructed on the inner harbor to accommodate pleasure craft of all kinds.

Commodore Ellis Sills of the yacht club referred to the development which had already taken place, and said the National Yacht Club would stop this year at Belleville during their July tour. For many years Belleville had been passed up on the annual tour but due to improved docking facilities this city would once again be included in the tour.

Plans were also made for further road improvements to the park, Alderman Keegan as chairman of the planning committee, expressed his appreciation to persons who took an active part in the development of the park and noted that through joint efforts of the planning committee, the parks board and the yacht club, in a few years Victoria Park would become one of the finest parks in the province.

Surgery to Correct Baby's Crossed-Eyes Not Dangerous

By JOSEPH G. WOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My baby is eight months old and his eyes are crossed. We noticed it at three months. The doctor said an operation might have to be performed when he is about two years old.

Is this dangerous? Is it quite successful? Will there have to be more than one operation?—Mrs. L. J.

Crossed eyes are rarely noticed before the third month because newly-born babies usually can't coordinate very well. The eyes look every which way until the baby begins to focus so that he sees only one image.

A network of muscles moves the eyes. Some defect in one of the muscles can upset the delicate balance which should exist. Result? Crossed eyes. (There are other defects which also can cause this.)

Simple treatment (a patch over one eye, glasses and the like) sometimes helps matters so that the muscular balance is restored and the eyes straighten out. Other cases require surgery.

Emotionally, it may give us the cold shivers to contemplate surgery on a baby's eye. In actual fact this operation is not dangerous.

In properly selected cases (some are suitable for surgery and some are not) the results are excellent and rewarding. Yes, further surgery may be required, depending on the nature and severity of the defect.

It should be done quite early in life. A crossed eye condition is at a great disadvantage as he grows older, not just because of its difficulty in seeing (nature tends to take a hand so that the child "sees" with one eye and doesn't use the other, whereby this way he avoids a double image). He also can be self-conscious, and he has to suffer from his thoughtless playmates.

If you delay the procedure beyond the age of six years, he runs into such troubles, and besides, the chances of success diminish rapidly after that age.

In a word, you have had sound advice from your doctor.

Letter to The Editor

Belleville 'Squirts' Alone Unsponsored

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

Belleville the friendly city? Never. I had the occasion and privilege of attending the Lions Club Novice Hockey Tournament in Brampton Easter week. There is where you find friendliness and charity. Just to see what the Lions Club executive and their private citizens are doing for Young Canada makes you feel proud just to be able to say "I am a Canadian."

It was an experience I shall never forget and one that stirred my mind to wonder just what do the service clubs, business houses and business men in general do for our Belleville youth? We have a fine team and girls in Belleville as any other centre. I would venture to say out of 50 teams that were there as far away as Detroit, Winnipeg and Notre Dame, Que., the Belleville 'squirts' team never was the only team that was not sponsored by a service club, minor sport organization or private business. The Belleville team sold chocolate bars throughout the city and paid their own way to Brampton. The only unfortunate thing about that was the city doorbells had to be rung once again.

Believe me, they played hockey with heart and soul, though they came home defeated. They played good hockey and the city, though not financially great, can be proud of the management and coaching of the young Belleville club.

I hope in the future, when members of Belleville lions are asked who sponsored them, they will not have to say "We sponsored ourselves." It would warm my heart to be able to have them say "Our city and service clubs and businessmen are wonderful to us."

Mrs. Doris Lapenestte,
119 Lemoine Street,
Belleville.

It's Strange

Woodstock Sentinel-Review

It's strange that although everybody is in favor of more and better education, many people ridicule educated persons, calling them "eggheads," "oddballs," etc.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read that weakened but live polio vaccine could cause polio in an unprotected adult if his child took the oral vaccine. What about people you work with or have dates with. Couldn't they give you polio? Also if a person had had polio and in his early stages unknowingly took the vaccine, wouldn't the case be far worse? —N. O.

You are worrying needlessly on all counts. . . .

There is no evidence that a person taking the oral vaccine can pass live virus on to anyone else. Indeed, if that were possible, then the vaccine would cause polio in the person taking it.

If a person gets polio, having either the oral or injected vaccine at that time would make no difference in the course or the intensity of the disease. . . .

Dear Dr. Molner: What causes glaucoma, and is it contagious. Is it the same as cataract? —Mrs. B. W.

The cause is not known, but glaucoma is not contagious. The fluid pressure inside the eye increases and in time damages or destroys vision. Diagnosed early, this condition can at least be slowed down, and in some cases the pressure can be relieved so that no further damage occurs. . . .

Note to Mrs. G. M.: Anyone who continues to take cocktails (or anything alcoholic) while suffering from acute gastritis is asking for more trouble. Insist-ing on it, in fact. And two or three cocktails is certainly not "moderation" in such a case.

Teenager Is Taught Good Lesson

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"I had an interesting experience the other day," said a friend at lunch. "I got a teenage boy to see the point of something he had not seen before, about older people. And I think you'll admit that's rare."

"How did this come about?" I asked him.

"Well," he said, "You know I bought a new sports car last summer, and a 17-year-old boy next door who owns a hotrod that he's souped-up. The other morning, I was leaving the house, he challenged me to a race in our respective cars.

"I turned him down as pleasantly as I could, but he was persistent. I could see that he felt I was 'chicken' about it — and, of course, I was. A 40-year-old man doesn't go racing around the highways, but he wasn't able to understand why.

"So I took a nickel out of my pocket and told him that he'd like to play the game of tossing coin. He wanted to know the stakes. I told him he could out 'heads' or 'tails.' If he guessed right, he would keep the nickel. If he guessed wrong, he would pay me a dollar.

"He didn't know whether to laugh or be insulted. 'What kind of gag is that?' he wanted to know. 'Are you trying to take a chance to win a nickel at each toss, when I take the risk of losing a dollar on each?'

I nodded. 'Exactly — it would be a stupid gamble for you. But that's exactly what you're asking me to do in racing our cars!' He was puzzled. 'How do you figure that?' he asked.

"I then told him to consider what each of us is investing in the game. 'You're a young boy,' I said, 'and responsible for no one but yourself. If you crack up and get hurt, or killed, my wife and children are left with a whole career could be ended, everything I've spent working for the last 20 years might crash along with me. I don't just represent myself, as you do — I'm heavily invested in the people who need me and count on me.'

"He was impressed by nobody by this consideration, so I continued: 'Can't you see that the chances I would take in this race would be as unfair as your tossing a coin for a nickel if you were betting on it? That it's not an even gamble between two individuals, but a highly unequal one between irresponsibility and responsibility. I'm afraid to do it in the same way that you're unwilling to toss coins on an basis.'

"He had the grace to grin," my friend concluded. "He shrugged and said, 'You've got something there.' I hope he got something there."

The speculative boom sparked by the oil discovery by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. in the Timmins area pushed Thursday's total volume up to 16,639,000 shares, the heaviest in the history of the market, but today's early reaction goes far towards eclipsing this record.

Central Porcupine was the eye catcher, trading more than 1,000,000 shares within the first 20 minutes. At 11 a.m. the stock was ahead eight cents to 16 cents on 1,690,000 shares with the ticker running 40 minutes late.

The previous record for shares traded in one day was 15,800,000 on July 7, 1952 during the uranium boom. Volume Wednesday was 8,382,000 shares.

The announcement by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. that it had made a "major discovery" on its property in the Timmins-Kenora Timmins sparked the wave of buying. Penny issues with properties near the Texas Gulf property jumped on heavy turnover.

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP)—Trading on slaughter steers and heifers was uneven with top grades selling mostly steady at the Ontario public stockyards this week.

Lower grades closed under pressure with some easing off of prices. Yearlings were steady and cow prices on the top grades were lower and bull prices were steady.

Action on replacement cattle was restricted due to the approaching mammoth stocker sale to be held Friday, April 27.

Veal calf prices were seasonably lower. Hog prices were about steady and lamb prices were unchanged.

Cattle receipts were estimated at about 21,200 head, about 2,500 head more than last week. It should be noted however that the bulk of the increase is due to the fact that most of the cattle making up the increase are replacement cattle for Friday's sale. Receipts last week last year were 2,100 head more. However, this too can be attributed to the stocker sale this week. Western receipts were heavy at 1,280 head as compared to 602 head last week. Feeder stock calf receipts numbered 337 head. Receipts from Eastern Canada included 65 cattle and 17 calves from Nova Scotia. Twenty-six butcher cows were shipped east for slaughter and 48 veal calves were shipped off the market for slaughter in the United States.

Slaughter steers: Choice steers sold at $24-24.50 with fancy feedlot steers to 25.30; good 22-24; medium 20-22; common 17-19; choice heifers 22-23 with some fancy feedlot heifers higher; good 19-21; medium 18-20; common 15 - 17; choice feed yearlings 24 - 26; good 22-24; medium 19-21 with sales to 17.50;; medium 14.50-15.50; canners and cutters 10-14; good heavy bologna bulls 19-19.50 with odd sales to 20; common and medium 16-18.50.

Calves: Choice vealers 33-35 with odd sigles to 36.50; good 30-32; medium 26-27; common 20-23; boners 15-20.

Hogs: Grade A 24.40-25.65; heavy sows 18 1/2-19.70 with light sows gaining a 32 premium; stags 13.50 on a dressed weight basis.

Sheep and lambs: Lambs 22-26 per hundredweight with good feedlot lambs closing at 28; sheep 3-10 according to quality; receipts of spring lambs were light with most sales at 30-35 per hundredweight.

Maddest Scene Stock Exchange Has Ever Seen

TORONTO (CP)—More than 11,000,000 shares changed hands today in the first hour's trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange in what one broker said was the maddest scene the Exchange had ever seen.

The first hour's volume was almost triple the previous record established Wednesday, when about 4,000,000 shares were traded.

On the trading floor, bedlam reigned. Traders rushed to fill buy and sell orders, but they were unable to keep up with the flow.

The ticker tape which carries the transactions in the various stocks was running 40 minutes late.

The tape was running late from the opening, as brokers tried to process buy and sell orders.

After only the first 30 minutes, it was running 15 minutes late as the trading volume topped the 1,000,000 share-mark within minutes.

The wild activity was touched off by the announcement Thursday by Texas Gulf Sulphur Company of a major zinc, copper and silver strike near Timmins.

The most actively traded stock so far today was Central Porcupine, up seven cents to 15 cents on 1,725,000 shares. Other furiously traded shares included Paramaque, up 11 cents to 33 cents and PCE Explorations, ahead 22 cents to $1.19.

All the companies have property in the vicinity of Texas Gulf's find.

The activity was . . . para 6-122.

New Act

Opposition, and the fourth member of each committee would be the federal representation commissioner, Nelson Castonguay.

WOULD AMEND BILL

Mr. Knowles proposed an amendment that would take election privileges away from the prime minister and opposition leader. Instead, the chief justice of each province would have to choose the two members from a provincial government office or the faculty of an educational institution.

This amendment was proposed three minutes before the House rose Thursday and Mr. Gregory Nowlan (PC—Digby-Annapolis-Kings) said Mr. Knowles couldn't think it an insult if we accepted this amendment at such a short notice . . ."

So the Commons will decide on this question today when it continues its clause - by - clause study of the redistribution measure.

Mr. Nowlan indicated he wasn't convinced that the best place to find non-partisan members is in universities.

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Bow River) said the system of redistribution may discriminate against the West, particularly Saskatchewan. He said that Saskatchewan should lose four seats—it now has 17—while the total number of seats in the Commons is reduced by only one. That, he said, points to discrimination.

BACKS DUAL RIDINGS

J. Angus MacLean (PC—Queens) asked that an amendment be inserted so the commission may recommend the retention of dual ridings. Mr. MacLean represents such a riding.

Thomas M. Bell (PC—Saint John-Albert) said the tolerance limit—which establishes the allowable - population spread between ridings—should be changed to 30 per cent from the proposed 20 per cent. Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary East) said fast-growth areas should be given special consideration. Creditiste Laurent Picard, Lucette and Henri Latulippe (Creditiste — Compton - Frontenac) said rural ridings should be left alone. The number of urban seats could be increased.

Furthermore, said the Caouette, the job of redistribution should be taken away from party management, not by independent commissions.

Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington South) said all the various commissions and their different methods are costing at a great deal of money. He estimated the cost at $690,000.

SUGGESTS FOUR

Mr. Rondeau suggested four commissions should work in different areas—the West, Ontario, Quebec, and the Atlantic provinces.

Transport Minister Pickersgill, piloting the legislation, said the government had considered four commissions for the four regions and provinces. The trouble with this proposal was that the eastern and western commissions would have to be of "inordinate" size or else each province would have only one representative. Meanwhile, Ontario and Quebec would each have three or four representatives on their commissions.

He said Mr. Castonguay made a study of the redistributional systems in Australia and he came to the conclusion "that the most efficient and satisfactory way to carry out redistribution would be to have 10 commissioners." That was why the legislation was brought in in this form.

Mr. Pickersgill said the government came to powe—one year ago next Wednesday.

"I do not think a day has passed in that time that I have not reflected on some aspect or other of this very difficult problem . . .

"I have given, I think, just as much consideration as my mind is capable of giving to this question . . . I felt I had reached a conclusion that this was the preferable way of doing it."

Commonwealth Parley Planned For Summer

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Southern Rhodesia was the problem upermost in minds here today when Sir Alec Douglas - Home confirmed yesterday that a Commonwealth prime ministers' conference will be held in July.

Prime Minister Douglas-Home told the Commons the meeting will come in the first half of July and Commonwealth chiefs will soon discuss an agenda.

July 7 has been mentioned as a possible opening date for the talks which still likely go on eight or 10 days—only a few months before Britain's general election, scheduled for autumn. At least 18 countries will attend it of them independent ones than eight years.

The unusually long period since the last conference was held in September, 1962, reflects uncertainties over the future of the Commonwealth and the stresses of new nationhood and shifting world patterns.

The dangerous deadlock over Southern Rhodesia could have fateful consequences for the Commonwealth, some sources believe, if African members tried to force Britain's hand.

New Viet Nam Coup d'Etat Said Possible

SAIGON (Reuters) — U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk today decided to cut short his weekend visit until Monday as rumors circulated here that a new coup d'etat in South Viet Nam was likely within 48 hours.

An announcement said Rusk, who arrived here earlier in the day from Formosa, had decided to leave Saigon Monday morning instead of Sunday afternoon in order to have longer talks with American and South Vietnamese officials.

But some observers believed it possible his change of plans might be part of an American attempt to prevent a coup against Premier Maj. - Gen. Ngoun Khanh. - - - - - -

Khanh has received full public support from the United States and if he were to fall American prestige would slump.

Faraday Mine at Bancroft Will Be Closed June 30

Despite the request last month of Bancroft municipal officials, who want to Ottawa to ask the federal government to extend the life of Faraday Mines, Yukon gold is going ahead at the North Hastings uranium mine to close down at the end of June.

On that date 300 mine workers will be thrown out of work with only a small maintenance crew to be kept on for about a month.

Mines manger, Del Wilson, told The Ontario Intelligencer this morning that he did not think the mine ownership had yet decided on what would be done with the mine buildings.

Mr. Wilson said about 300 people were now working at the mine, this number having remained constant for the past two or three years. Of the 300 persons about 150 are underground workers.

WANTED DATE EXTENDED

During Faraday's heyday only a few days were lost in the year's employment at the mine was about 500 persons.

The mine closing at the end of June will come fairly suddenly," Mr. Wilson said.

Although the mine employees will lose their jobs Mr. Wilson felt that actual miners would be able to find other mine employment quite readily.

It would seem, however, that they would have to move out of the Bancroft area.

"Miners usually have little difficulty in finding jobs," Mr. Wilson said.

In June, 1953, Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson said the Government would buy and stockpile uranium from the mines at Elliot Lake and from Faraday at Bancroft, until July 1st, 1964.

It was this date which Bancroft municipal officials wanted extended when they visited Ottawa last month.

Montreal Girl Escapes Serious Injury in Crash

There's been another accident on the two-lane stretch of Highway 401 north of Marysville.

And once again it's happened where a partially-finished strip — open to two - way traffic since last fall — merges with the regular four - lane stretch.

Last night a westbound car driven by Dorothy Hutchinson, of Montreal, lost control of it at the junction and rolled over twice in a ditch.

The woman, first feared suffering a skull fracture, escaped with minor head injuries.

Damage to the small British car was $700.

JUST A BUTTERFLY? — Not to 32 of Canada's best science students. They'll spend their summer at Lakefield, Ontario, make intense studies of not only insects, but all the sciences.

Teen-Age Canada Second Summer Science Program at Lakefield

By JACK HUTTON

G. Winder Smith, headmaster at Lakefield Preparatory School in Southern Ontario, was just a bit surprised last summer to see a pretty student heading with a net for a nearby lake.

Smith didn't look the suicidal type.

"I've been watching those water beetles," the girl explained, "and I can't understand why they don't bump into each other when they whiz around at such speed."

Mr. Smith scratched his head and agreed he didn't know either. And the student continued to the lake in search of water beetles for her microscope.

Stories like this were commonplace around Lakefield by the end of last summer. But what else could you expect when 32 of Canada's best science students were living in one location, taught by a team of top scientists?

Thirty-five students completing Grades 11 and 12 are being chosen across Canada this month to participate in the second summer science program for Canadian secondary school students at Lakefield, July 6 to Aug. 14.

FROM 1,700 SCHOOLS

The Royal Canadian Institute, sponsoring the science program, has canvassed 1,700 French and English secondary schools in Canada, asking principals to recommend their best science students from the two grades.

The program, under the direction of Dr. John M. Anderson, associate professor of biology at Carleton University in Ottawa, makes me wonder what I ever did with my time in school.

The first hour of each day will be devoted to modern mathematics — but with a switch. Part of the information will be purposely withheld from the problems, forcing students to make their own assumptions.

Each of the first five weeks will be devoted to a different subject, taught by a different lecturer. The final week will give the students a chance to do intensive research in Ottawa as the guests of Carleton University.

If everything sounds easy up until now, cast an eye over the courses offered each week.

PHYSICS (July 6) —

"Modern physics developed by reference first to the evolution of measurements and classification from early Babylonian science, and second to the development of speculation and theorizing, including model-building, from ancient Greek science. . . ."

Engineering science is also being offered this week "using two or three examples drawn from the field of fluid dynamics. . . ."

GEOLOGY (July 13) —

"An investigation of the principles underlying modern geology; extensive field trips to be made taking advantage of both the fossil and mineral-bearing rocks located in the surrounding area. . . also discussion of the continental drift theory."

BOTANY AND ECOLOGY (July 20) "Some consideration of plant structure and function but the main emphasis on ecological matters with field trips to interesting . . . habitats. . . . Interrelationships of plants and animals in their natural habitat."

Just for interest's sake, the students will also discuss this week recent advances in aquatic biology and the relationship of man to modern science.

EXPERIMENTAL BIOLOGY (July 27) "Consideration of some of the more important principles underlying the functions of organisms, including the trapping and utilization of energy by cells, muscle and nerve action, bioelectricity and animal behavior. . . ."

CHEMISTRY (August 3) —

"Emphasis on gaining an understanding, at a fairly elementary level, of the nature of chemical kinetics and reaction mechanisms; a study of the nature and use of radioactive tracers, in particular their application to chemical problems . . . every student will conduct at least one series of experiments which have not been done anywhere before."

Whew!

Just prosecuting the material facing our young scientists tires me out. But the best of luck to this year's crop at Lakefield. Who knows — you may be there next year.

It's a bit late, but I can't resist mentioning a series of Montreal April Fool stories that a Montreal columnist dreamed up earlier this month.

His nominations for stories he never expects to see in print:

Elvis Presley declines publicity that he is bankrupt and his bank manager says he never did make much money.

Bobby Darin retires from the public spotlight to take a course that will give him self - confidence.

The Beatles announce they are disbanding the group to join the Mormon Tabernacle Choir.

1 Twist and Shout, Beatles; 2 Can't Buy Me Love, Beatles; 3 She Loves You, Beatles; 4 I Want To Hold Your Hand, Beatles; 5 Please, Please Me, Beatles; 6 Hello Dolly, Louis Armstrong; 7 Dawn, Four Seasons; 8 My Heart Belongs To Only You, Bobby Vinton; 9 Glad All Over, Dave Clark Five; 10 Sugar, Terry Stafford; 11 The Way You Do The Things You Do, Temptations; 12 Shoop Shoop Song, Betty Everett; 13 Fun, Fun, Fun, Beach Boys; 14 Crooked Little Man, Serendipity Singers; 15 Needles and Pins, Searchers; 16 Stay, Four Seasons; 17 Hi-Heel Sneakers, Tommy Tucker; 18 Think, Brenda Lee; 19 Ain't Nothin' You Can Do, Bobby Bland; 20 You're A Wonderful One, Marvin Gaye.

Veterans Asked To Stop Selling War Medals

LONDON (AP)—The British Legion has appealed to war heroes and their widows to stop selling medals.

"All medals have a symbolic value," said a spokesman for the veterans' organization. "They should be treasured, not sold.

"War widows often sell their husbands medals because they are poor.

"The Legion will help them if they'll only come to us."

At Sotheby's auction house a First World War Victoria Cross, Britain's highest decoration for valor, recently brought £,000 ($1,800). Next week Sotheby's will auction a Distinguished Service Medal and other decorations won by Sgt. Clifford Bradshaw 22 years ago.

Said Bradshaw, now a foreman in a tire factory:

"I'm not hard up, but I sent them to the auctioneer's because a quid or two for the kids is better than medals that collect dust and don't bring back particularly good memories."

towns, caught between climbing costs and fixed revenues.

The end appeared closer recently when the failed Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, producers of more than $300,000,000 worth of gold in its day, announced it would have to close until summer unless the remaining ore could not be mined economically at the prevailing price of $35 an ounce in United States funds.

Hollinger employs 1,400 miners who, with their families, make up a significant proportion of Timmins' 29,000 population.

Most people, however, were ready to shrug off doubts of the future after Thursday's announcement.

"The council and the local department of industries have both realized that this part of the precambrian shield is a treasure chest," Mayor Del Villano said.

WAS EXPECTED

Dr. James McClinton, former president of the Northern Ontario Chamber of Commerce, said the strike will just make he and other northland boosters had been expecting for years.

"The area has never been properly prospected or explored in detail, and enough attention to minerals other than gold has never been given to this area.

"There are several men who have been optimistic about this happening—all you had to do was look at a geological map and the answer was there."

The original gold strike, according to the most retained story, was made by accident. A prospector carrying a load on a portage cursed as the load slipped on some moss. But through a hole torn in the moss by his curse, he got a gleam of gold.

That glimpse touched off a gold rush that led to the birth of Timmins in 1912.

Although local excitement of Texas Gulf's strike comes close to matching the old-time gold fever, the finding of a new strike was a result of modern-day coldly-scientific prospecting.

STARTED FIVE YEARS AGO.

Texas Gulf President Claude O. Stephens said his firm first got interested in the area about five years ago, when ay aerial survey with planes using special electromagnetic equipment recorded a potential mineral-bearing anomaly in the ground.

It was one of many such anomalies recorded, he said, and exploratory drilling started as a routine examination of all potential areas.

The first diamond drill bit into the find shortly before Easter. The findings of that first drill hole indicated further exploration was needed, Mr. Stephen said.

Three more drills were moved to the property during the last 10 days to confirm the find and start outlining the ore body.

First rumors of the find started to circulate about two weeks ago. They, in a turn, touched off a major rush, as almost every major mining company in Canada and many from the U.S. sent in teams to find out what was happening.

It led to a boom in claim staking period Timmins has seen in years, with 1,800 claims being staked this year compared with less than 200 in the same period last year.

Bulletins From Birdland

By WINIFRED E. WILSON
LITTE KNOWN SPARROW

Wintering in the United States and breeding in the spruce forests of Canada from just beyond habitation up to the tree-limit, the fox sparrow pauses near enough to feed and rest—a matter of just a few days. This means that not many of us know the bird at all. The short stay might be in early April, or possibly up to mid-May, depending partly upon the weather. So be prepared to watch out for a flock now.

Unlike song sparrows that love to show themselves off in spring, fox sparrows spend most of their time grubbing away beneath brush-heaps. Vigorously kicking up with both feet leaves left on the ground since last autumn, they try to reach the beetles and other many-legged creatures that lie under the old leaf mould. When for a moment they stop foraging, they sing from the top of some bush, taking care to choose one well out of our sight.

HARD TO SEE

Though seven inches long, fox sparrows are really hard to see. Besides their habit of keeping constantly under cover, they match their surroundings perfectly. The predominant brown is so reddish that they greatly resemble the red fox — hence their name. This coloring makes them comparable with some of the thrushes, though their square, sparrow bills are quite different. The extremely reddish tail (the brightest part of the plumage) may make one think of the hermit thrush, a bird much the same length as the fox sparrow. The all-over, red-brown effect is reminiscent of the wood thrush, as are the underparts, but instead of big, black spots, the white is covered with large, broken, red-brown streaks, sometimes spoken of as "rusty".

What a pity that so few of us have ever heard the sweet, mellow voice of a fox sparrow! The song is one of the most beautiful in birdland, made up of a combination of clear notes and sliding whistles. Though quite variable, once learned it is easy to identify. This is assuredly no ordinary singer.

A small flock of fox sparrows might be found in bushy skirting fields or brushy woodlands even today. Almost invariably our ears discover them before our eyes have caught sight of them. We hear that melodious voice or the sound of dry leaves being scattered as the birds scratch. Too soon they will be gone — until next autumn.

Turks Apologize For Shooting At Canadians

By GERARD ALARIE

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian Army officials received an apology from a Turkish - Cypriot leader Thursday for a shooting session Wednesday amid indications the Canadians will not take any further such incidents lightly.

Dr. Fazil Kuichuk, leader of Cyprus' Turkish community, told Col. Edward Amy, commander of the Canadian United Nations contingent on the Island, that the shooting arose from an error on the part of the Turkish-Cypriots.

Turkish-Cypriot soldiers, Kuichuk said, thought the Canadians were Greek-Cypriots when they kept up a fusillade against the Canadians. Amy accepted his apology.

A vehicle carrying Maj. Patrick Tremblay of Chicoutimi, Que., company commander of the Royal 22nd Regiment, came under Turkish-Cypriot fire near Dhikomo, 12 miles north of here, and the Canadians returned the fire.

No Canadians were hurt and Kuichuk told Amy Wednesday none of the 60 shots the Canadians fired hit any Turkish-Cypriots.

FOSSILS THAT LIVE TODAY

Existing today are several kinds of creatures which can properly be called LIVING FOSSILS.

Another kind of "living fossil" is the LUNGFISH. The SIXTEEN (4) and SCARAMENCIA (5) cover 300 million years. It can breathe both only through their gills, but also through lungs in times of drought.

The first type called LATIMERIA, is a rare specimen. IN COMPARISON to fossil specimens of 375 million years ago (see ills. 1, 2 and 3) They all have PAIRED FINS, projecting from paw-like stumps.

Saskatchewan Election

Conservatives Spend 30 Yrs. in Wilderness

REGINA (CP) — Martin Pederson has the job of leading the Saskatchewan Progressive Conservative party out of the political wilderness where it has been for 30 years.

Since 1934 when a largely Conservative coalition government was wiped out in a general election, the party has elected only one member to the legislature and he got in with Liberal support.

Mr. Pederson, chosen provincial leader Oct. 26, 1953, fielded candidates in each constituency in the last election in 1960 but the party garnered only 14 per cent of the popular vote and failed to elect a man.

This time, he says, "it may seem fantastic that a party which at present does not hold a seat in the legislature could in fact form the next government, but a situation exists where . . . it is most probable."

Campaigning in part by helicopter for the April 22 election, Mr. Pederson is preaching to the electorate a platform based mainly on stepped-up natural resources development, streamlining of government operations and lifting of the tax burden on property.

OPPOSES SCHOOL ACT

He has attacked government legislation designed to eliminate the possibility of double taxation on Roman Catholic supporters of separate high schools.

"The legislation will drive a wedge between the two school systems," he says. "It could face us with problems similar to those on the national front like separatism."

To stimulate resources development a Conservative government, he says, would build a railway from northern Saskatchewan to Churchill, Man., on Hudson Bay.

At least at the official level Mr. Pederson appears to have won an internal fight with party members who wished arrangements with the Liberals in certain constituencies to defeat the CCF.

Mr. Pederson, 41, is a chunky, sandy - haired former fighter pilot who flew 32 operational missions during the Second World War in Hurricane, P-40 and Typhoon fighters.

MANAGED INSURANCE

He has had 13 years in politics, including a stint in 1963 as federal campaign manager for his party in Saskatchewan. The Conservatives won all 17 federal seats in the province in 1963.

In 1953 Mr. Pederson ran in Hanley constituency in the provincial election, losing by a wide margin to R. A. Walker, now attorney-general.

In the 1953 federal election he lost by a wide margin to CCF candidate M. J. Coldwell. In the 1960 provincial election he came within 500 votes of unseating Liberal incumbent G. Herman Danielson, his opponent again this year.

He was national vice-president of the Young Progressive Conservative Association in 1953-54.

Mr. Pederson was born in Stewardes, 60 miles south of Saskatoon, Dec. 5, 1921, the son of immigrant Norwegian parents. He still farms in the Hawardes area. He is a former insurance salesman.

Mr. Pederson and his wife Kay have two teen-age children.

New Bill

The police commission, besides asking for the extreme powers that would have been granted by Bill 99, also had recommended legalized wire tapping and other means of dealing with criminals.

Premier Robarts promised that some of its recommendations would be implemented until they had been given exhaustive examination.

TALKS TO DEAN

The premier disclosed he had been in touch with Dean Allan Leal of the Osgoode Hall law school "and I can assure you that I intend to continue the investigations that have been started, in order that we may devise a means of ensuring forever and under all circumstances that these very basic rights belonging to the people of our province will be protected. . . ."

Earlier in his remarks, Premier Robarts said establishment of the police commission in 1961 was an indication of the importance his government attached to the containment of crime in Ontario.

He said his government was dedicated to making Ontario an unhealthy place for the criminal element. Provincial authorities would be "ever vigilant" in the suppression, control or complete eradication of crime.

Despite the fact that the police commission report showed there was no synd . . . r . . me in Ontario, he said, the threat remained and there was no room for complacency.

Liberal Vernon Singer (L—Downsview) attacked the police commission for its "arbitrary" recommendations saying there was no place in a democratic society for the methods displayed by the three commissioners.

When John Wintermeyer, former leader of the Liberal party, disclosed the existence of organized crime in Ontario, he did not ask for the harsh remedies proposed by the police commission, Mr. Singer said.

DON'T LIKE IT

He said the Liberals "abhor this type of arbitrary action."

"We suggested there is no excuse for the arbitrary encroachment on civil liberties as exhibited by this commission and by the five bills brought in by this government," Mr. Singer said.

Attorney - General Wishart asked about reports that the bill would be withdrawn, said only that they were "being examined."

He told reporters he would have some comments on the bills to make before the legal bills committee of the legislature. The committee would examine them clause by clause and most likely would offer amendments, modifications, or deletions.

The Liberals have attacked similar provisions in each bill for granting powers to a registrar to police used car dealers, money-lenders and others.

Sunday School Lesson

Religion in the Family

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

When the communists first came into power in Russia, they considered the Christian concept of marriage too "bourgeois," so they relaxed laws dealing with marriage and divorce. They soon found, however, that this led to a breakdown in morals and stability, so that many of the former laws were re-established.

With this experience behind them, the communists deliberately set out to break down resistance in East Germany, and other satellites, by trying to change the marriage laws so as to undermine the stability of the family. When the churches in East Germany objected, the communist leaders turned to the courts. They appointed their own judges who would interpret laws concerning marriage and divorce as if the attempted communist revisions had been put into effect. The communists in China did an even more thorough job of disrupting family life. By this means, they broke down the will of the people to resist their movement.

FAMILY IN UNITED STATES

A free society needs stable people, and people get much of their stability from family relationships. In a world of increased mobility, this is extremely important. Never have so many moved so often. People move to follow industry, or new housing. They become uprooted. They live among strangers. In the face of this social change, the family has taken on added importance. For many people, it is the one sure haven in the midst of strangers, and of an uncertain world.

But it is a changed family. The family has changed because the world around it has changed. The family is the United States has become much more of a democracy. So much so at times, that no one, and nobody, is boss. There is no clear-cut conception of where authority lies. In former days, the father was usually the one who represented authority. But today his work takes him away from the family so much, he has lost this role. In many cases, he has been reduced to the family provider.

Children feel the change. Left to themselves in working parents, they often feel their parents do not understand or care about their problems. There has been a breakdown in communications between the generations. Older people feel it. Obsessed with the material world, and driven on by the arts of advertising, most people live beyond their means, often on borrowed money.

FAMILY IN PAUL'S DAY

Paul faced many problems concerning the family in his day. When Christianity moved out into the pagan world, it got away from the strict ideas concerning morals and the family that the Jews had. So Paul had a real problem on his hands trying to help converts from paganism to understand how Christianity affects family life.

Obviously, there was not the complete democracy in family life in Paul's world there is in the United States today. The husband was considered the complete head of the family. This is reflected in Paul's writings. However, Paul introduced a new factor. In a society where the wife was subject, without recourse, to the will of the husband, Paul said that husbands and wives should be "subject to one another," (See Ephesians 5:25) and explains they should do this "out of reverence for Christ." Paul advises, "Wives, be subject to your husbands as to the Lord," and, "Husbands, love your wives, as Christ loved the church." He said that Christ showed His love for the church when He "gave Himself up for her." (Ecphesians 5:25 R.S.V.)

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 19: "The Christian Faces Family Tensions," Mathew 10: 34 - 39; Ephesians 5:21 through 6:4.

This puts a whole new light on the matter. Christ would never demand of His followers anything that would debase or humiliate them. He would ask only what God would approve. Moreover, Christ showed His love for the church by His sacrifice for it. A true Christian would never ask of another, especially — a marriage partner, anything that would debase or humiliate. He would seek to respect the personality of the loved one as he would reverence the personality of Christ. Moreover, a Christian should be more willing to suffer than to impose suffering, more eager to respect than to try to dominate.

Here, then, is the key to happy home life — reverence for personality, and having as one's goal the welfare of the entire family, which is the way Christ loved the church.

should be purified and made glorious through his sacrifice and example. A sincere devotion to religion can add greatly to the attainment of these goals, especially if all the members of the family share the same religious outlook. Religion as Jesus pointed out, can be devisive (Matthew 10:34-39), or it can be the most uplifting force in the world.

Mrs. Malcolm Tait Woman With Unique Job In Canadian Politics

By JOHN MOSHER

FREDERICTON (CP)—Every word spoken in the New Brunswick legislature is the concern of Mrs. Malcolm Tait.

She was recently appointed official reporter of the legislative assembly, a position usually occupied by a man in provincial and federal politics in Canada.

"It is quite exacting, with so many things to look up—acts, quotations, names of people, correct spelling — but I don't find it difficult," says the 50-year - old brunette mother of three.

With a staff of six, Mrs. Tait is responsible for the official record of debates in the legislature house.

A tape recording system is used, with one microphone at desks for every two members. An operator pushes buttons to turn on the microphone when a member speaks.

A woman shorthand reporter also attends the sittings for any supplemental work. Upstairs in the legislature building, stenographers transcribe the tapes.

An unrevised transcript is available the next day, and the complete report is printed several months after a session.

FULLY BILINGUAL

Born Lillian Malenfant at Iviere du Loup, Que., she moved with her French-speaking family to New Brunswick's Restigouche County when she was two. Her father Alfred died several years ago and her mother lives in Quebec City.

The family spent several years at Grand Falls and Corner Brook in Newfoundland and then returned to New Brunswick where Mrs. Tait lived in Fredericton since 1931.

Fluently bilingual, she became a stenographer in the provincial government at 17 and did French translations for all departments.

It was just after her marriage in 1941 that the premier of the day, J. B. McNair, asked her to take a position with the recording staff in those days the record of debates was verbatim.

She worked for several years with the official reporter, Malcolm McGowan, before taking six years off while her children were young.

When Mr. McGowan retired last year after 23 sessions as official reporter, he recommended Mrs. Tait as his successor, saying she had been doing an "excellent job of editing."

Mrs. Tait's husband is the president of a construction firm and her children are grown up so that, with part-time help, she is able to run a household and hold down the job with the legislature.

Daughter Jeanne will graduate this year from Mount St. Vincent College in Halifax. Robert, 20, works with his father and Earl, 18, attends St. Thomas University in Chatham, N.B.

OFFICIAL REPORTER — Mrs. Malcolm Tait is official reporter of debates in the New Brunswick legislature, a position almost always occupied by a man. She, and the mother of three, is fluently bilingual and has been with the provincial government since she was 17, with six years off while her children were young. (CP Photo)

Successful Living

Mother Unwise to Put Temptation in Teens' Path

DEAR DORIS — My son, age 17, is a good boy. He works hard, has his own car and has a girl friend he is going steady with. He has a habit of coming in very late over the weekends. Last night it was really late (two a.m.) and I asked him why? He said her parents had left the house to have coffee with some friends and left the two of them to baby sit the other children.

This is not the first time that this has happened and I have told him about the dangers. He has seen enough examples all around him, but he says he can control himself. I trust him, Doris, but do you think they believe you when you say that?

Right away they think you mistrust them or have a dirty mind. I told him that I would talk about it to the girl's mother and he got furious and told me that it was none of my business. The girl is only 15. — FOND BUT PRACTICAL.

DEAR FOND — When that boy of yours gets a little older he'll find it's not smart to see how close you can come to the precipice without falling over. Our brightest boys and girls are still glad of the mothers and dads who help them avoid awkward situations — of their own making — by just being around.

I'd suggest a tactful, confidential phone call to the girl's mother.

DEAR DORIS — I'd like to know if it is etiquette to celebrate your mother's and father's 40th wedding anniversary, and can their children arrange the celebration? I've had a bit of a disagreement with my sisters on this matter.

They feel the couple's children should not arrange the affair and furthermore they say only the 25th and 50th are proper to be celebrated to any extent. Another ten years is quite a long time and by then they will be 73 years of age.

I'd like to arrange it as a surprise for them with about 75 of their close friends to spend an informal evening with them. — WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING — Etiquette was made for people; not people for etiquette. Forty years of happy marriage are well worth celebrating, and it's a lucky couple whose children want to put on the party. Go ahead!

Not as a surprise, though. It's a big milestone, and it would be a great pity if the Happy Couple had made another date with each other for that same night. Besides, a big surprise can be just too, too hard on the "surprisee."

DEAR DORIS — One night two girls asked my chum to join them on a date with three boys. Her date was a stranger to her. He took her home and asked for another date.

She went, and they all six met and watched TV at her girl friend's house. Next day she learned that the stranger was married; that they all knew it and were spreading the story around town and even hinting at something more sordid.

Doris, how can anyone be so cruel just for a laugh? — ANGRY.

DEAR ANGRY — It's a poor kind of humor. They could do great harm. Your chum should let them know in no uncertain terms that such pranks are not for her and neither are the so-called friends.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I've been drained of all my savings because of the waiting period until employment became available for me.

I was forced to move in and share the room with my mother in her home. She is an eccentric older woman and very possessive of anyone whom she can get under her roof.

I finally have found work and find my employer has similar traits and behavior and is making me ill. It seems I'm being used as their victim. — MARILYN

DEAR MARILYN — You need work to eat. Keep the job and save up toward an independent future. Every job calls for some adjustments to other personalities, and you aren't stuck for life. No one possesses you without your permission, and you can retain poise by seeking recreation with folk closer to your own age and way of thinking.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I am ten years old and can't mix with other people. My friends are very nice but I always have arguments with them. Please tell me what to do. — JOYCE.

• • •

DEAR JOYCE — My mother used to say there is no such word as "can't", substituting "I can try". It's up to you whether you argue with people. Try seeing the other fellow's point of view.

Have you looked at yourself in a mirror lately? How about smiling at the worried face you see? A good personality can get its start in learning to smile.

DEAR DORIS — I want badly to get out of Blank Province and this way of life which I detest. I would like also to work and be helpful in some primitive South Sea island. I am only 18 and also am a girl, but I would rather die than have to live in this hopeless life of birth, routine, then death. I feel out of place with my friends as they talk of boys and marriage and jobs when I don't care for marriage, don't like boys and look down on their ordinary, rather boring jobs.

Please help me find a way to get out of here, I cannot be a teacher or a nurse as my education and stomach do not permit this, but if I could work in Africa that would be very good. — MISS D.H.

DEAR MISS D.H. — Oh come, now. In despair, bored, manhating, at 18?

If you can't take it where you are, the rigors of primitive life in Africa or the South Seas aren't for you. Besides, you must have a skill to offer before you'll be sent anywhere, or you wouldn't have a clue as to how to be helpful.

More general education, some maturity, ability to stomach many unfamiliar things — these are musts; especially for one who lives in the midst of civilized comforts.

Jap Designers Getting Ready For Olympics

TOKYO (Reuters)—With the Tokyo Olympic Games scheduled for October, Japanese fashion designers are trying to sell a "Tokyo line"—a combination of traditional Oriental characteristics and a modern, youthful look.

Big department stores and textile manufacturers are choosing names like Glorious Tokyo, Fresh Tokyo, and Dynamic Tokyo for their models.

Model girls at one recent fashion show here introduced new sports dresses with a demonstration of the twist. But there was flattering femininity, a reflection of the Paris spring collections, too.

Fabrics used ranged from traditional Japanese silk and improved synthetic textiles in flower, stripe and checkerboard patterns to featherweight wools and organzas.

ARTISTS' NAMES

She named the 35 designs of her spring and summer collection after world famous painters, like van Gogh, Matisse and Goya, who had apparently inspired them.

She used almost all the colors used by the artists, ranging from white, lavender, pale blue and chartreuse green to shocking pink and black. And, apparently influenced by a great white wave in Paris this year, she also used white lavishly.

Other Japanese designers took advantage of current rather fluid trends and showed, for instance, both short and long jackets, fitted and only lightly marked waists, and straight, tiered or panelled skirts.

While necklines were in most cases cut wide and low, collars were deeply set, wide-notched or stand-up.

Pockets were often major features of suits and daytime dresses.

Knee-length hemlines were common. Hats had mostly wide brims.

BISHOPS END MEETING

Col. Nicol Smith Gives Illustrated Talk on Chile

By A. HENDERSON

"Chile," said Lieutenant - Colonel Nicol Smith, "is a democracy. It has neither warlords nor dictators," as he addressed a fine audience last evening at the Collegiate auditorium on "Curious Chile." The travelogue, the last of the Current World Travel Adventure Series, took the form of an educational lecture, dealing with the main features of the country; its people; its natural resources and its industries, especially among the poorer classes, where there are no teachers, education being given by the police of the district. All in all, Chile is a most unusual and interesting country.

Col. Smith was introduced by Mr. Frieled Bellatedt.

Other scenes included a cat and dog cemetery, beautifully kept. Among the wild life, colorful parrots, flamingoes, innumerable pelicans; and llamas, which are used as light work animals. Some lovely lily-red flowers were also shown.

Chile's main ideal is to raise the standard of education, especially among the poorer classes, where there are no teachers, education being given by the police of the district. All in all, Chile is a most unusual and interesting country.

Col. Smith was introduced by Mr. Frieled Bellatedt.

Readers' Friday Column

by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

I would like to try my hand at catering for small parties. I know how to make fancy sandwiches but I would like to know how to make Petit Fours that have a professional finish. Would you please print the method in your column? . . .

W.W.

ANSWER:

PETIT FOURS:

(Note: These require patience but are worth the trouble for their lovely crepeal.)

Take a tip from professional bakers and use 1" thick slabs of firm pound cake to cut out desired shapes. This reduces pesky crumbs to a minimum. Commonest shapes are very small rounds, squares, diamonds and crescents.

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Salmon or Tuna Croquettes; Caper Sauce; Glazed Carrots; Crumbed Tomato Casserole; Orange and Grapefruit Cup; Cherry Iced Cake (see Wednesday); Coffee.

GLAZE:

(Sufficient to frost 4 dozen little cakes): One-half tablespoon gelatine, 2 teaspoons cold water, ½ cup granulated sugar, ½ cup liquid from orange pup, ½ cup water, 2 tbs. sifted icing sugar, 2 large egg whites, 1 tablespoon soft butter or shortening, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Soak the gelatine in 2 tablespoons cold water. In saucepan combine granulated sugar, corn syrup and the ½ cup water. Bring to full rolling boil stirring just until sugar dissolves. Remove from heat; add soaked gelatine and cool to 120 deg. — just above lukewarm. Stir in the icing sugar, then the egg whites, soft butter and vanilla and beat very well until smooth.

How to Frost the Glaze: If different colored glazes are to be used, apply different colors to cake on one rack. Work on metal or hardboard cake or counter. Apportion glaze into as many small bowls as you want colors. I used 3 bowls and left one-quarter of the amount in the saucepan and left it white. I colored the others pink, blue and green. You may want yellow. Pour the white glaze steadily over the cakes. When pan is empty lift rack-full of cakes to a clean position, scrape up with a spatula all of the frosting which has dripped through to the table and return it to the pan. Frost the new cakes again and continue until all cakes are coated on tops and all over sides. Proceed the same with the next batch of cakes, adding color which has been delicately tinted as desired. Continue this way until all cakes are coated. You'll find your wasted frosting dripping through to table at the end, for it is very thin. If you wish you are going to decorate them with sugar crystals or varicolored cake decorations or "bon parelis" — or chocolate shot or nuts or cocoanut, do it before frosting sets, or the decorations will slide off. If you have a big batch to do it is advisable to have a helper.

Juniors Send Worker to Pakistan

BANFF, Alta. (CP)—The Canadian Junior Red Cross is embarking on a plan to make the efforts of its members more meaningful and useful in terms of self-development, says national director R. E. Wendborn of Toronto.

The program will emphasize making youngsters more sensitive to the needs of others, Mr. Wendborn told a national workshop.

"I am much more concerned with providing children with the experience and feeling of giving aid than I am with raising money," he said.

Part of the program will be an experiment which will send Edmonton field worker Miss Mickey Kowalski to Pakistan this summer to try and create a structure into which Junior Red Cross aid can be channelled, Mr. Wendborn said.

Miss Kowalski would report back to Canada on how their money and other aid was being used.

Mr. Wendborn said there are 65,000,000 Junior Red Cross members in 70 countries, with more than 1,000,000 in Canada.

Women Learn to Drive More Easily Than Men

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Women learn to drive a car more easily than men, says the owner of an unusual driving school established especially for women.

Henri Dubois, who founded this school named Madame au Volant (madame at the wheel) in 1961, claims women are far more tractable than their husbands.

"The ladies are disciplined and readily acknowledge their inexperience," he says. "Men tend to know everything and must generally be restrained."

Points against the women, however, are tendencies to talk too much, to use the rear view mirror to retouch their makeup, and to weep if they fail to pass the official French driving test.

Madame au Volant, situated in the suitable district of Auteuil, has an average of 30 pupils a day.

July is the busiest season. Women then become anxious to learn to drive in time for the summer vacations.

Pupils' ages range from 18 to 60, and include many society matrons who regard their driving lessons as an amusing hobby or an agreeable outing.

One elderly countess, for example, drives to Versailles and back twice a week, explaining all her household problems to her young instructor during the two-hour lesson.

"She will never pass her driving test and get a licence," says Dubois. "She talks too much."

The number of lessons required depends on each individual woman.

More normally co - ordinated women, says Dubois, can learn wasted to drive in Paris today in about 12 hours. The school's record to date, however, is held by one pupil who has had 280 hours at the wheel in three years.

She passed her test at the fourth attempt, but continues to take personal lessons from Dubois because "she always gets nervous in the heavy Paris traffic."

This Child Not a Problem, Just Symbol of Larger One

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Ten years ago I married a woman with a five-year-old daughter. From the start, this girl has been the source of problems between us. I thought I could handle it. Now I'm not so sure.

About 18 months ago my wife permitted her daughter to open up three charge accounts. The girl is not mature, in spite of her mother's bragging to the contrary. I became aware of the charge accounts when the girl began to loan her charge plates to friends. Whether her friends were paid her for their purchases I don't know. I never saw any of the money.

After several months of such foolishness I closed the girl's charge accounts. My wife promptly retaliated by moving into the guest room. She has been there for over a year.

I don't wish to live on one side of a "wall" for the rest of my life. Do you think the solution to our problem is a finishing school for the girl? — M.E.L.

DEAR M.E.L. — No. The girl is not the problem, she is simply the battlefield on which you and your wife are fighting your own little war.

A wife who would impose this type of exile on her husband has no respect for the physical aspects of marriage. When sex is used as a payment for favors — and is withheld as punishment — it places the marriage at the prostitution level.

Insist that she see a clergyman with you or you will put more than a Wall between you.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I read with interest your recent column about the little boy whose ears stuck out at right angles. The child was self-conscious about his ears and the children at school made his life miserable by teasing him. The boy's mother was undecided about surgery.

May I give that mother the benefit of my experience? Our son was born with ears that protruded badly. The doctor advised us to have his ears set back the summer before he entered kindergarten. He explained that the operation was a relatively simple, one. Our son was in the hospital only one night, and never complained of pain.

The results are wonderful. The boy looks so much better now, and his appearance reflects confidence and friendliness. We can't help feeling sorry for children whose ears protrude because we know how easily it can be corrected. Please encourage her.— P.L.B.

DEAR T.L.B. — Yours was one of dozens of letters I received supporting this procedure. I do not have the right to recommend surgery. I can only present the information. The parents must decide.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — How much does a daughter owe her mother? I had a career girl, aged 29, and I live at home because my mother needs the money.

My father left 11 years ago and I didn't blame him. Mother has a violent temper and she opened his head with a milk bottle once too often.

For the past year my mother's sister has lived with us. This aunt works and pays my mother room and board. They argue all the time and I'm a nervous wreck from the screaming, swearing and name-calling. They never get to bed before 1:00 a.m. and I must be up at 6:00 a.m. My aunt doesn't have to be at work until 9:00 a.m. so she's in fine shape after eight hours of sleep.

Through the six months I have lost 10 pounds. I walk around the office half dead. When I told my mother I was moving she said, "You can't. I need your cheque." What should I do?—INEZ.

• • •

DEAR INEZ — Move and give your mother whatever you can afford. If you have a breakdown how much help will you be to your mother?

SPEAKING of MANNERS

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: When you arrive at a party and find the door is opened on a crack, are guests expected to walk right in, or is it more polite to ring the bell or knock on the door and wait for the hostess to answer? I'm the ring-and-wait type, but I wonder if this is being courteous or gauche. — Wanting to be busy hostess. — Mrs. F. G., New York City.

ANSWER: If the door's left on slightly, obviously the hostess did it deliberately so guests could simply walk in. At a large party this is often done, so the doorbell won't be ringing constantly. An alert hostess usually keeps an eye on the door so she won't miss an arrival. So, if the door's half-open, take the hint and just walk in.

QUESTION: My husband and I were suddenly detained out of town while he was on a business trip and I was along for the ride. We had a dinner date with friends, but, when it was decided that my husband had to stay over for another day or two, we immediately sent a telegram giving our regrets and explaining the situation. This was two weeks ago. Yesterday, a bouquet came in from friend we were supposed to dine with that night, and she seemed just barely polite, not at all warm as she usually is. Now I wonder if she's annoyed that we had to break date on such short notice. Perhaps I should have telephoned long distance instead of sending a telegram, or I could have explained our predicament more thoroughly. Judging by her attitude, I'm sure she's offended. We were sorry about missing her dinner party, but there was nothing we could do but stay on so my husband could complete his business transaction. — Mrs. H. K., Trenton, N. J.

ANSWER: A dinner date should not be broken for any reason at the last minute, but you certainly had no choice in the matter. A telegram explaining the situation should have been sufficient excuse. However upon returning home, it would have been courteous to call and offer your regrets in person, or over the phone, but your letters know how truly sorry you were about missing her dinner. Perhaps that's what she's miffed about — not hearing a word from you since the telegram. A phone call or a brief note sent in the meantime would have straightened out any misunderstanding.

Question: When salad is served along with the main course at dinner, should we salad fork be included in the place setting? Usually, I just put out a dinner fork, but I wonder if this is correct. When is a salad fork supposed to be included in the setting? — Mrs. U. C., Providence, R. I.

Answer: A salad fork is included in the setting when salad is served as a separate course. When it's served along with the main course, only a dinner fork is necessary. Both the salad and the entree are eaten with the same fork.

Mount Pleasant - Rawdon U.C.W. Hear Topic on India

RAWDON — Last Wednesday afternoon Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church Women gathered at the church hall with 18 ladies present. Mrs. Garth Joslin officiated at the piano and Mrs. Donald Knight gave the opening worship service and presided over the business. Mrs. Robert H. Hoard gave her report and Mrs. Raymond McConnell read letters on the training school for the new curriculum and other business.

Mrs. Gordon Linn and her committee will pack the supply bale after the May meeting which will be held one week later due to the Stirling Festival of Sacred Praise coming on the regular date. Mrs. Herbert Smith read a message re a conference for Y.P.U. members at Queen's University, Kingston in May. The U.C.W donated $20 to help cover expenses for the young people. Mrs. Stanley Williams reported proceeds of the sale of refreshments at the Spencer auction sales as most gratifying.

Mrs. Margarette McMullen presided over the devotional based on "The Agents of Hope." The booklet entitled "The Marks of a Christian Community" and she read from Romans 12 and Matthew 25 to help cover expenses for the young people. Mrs. Stanley Williams reported proceeds of the sale of refreshments at the Spencer auction sales as most gratifying.

Mrs. Margarette McMullen presided over the devotional based on "The Agents of Hope." The booklet entitled "The Marks of a Christian Community" and she read from Romans 12 and Matthew 25 then "God will be sovereign of all and his love will still move triumphantly in and through the lives of the family of man." Mrs. Burton Sharpe read the Bible lesson and Mrs. Frank Spencer read a poem.

The offering was dedicated by Mrs. Ethel Smith, and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver gave a most interesting paper on the theme "New Life" and brought out many points of interest. Mrs. Garth Joslin contributed a vocal solo.

MISSION STUDY

Mrs. Percy MacMullen introduced the three books in the mission study packet and gave a brief resume of the program served on East and West. In 1867 the Baptists made their first settlement in India and in 1873 the Presbyterians sent missionaries. The Salvation Army of Great Britain took over in Rohtak and in 1882 the medical work in Kangra was opened up by the Anglican Church. The newly formed United Church of Canada became associated with the Maritime Provinces Northern India.

Today there are numerous public schools, high schools, colleges and rural programs in Agricultural Institutes, all busy in that land. In 1926 the United Church sent over $612,000 through the Board of World Mission of which the Rev. T. E. Floyd Honey is secretary.

For years India has been a powerful neutral force within the United Nations and they have served as their foreign policy. India is a melee of contrasts, heat and cold, poverty and wealth, flat plains and majestic hills, primitive tribes and cultural sages, the humble ox-cart and the latest model. American or British car, the bazaar shops and new emporiums, the hovels and air conditioned hotels and India has people everywhere thronging the streets.

The government of India is striving to raise the general standard of living, to improve the health services, to provide free education for all and to spread out the production in order to give more farmers a stake in the land. Rural development offers an opportunity for the Christian church to help supply trained men and women for various fields of endeavor. Three million refugees had migrated from one nation to another by 1953 and assistance is given these people through Unicef, the international Red Cross and the church and world service organization.

VIVID SURVEY

P. D. Devanandan in his book gave a vivid survey of Southern Asia which includes the countries of India, Pakistan, Ceylon, and Nepal. All are close neighbors but speak different languages and all have different religions. The highlights of the first chapter of this book give many items of interest. This past winter the Rev. Floyd Honey paid a visit to Nepal and India. In Nepal there is much illiteracy and little medical care. The people are friendly and have been influenced by Christians. The historical background of India and Pakistan is much the same.

In 1877 Queen Victoria was crowned Empress of India and under British rules, law and order was established. Railroads were built, postal and telegraph services were introduced, agriculture was improved, highways were constructed and education became widespread. The northern states of Kashmir, the playground of the future was living question as it is claimed by both India and Pakistan.

RE STUDY SCRIPTURES

The author states that this new era demands a re study of the Scriptures to determine the relevance and purpose of the Christian mission. Mrs. Clarence Scott read a letter written by Miss Muriel Stephenson who is an evangelist worker in the Christian compound at Ratlam. This year a decentralization section of the Woodstock School surrounded by beauty of the Himalayas at Landour. This is the home of boys and girls from 30 over the world with an enrollment of 475. Of these 17 children belong to missionaries' families sent out by the United Church of Canada. Miss Stephenson was transferred to this school in March 1963 to teach grade five and seven. Her story told of her work with a junior orchestra and the usual music classes. In doing so she said her life at Woodstock School had been greatly enriched through the friendships with these children. Miss Stephenson is well known at St. Paul's Church, Stirling, where she was guest speaker on her last furlough to Canada.

Pictures and booklets on India were displayed at the close of the meeting.

Mrs. Harry McMullen and Mrs. Donald Knight furnished refreshments and all enjoyed a social half hour.

Love of Parliamentary Life Reflected in Letters Left by Canada's 1st Prime Minister

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—"The chances are in favor of getting through by Wednesday unless the craze of talking takes possession of the opposition as it did on Friday and Saturday."

The latter-day refrain from the government side of Parliament is not really new. The writer was Sir John A. Macdonald, and the time some 80 years ago.

Canada's first prime minister poured out his thoughts in intimate fashion to the Marquis of Lansdowne, Governor-General from 1883 to 1888, and a number of his hitherto-unpublished letters have just come to light.

The Canadian state papers of Lord Lansdowne have been put on microfilm by Dominion Archivist W. Kaye Lamb who examined the originals with the Lansdowne family's permission. The unpublished parts include letters and quick notes written by Macdonald to the Governor-General—some with care outlining government policies and others in haste during late sittings of the Commons.

SHOWS EXASPERATION

Macdonald's love of parliamentary life is reflected in numerous letters. So too is his exasperation with protracted opposition speeches.

"The House is very impatient but the opposition will talk," he wrote.

"Our opposition has no idea of the proposition and dwell as long on trifles as on matters of importance."

And:

"I write while in MP with a voice like an ophicleide (a brass wind instrument) is roaring against the gale."

A frontier lynching . . . Fenian raids . . . absorption of Newfoundland or The West Indies—all came under Sir John's pen.

Talks, for instance, the case of a group of Americans who crossed into British Columbia in February, 1884, to lynch a B.C. Indian they accused of murdering a white man in Washington territory.

"This act will be much regretted in Washington," Macdonald wrote to Lord Lansdowne, "but we may as well make it a matter of much importance—more importance as we get a complaint from there if a Canadian Indian happened to appropriate a horse or cow across the frontier."

ASKED U.S. TROOPS

On another occasion, Macdonald wrote a long letter about a threatened Fenian excursion into Canada, proposing that Lord Lansdowne suggest to Washington that American troops be put on the alert.

"In previous cases the U.S. troops arrived too late to prevent their raids," Macdonald said.

Some insights into high policy are given in such notes as this, written May 26, 1884:

"We expect some day to get Newfoundland into the Dominion and I think the final adjustment of our men of arms can stand over until then.

"By the way, two gentlemen of Barbados whose standing there is no doubt have written Sir Francis Hincks, formerly governor of that island, enquiring if we would take it into our union. Hincks has sent the letter to me.

'DOUBLE ENOUGH'

"He and I agree that a political union is not to be thought of. The United States have trouble enough, and more than enough, with their Chinese and nigger questions. We had better confine ourselves to the heathen Chinese."

When Lord Lansdowne became governor-general he received a long letter from the Marquess of Lorne, his predecessor, summarizing conditions and offering a few suggestions for carrying out the job of the Queen's representative in Ottawa.

Included was this:

"Every public opportunity should be utilized by a governor-general to say something civil and even affectionate to the U.S. while a little chaffing them in their vain expectations that the manifest destiny of Canada is to be part of their empire.

"A few good words go a long way with them."

Kind of Letter People Would Like to Get

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Fragments of letters people would like to get but rarely do:

"In order to provide a more cozy international flavor to their rock 'n' roll group, the English Beatles are interested in adding a North American member. We think your 19-year-old son, despite the fact he has been thrown out of two colleges for low marks, would be ideal—provided you have no objection to letting his hair grow longer. Of course, he would receive only $1,000 a week to start, but—"

"Harry, my conscience has been bothering me ever since . . . put that measly $5-year pin in your lapel at our last old timers' banquet. After all, as head of the firm, I certainly realize your long and devoted service deserves a more substantial reward. So I was wondering if you and the ship's son wouldn't join me and my wife on a cruise through the Caribbean next month aboard our company yacht? Don't worry about the expenses. I'll argue that out later with the Internal Revenue Service myself."

"That leak you asked me to check in the oil storage tank in your summer cottage isn't a leak at all. That oil is coming right out of the ground, and the basement always is half filled. You don't need a plumber—you need a geologist. Incidentally, my partner and I are willing to offer you $50,000 for the property—just as she stands."

"It is our sad duty to inform you that your uncle has expired and your cousin, William, who is a socialist has had a lifelong prejudice against inherited wealth, refuses to have any of the estate. This leaves you sole heir. The estate consists of $100,000 in cash, $250,000 in government bonds, three acres in downtown Pittsburgh, and a framed photograph of your uncle. Do you want the photograph, which we could send it to Wilberforce?"

Nugent's Lament: 'i here's More Than One Side to a Maverick'

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Terry Nugent is fast building a reputation in Parliament as a maverick.

He qualifies it a little by saying he isn't an all-out maverick but only because of the dislike of being pushed around and a propensity for saying what he thinks in blunt terms.

These two characteristics have thrust the 44-year-old Progressive Conservative member for Edmonton Strathcona into the spotlight several times in his six years as an MP.

The first time was in October, 1963, when he charged in the Commons that the United States was acting illegally and pushing the world to the brink of war by searching ships on the high seas during the Cuban crisis.

His most recent was a refusal to agree to a government proposal that the Commons sit, extra hours to approve $240,000,000 in supplementary estimates or forgo an anticipated Easter holiday. As a result the Commons was required by its rules to hold an unprecedented Good Friday sitting which lasted less than 10 minutes.

NON REPRIEVE

Aggressive, almost gruff, Mr. Nugent says "I've never been one to accept authority easily."

Nevertheless, his flair for his maverick performances have tended to present a one-sided picture of him.

He says nobody outside the House paid much attention to him in the four years prior to the Cuban crisis. He never refused to accept authority easily."

PRESTRESSED ROOF SLABS were dropped in place on the Baxter Cannery in Bloomfield yesterday and today. The slabs — 84 of them — are 60 feet long and eight feet wide, and weigh 14 tons each. Column shown down the centre of the warehouse section shown in this picture are 16 by 16 precast concrete, supporting 16 by 24 inch beams. Each column supports about 70 tons of roof.

Construction Roundup

By ANDY TURNBULL

BUILDING PERMITS

Fourteen building permits were issued by the city building inspector's office during the past week, mostly for single family houses. Six of the permits went to DeMille Construction Ltd., for houses on Plain Square and Leslie St. Biggest single job is a $25,000 building for Mel Barriage, for vehicle storage.

BAXTER CANNERY

The main roof is going on now at the Baxter Cannery in Bloomfield. Covering the warehouse and main factory sections, the prestressed concrete roof consists of 84 slabs, each 60 feet long and eight feet wide. The slabs weigh 14 tons each. The roof is supported on the walls and on a line of columns and beams down the centre of each of the two sections.

The boiler, bought from Dolsco Stellite's Deloro plant, is in place now at Bloomfield. It was lifted over the walls and into the building Wednesday by Wilson Concrete's. 100-ton crane.

Pouring of the floor in the factory and warehouse at the cannery will be behind schedule, William Tatham reports. Working a few steps ahead of the bilders, he completed design of the under-floor mechanical layout just last week, and materials were not ordered until the design was finished. The floor should be poured though, around the end of the month.

TRENTON ROAD PROJECTS

Two feet is being taken off the top of Dundas St. East now, from Campbell St. to Sidney St., by Rayner Construction Co. The roadbed under the street has been making engineers unhappy for years, and Rayner's men, working under supervisor Jack McNeil, will replace the top two feet of mud with gravel before the street is rebuilt. Later, the same work will be carried west to the bottom of the hill.

Rayner began full scale work on several projects in town last week, and will continue through the summer. In addition, Carr's Electric has been working on a 36-inch storm sewer on Sidney St. for a couple weeks now, as subcontractor to Rayner, and Rayner's own men have been doing small jobs on Dundas St.

Rayner also began work this week on a water main up Dufferin St., from Wilkins St. to Coulter Crescent. Blasting may be required between Wilkins and Dundas St., next week.

SIDNEY ST. WATER MAIN

Lightfoot's men are working down the west side of Sidney St. now, south of Wilson Ave. A second back hoe is on the job, a small one to handle the job. Main Lightfoot says the second hoe will make the work go about twice as fast. The main was put across the street Monday, crossing over, under and around a total of nine other pipes (gas, water, sanitary and storm sewers) on the way. Lightfoot's men are still blasting all the way, but there have been no troubles.

A second crew is working under foreman George Hopkins, south from Highway 2 to the filter plant. This crew is cutting through rock all the way, too, but is not blasting so far.

SMITH TRANSPORT

Floors are going in the office section of the new Smith Transport building now. Metallicrete Floor Co. Ltd., Montreal and Ottawa and Sudbury is doing the job. Load-levellers are also now for the 16 loading doors in the warehouse section. They will be installed next week, according to construction supervisor Howard Lewis.

BLACK DIAMOND

Plastering, finishing and painting now is underway at the Black Diamond addition, and the building should be ready in a few weeks. Delivery delays on some of the equipment, though, may delay opening of the addition.

ELLIOTT MOTORS

Final section of the main floor of the new Elliott Motors building is ready to pour now, and should be poured today. This is the floor section surrounding the frame straightener—an arrangement of railroad rails, hooks and eyes anchored below the floor, which will be used to straighten truck frames.

SACO FOUNDRY ADDITION

The Tatham Co. Ltd. has a contract now, to build a 3,000 square foot addition to the SACO Foundry for stephens-Adamson. The addition was designed a year ago, but Stephens-Adamson decided then to hold off construction for a while. Use of the building will be to increase the foundry's capacity.

DIPHTHERIA REPORTED

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Crippled Children's Centre here was closed to visitors and new patients last fall and again this spring—for a total of 11 weeks—because of the discovery of diphtheria carriers among the patients, it was reported today. The closure followed the discovery of seven child carriers at the centre in the fall and six in March. They were isolated, treated and sent home apparently free of the organism.

Accused Charged With Robbery And Abduction

SARNIA (CP)—Robbery and abduction were the basis of testimony Thursday at the trial of Irvine James, 21, of Sarnia, charged with robbery with violence in the Feb. 23 robbery of Arthur Bernard, 30, of Port Lambton, Ont.

Bernard told the court he and his fiancee were parked on a side road near Port Lambton in the early evening of Feb. 22 when two men forced him from the car and robbed him of $140 at shotgun point.

He said one of the two men, neither of whom he is able to identify, then hit him on the head with a heavy object and the next thing he remembered was hearing his fiance scream and the car in which the men came, and his own truck, drive off.

He said he went immediately to a nearby farmhouse and telephoned the provincial police detachment at Sombra.

The girl said she spent the night taken in the car by the men, neither of whom she said she was able to identify at trial.

Robert Cook, a Sarnia city police detective told of finding the girl at a cabin on the Canadian Indian reserve at 9:10 next morning.

Magistrate J. C. Dunlap then remanded the case to Monday to allow time for discussion of technical aspects of the case.

Witness Says Suggestions Made It Would Cost Money to Get Franchise

TORONTO (CP) — A defence counsel questioned Thursday testimony that Ralph K. Farris, 53, of Vancouver, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company, was told of suggestions it would cost money to get a NONG distribution franchise in Orillia, Ont.

J. Chester Grey of Tucson, Arizona, NONG vice - president and general manager between 1954 and 1957, told the Ontario Supreme Court perjury trial of Farris that he had reported the suggestions to Farris.

However, Grey said under cross - examination by defence counsel Joseph Sedgwick later, he could not recall actually reporting them to the NONG president.

He was testifying at the eighth day of the trial before Mr. Justice Dalton Wells in which Farris is charged with lying as to the disposition of company stock while being examined under oath at two inquiries. One of the two charges is that he falsely denied directing gifts of stock to town officials of Orillia. Greenshurst and Bracebridge — towns which granted franchises to NONG in 1956.

Grey told the court he had reported to Farris that Acres, Inc., said Carter, then Orillia lawyer who now is a county judge, "told me it might cost us something to get the franchise for Orillia."

WOULD COST MONEY

He said that on a subsequent occasion he told Farris that then Orillia Mayor Wilbur Cramp had said it would "cost more than a bottle 'of Crown Royal'(whisky)" to get the Orillia franchise.

Cramp had testified earlier that he received 150 shares of NONG stock several months after the franchise went through there in 1956. Mr. Carter said he received 50 shares in 1957.

Grey told Crown Prosecutor Harvey McCulloch that in June, 1955, he received a telephone call from Carter, at that time a partner in the law firm of Acres, Carter and Moore.

"I told Mr. Farris that Mr. Carter had told me that it might cost us something to get the gas franchise in Orillia."

"What was the reaction of Mr. Farris," asked crown counsel.

"He made no comment," replied Grey.

Grey said that about eight months later Cramp was present while he was buying a bottle of whisky for Carter's law partner, William Moore.

REPORTED STATEMENT

Grey said he told Farris that at that time "Mr. Cramp said it would cost more than a bottle of rye" to get the franchise for Orillia."

Cramp and Carter, who were asked about Cramp's evidence when they testified at the trial last week, both denied making the statements attributed to them by Grey.

Judge Carter had said he received the 50 shares from Moore on dissolution of their law partnership that had acted as Orillia town solicitors. Moore received the shares in February, 1957, from G. Kelly McLean, assistant to Farris.

Mr. Sedgwick asked Grey if he was told it was Farris he had talked to about the suggestion and not Spencer Clarke, of Seattle, executive vice-president of NONG.

"I talked to them both," replied Grey.

DOESN'T REMEMBER

He said he did not know whether he called Farris or Clarke first. He always reported to both, he added.

Grey, who said earlier he had been introduced to Carter over the telephone June, 1955 — and he had previously met him — agreed with Mr. Sedgwick that he told an Ontario Securities Commission investigator that all his dealings had been with Moore.

"Then why do you say Mr. Carter called you?" questioned defence counsel.

Grey said since the investigation last year he had refreshed his memory with his 1955 - 56 journals and that they showed a note of the Carter call.

Mr. Sedgwick contended: "You are aware that Judge Carter has given a sworn evidence in which he denied ever having talked to you?"

"I read about it in the newspapers," replied Grey.

"Is he mistaken? asked defence counsel.

"It might not have been Mr. Carter," Grey admitted.

Grey also admitted telling a commission investigator that he did not recollect reporting the remarks of Cramp — Carter remarks either to Farris or Spencer Clark.

When Grey left the witness stand Thursday, Mr. Justice Wells said:

"I don't think it's a happy bit of evidence, under the circumstances, I think it's unhappy for more than the accused."

Illegal Entry Of Seamen Causes Concern

OTTAWA (CP) — The immigration department has become increasingly concerned over an increase in the number of foreign seamen who are deserting their ships in Canadian ports and entering Canada illegally.

W. M. Isbister, deputy minister of immigration, said Thursday in an interview that vigorous steps are being taken by the department in co-operation with the RCMP to stamp out the practice as much as possible.

"We are trying vigorously to enforce Canadian laws governing the admission of immigrants to this country. We are increasingly concerned over the number of people now entering Canada illegally by ship jumping.

Mr. Isbister said that while the law is being enforced vigorously, this did not mean the department could not have also launched a concerted separate roundup of seamen who have deserted ships and now are in Canada illegally.

Officials of the immigration department were unable to estimate the number of foreign seamen suspected of being in Canada illegally.

However, they said that deportations of foreign seamen in the fiscal 1963 and the first three months of 1964 totalled nearly 800.

Deportations in 1962 totalled 279 and declined to 162 in 1963. But during the first three months of 1964 they totalled 46 but this was a period during which the Great Lakes and Lakes Ports were closed to navigation.

SENT TO COURT

One aspect of the department's concern over the number of seamen entering Canada by jumping ship has been a decision to prosecute some apprehended seamen in the courts.

In the past, seamen ordered deported were usually turned over to their ship's captain or immigration officials in some countries. A great many cases escaped public attention because of lack of publicity given to the courts and the department does not follow a policy of making public announcements on deportations.

Meanwhile, department officials have expressed regret over the detention in London, Ont., of a Greek seaman for almost four months following his arrest for illegally entering the country.

Stylianos Yiannopolous, 29, deserted from the Greek vessel Parthenon when it was in Toronto and was arrested last Jan. 16. He was ordered deported Feb. 4 but his deportation was upheld by the immigration appeal board March 12.

It was not until Tuesday that Yiannopolous, who is to be deported within a week or 10 days, was brought before a court on a charge of entering Canada by stealth. The charge was dismissed by Magistrate C. C. Marshman but this did not effect the deportation order.

Mr. Isbister said the detention of Yiannopolous was within the law but added: "I will not try to explain it away." He said the case took longer than normal to complete because all steps were being taken to prevent such long delays in the future.

CRITICIZES DEPARTMENT

OTTAWA (CP)—Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) said in the Commons Thursday the immigration department has for years circumvented the obvious desire of Parliament to allow all immigrants a full and fair hearing in deportation cases. He spoke in sponsoring a bill that would make it mandatory for the immigration department to disclose reasons for deportation orders. It was talked out.

Gordon Favors Canadian Ownership

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Gordon said Thursday might be is "very much in favor" of legislation to ensure control of Canadian ownership and control of newspapers in Canada.

He also indicated there may be federal legislation to prevent foreign control of Canadian banks.

Mr. Gordon raised the possibility of federal action in both fields during an interview on the Pierre Berton show, a half-hour television program recorded in advance for a number of Canadian TV stations.

He said he would not put legislation on newspapers a and banks ahead of the long list of government legislation now before the Commons, including the Canada Pension Plan.

But he said he would give higher priority to "measures which would make sure that our financial institutions and our news media remain under Canadian control" than to measures dealing with control of other kinds of businesses.

MAY ACT SOON

Mr. Gordon indicated, however, that there might be a constitutional question of whether the federal government has power to pass legislation affecting newspapers.

"I think that it would be desirable, if there is no constitutional right to do so, to see that ownership of Canadian newspapers and control of Canadian newspapers remains in Canada."

This would be similar to present rules requiring Canadian control of TV stations—"a good thing" and one that wants to be independent."

He said this sort of action "is much better to be taken before the event, when nobody is about to be hurt."

When the Bank Act comes before Parliament later this year "I dare say there will be some discussion about taking steps to see that the banking industry remains Canadian controlled from outside the country."

In the Commons Thursday, Prime Minister Pearson told Douglas Fisher (NDP—Port Arthur) there are no new developments in a suggestion he made earlier that the government might move to keep Canadian newspapers from falling into foreign ownership. Mr. Fisher raised the question because of "some developments in Toronto," which he did not specify.

REWARD DOUBLED

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP)—The reward for information leading to the arrest of the killer of storekeeper Walter Giff has been doubled to $2,000. The Ontario government and this Ottawa Valley community made the announcement Thursday. Mr. Giff was found shot to death in his grocery store March 29.

Parliamentary Notebook

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Speaker Alan Macnaughton has been the subject of scattered criticism by back-bench Liberal MPs as a result of his decision this week in the Commons to oppose Opposition Leader Diefenbaker enjoys a specially-privileged position.

An examination of parliamentary precedents backs up the Speaker's stand—with a particularly significant case which arose in the Commons 23 years ago in circumstances personally familiar to the Conservative leader, and on which Mr. Macnaughton is relying as his authority.

It was in June, 1941, six months after the reconciliative break-up of a federal-provincial premiers' conference in which the chief contenders had been the late prime minister Mackenzie King and the late Mitchell F. Hepburn, premier of Ontario.

He said he would not put legislation on newspapers a and banks ahead of the long list of government legislation now before the Commons, including the Canada Pension Plan.

But he said he would give higher priority to "measures which would make sure that our financial institutions and our news media remain under Canadian control" than to measures dealing with control of other kinds of businesses.

This would be similar to present rules requiring Canadian control of TV stations—"a good thing" and one that wants to be independent."

He said this sort of action "is much better to be taken before the event, when nobody is about to be hurt."

When the Bank Act comes before Parliament later this year "I dare say there will be some discussion about taking steps to see that the banking industry remains Canadian controlled from outside the country."

In the Commons Thursday, Prime Minister Pearson told Douglas Fisher (NDP—Port Arthur) there are no new developments in a suggestion he made earlier that the government might move to keep Canadian newspapers from falling into foreign ownership. Mr. Fisher raised the question because of "some developments in Toronto," which he did not specify.

REWARD DOUBLED

SMITHS FALLS, Ont. (CP)—The reward for information leading to the arrest of the killer of storekeeper Walter Giff has been doubled to $2,000. The Ontario government and this Ottawa Valley community made the announcement Thursday. Mr. Giff was found shot to death in his grocery store March 29.

He added that while Mr. Diefenbaker may have been a little long in putting his question, his remarks were germane to the point.

"I wish that when I was occupying the position of leader of the Opposition the same charitable interpretation had been granted to me," said Prime Minister Pearson.

Mr. Diefenbaker is being given in parliamentary circles to recognize the position of former prime ministers in a more tangible way.

Senator Pouliot recently has been asking in the Senate what steps are to be taken which would raise Mr. Diefenbaker and former prime minister Louis St. Laurent on the official list of precedence. They now rank behind all foreign ambassadors, federal cabinet ministers, and provincial lieutenant-governors.

START REMEMBRANCE

YPRES, Belgium (CP)—Representatives of 14 nations gathered in this tiny Flemish market town Thursday to signal the start of a summer of remembrance. Wipers — pronounced more like "eep" in French, plus a rolling "r" at the end—was the scene of bitter fighting in the First World War.

New Discovery Sparks Record On Exchange

TORONTO (CP)—A major ore discovery has sparked trading on the wildest day's trading in the history of the Toronto Stock Exchange Thursday.

The volume for the day was 16,695,000 shares, 859,000 shares over the previous record set July 7, 1958, during the uranium boom.

The find that started the buying spree as made by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. on its zinc-copper-silver property in Kidd Township, 10 miles north of the Timmins airport. Penny issues with claims in the area surged upwards on heavy turnover on the Toronto and Canadian exchanges.

The speculative leader was PCE Exploration with a gain of 20 cents to 87 cents on 2,559,- 378 shares. Belleterre rose 21 cents to 62 cents on 580,800 shares, Jelex 5½ cents to 34 cents on 468,000 shares, Paramque five cents to 22 cents on 842,300 shares and Bunker Hill one cent to 70 cents on 1,409,800 shares.

Industrial prices remained firm through the speculative boom.

Among leading industrial issues, Reichhold advanced 11.25 to $76.25, Massey-Ferguson 81 to $21.88, Distillers - Seagrams 88 cents to $56.50 and Aluminium 88 cents to $34.38.

The exchange index and the industrial index both closed at record levels. Up .81 to 140.21 and ahead .96 to 149.90 respectively.

Urges Restraint By Advocates Of Civil Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, deploring violence and disorder in the civil rights struggle, says all groups should practice moderation and try to understand the other fellow's viewpoint.

Johnson was asked to comment Thursday, at his biggest-ever news conference, on civil rights demonstrations that run against the law or threaten violence. He replied:

"We do not of course, condone violence or taking the law into your own hands, or condoning the health or safety of our people. You really do the civil rights cause no good when you go to this extent."

Coroner's Jury Rules Two Errors Were Committed in Gall Bladder Operation

GUELPH (CP)—In coroner's jury ruled Thursday that Ina Noor, 34, of nearby Palmerston died March 7 as a result of two errors committed by her surgeon during a gall bladder operation eight days before or death.

But the five-man jury, after hearing 24½ days of complex medical testimony in the inquest, said there was "no significant evidence of negligence in these serious and unfortunate errors."

The surgeon who operated on the widow was Dr. Robert K. Graham, 36, of Palmerston.

The jurors, all from the Palmerston area, agreed with earlier testimony that Mrs. Noor died as the result of bile peritonitis—inflammation of the abdominal cavity caused by bile. They said the peritonitis was a result of the two surgical errors.

The jury, which made no recommendations with its verdict, said the two errors Dr. Graham committed were:

—Inadequate clearing of obscuring tissue around the operative area, which resulted in his failure to identify the bile ducts and the point at which they came together.

—Inadequate closing of the cystic duct.

ADMITS ERROR

Dr. Graham admitted he severed a bile channel known as the cystic duct when he thought he only sutured closed another channel, the common bile duct.

He said he had done the closing the cystic duct unsutured, because his vision of the ducts was hampered by fatty tissue surrounding them.

Other testimony revealed that bile passing through the severed cystic duct into the abdomen had caused the peritonitis.

An autopsy also revealed a clamp had been left inside Mrs. Noor the day after this did not contribute to the woman's death. However, the jury said the error demonstrated a lack of care on the part of Dr. Graham.

Dr. Graham made no comment on the verdict, delivered after about 1¼ hours of deliberation, but a broad smile erased the tense expression which the surgeon had held throughout the day's inquest.

Earlier Thursday, Dr. A. D. McLachlin, chief surgeon at Victoria Hospital in London, Ont., said evidence in the death indicated a decided lack of carefull thought on the part of Dr. Graham.

Dr. McLachlin, also head of the surgery department at the University of Western Ontario, was called to testify as an expert in surgery.

ISN'T TYPICAL

Questioning the operation itself, Dr. McLachlin said: "This is not the type of technical work one would expect to be done by a surgeon of Dr. Graham's experience. This is not good surgery."

Commenting on the surgeon's testimony that he left the cystic duct unsutured because his vision was blocked, Dr. McLachlin commented. "Gall bladder surgery is common surgery. We universally teach that the only way to proceed is to dissect out fatty tissues around the area."

He also told the inquest, conducted by Ontario's supervising coroner, Dr. H. H. Shore, that in his opinion Mrs. Noor could have been saved March 3 or March 4 when nurses reported to Dr. Graham that bile had soaked her dressings.

Dr. Graham, in his charge to the jury, said it had to decide whether the public should expect better care from a doctor. He summarized 12½ hours of evidence the jury had heard during testimony by 27 witnesses.

Arrest Hundred African Women Over Protest

CP from Reuters-AP

SALISBURY—About 100 African women were arrested here today after they marched on the British high commission building protesting the detention of Southern Rhodesian Negro leaders.

More than 300 women joined the march through the centre of Salisbury to protest against the detention of the Negro nationalist leader, Joshua Nkomo and three of his lieutenants.

Strong Quake South of Island Is Recorded

FAIRBANKS (AP)—A strong earthquake centred about 300 miles southwest of Kodiak Island was recorded by the U.S. coast and geodetic survey here Thursday.

Officials said the shock at 9:29 a.m. (2:29 p.m. EST) had an intensity of more than 7 on the scale, of them as high as 7 on the Richter scale, which has no upper limit. The Good Friday shock had a reading of 8.7.

In Seattle, the University of Washington seismograph picked up today's tremor two minutes after it was recorded here and rated it at an intensity of 7.2.

Norman Rasmussen, university geologist, placed the centre southwest of Kodiak in the North Pacific about 1,500 miles from Seattle.

Rasmussen said this was "in the same general fault area," as the March 27 earthquake was a distinct new one, not an aftershock.

He said if there was any displacement on the floor of the ocean seismic waves could be generated.

Suspend Minister For Sermon

COPENHAGEN (Reuters)—It is "natural for some men and women" to have pre-marital sexual relations, the pastor of a Danish Lutheran Church said Thursday.

The pastor, Harald Soebye, has been suspended from duties by a consistory court where he appeared following his suspension by Mrs. Ruth Gotfredsen, the Danish minister for ecclesiastical affairs, for "intolerable conduct."

Soebye's suspension arose from a sermon he delivered at his place church at Blovstrod, near Copenhagen, on Easter Sunday, in the sermon Soebye attacked remarks by Pastor Ro-Arnament moré, and the Danish Evangelical Church.

Soebye's sermon comment on pre-marital sex when the consistory judge, Ejnar Kudsel, one would expect he had attacked MRA and the Evangelical Church because of their pre-Easter campaign against sin instruction for Danish children.

He said:

"Sex is a gift to us. Some can wait, others cannot . . . those who object to instruction in birth control are going against the laws of life."

"NATURAL FOR SOME"

"It is natural for some men and women to have sexual relations prior to marriage."

"It cannot be correct for all to wait until after marriage," Soebye said.

When Soebye was asked by the judge whether he had said "Down with royalty, long live the revolution," in his Easter Sunday sermon, Soebye replied:

"Most likely I said 'Royalty is a blasphemy'. The background for that statement is mainly the Bible."

He said that in his sermon he had accused his immediate superior, Bishop Lerer Anderson, of a cowardly act by refusing to organize Soebye's sermon.

He also said he had, later, told reporters the bishop was "a wretch."

He also admitted having mentioned in a protest march against Denmark's membership in NATO, and said: "NATO is founded on the shield of capitalism."

The consistory court has no direct authority. Soebye's hearing lasted about an hour and 45 minutes.

An official of the ecclesiastical affairs ministry said the ministry would receive a report before negotiating with the Danish pastors association prior to a decision by Mrs. Koch on Soebye's future.

Paint Definitions

Now is the time to brush up on some of the terms you will be meeting in paint advertisements, how-to-do-it articles, and in conversations with your painter, do-it-yourself decorator or painting contractor.

Paint can best be defined as a liquid which, when applied, dries to form a tough, solid film on surfaces we want to beautify and protect. Most of us use the term paint to include such kindred products as enamel, varnish and lacquer.

Paint consists of three major parts: vehicle, primer and solvent, sometimes called thinner.

The vehicle, which is also known as the base or binder, is the part of paint that forms the film. In opaque coatings such as paint and enamel, it holds the pigment or color particles together. Vehicles are either drying oils such as linseed oil, tung oil, castor oil, or they are resins, either natural or synthetic.

The solvent is the volatile fluid in which the resin is dissolved so that it can be applied by brush, roller or spray. When the vehicle is an oil, the solvent is generally called a thinner. because it makes the oil thin enough to be easily brushed. Sometimes a mineral spirits is the usual solvent or thinner for oil and alkyd - based paints. The thinner for water-emulsion paints is, naturally, water. These paints are sometimes called latex - thinned paints, emulsion paints, latex or rubber - based paints. Latex paints seldom contain rubber. They are synthetic resins and the chemical name used, e.g: butadiene-styrene, polyvinyl acetate (PVA - or vinyl), and acrylic. They all share some characteristics: no paint odor, dry in an hour or less, do not show lap marks, brushes and rollers clean in water, and spills and spatters can be removed with a damp cloth. The first water-emulsion paints were used only for interior walls, but now they are formulated for use on all exterior surfaces, including wood. It is imperative that directions for these low solvent emulsion paints be read and followed carefully before using.

Enamel is an opaque coating designed to flow and level well and give a smooth, extremely tough finish. It comes as a gloss, semigloss or flat finish and in interior and exterior formulations. Enamels are the most washable and abrasion resistant of common-type coatings.

Varnish is a colorless coating which dries to a tough, transparent film which can take lots of abuse. It is used for floors, furniture and wherever it is desired that the natural wood grain show through. There are colored varnishes which are known as varnish stains.

Alkyd resins are synthetic resins formed by combining an alcohol and an acid. They make a tough base for oil-based paints, enamels and varnishes and are the most widely used base today.

A primer is a paint formulated especially to seal or adhere firmly to surfaces to which it is applied. Primers are needed and should be used when recommended. It forms a sound foundation for the top or finish coats and prevents uneven absorption of the top coat. The primer used for enamel is often called an "enamel undercoater." There is a rust-inhibiting primer available to be used when painting your metal porch rails. The new exterior emulsion paints can be used only with the primer specified by the manufacturer.

Lacquer is an extremely quick drying coating most often applied in the factory to manufactured products. There is a special type known as brushing lacquer that does not dry so quickly and is more suitable for home use.

Multicolor paint consists of two or more colors applied simultaneously from a single source.

Power Tools Speed-up Fix-up Jobs

A power-tooled home work-shop often mean that jobs that would "never get done" can be accomplished quickly and efficiently.

Today, power tools and hand tools are familiar equipment in many households.

One reason for the great upsurge in their use has been the housing boom of the past decade.

Before buying power tools, the question to ask oneself is, "What do I want it for?"

If one wants a workshop that will absorb a wide variety of jobs, there's a power tool for every purpose.

In any case, the decision is up to the buyer. To build the workshop that suits his purpose best.

The advantage of power tools are speed and accuracy. Anyone who expects to be doing a lot of odd jobs around the house will save time and energy with them.

BENCH SAW VITAL

Basic to any workshop is the benchsaw. It is good for quick cross and rip sawing, beveling and cutting at angles. It comes in various sizes and styles. Which one to choose is a question you can answer only by personal inspection.

With attachments, the bench saw can be converted for sanding, drilling, planing and other functions.

Other practical power tools are:

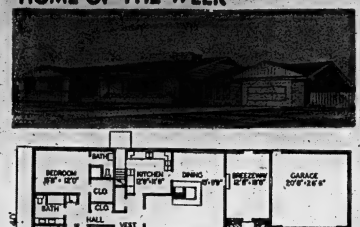
Jointer for planing boards to get accurate surfaces in cabinetmaking. Great flexibility in shaping wood. It tapers, bevels, rabbets, does tongue and groove work.

Drill press for boring accurate holes in all workable materials. Mortise and tenon joints, reeding, fluting, routing, buffing, etc.

Jig saw — Vibration-type saw for intricate scrollwork and other fine work. Interchangeable blades make it very versatile.

Oil and disk sander — Essential for quick, accurate sanding of irregular shaped work.

Wood lathe for work in the round such as table legs, bowls, etc.



Band saw for cutting curves, stacks of work (good in making toys and duplicates), scrollwork.

Grinder for sharpening tools.

Spindle shaper for molding, picture frames and similar decorative work.

Drill press for keeping power and hand tool blades accurately honed and sharp for best results.

HOME OF THE WEEK

Modern Living Calls for More Hot Water Faster

In today's modern home it's a case of water, water needed everywhere — and particularly hot water. But the problem is how to get enough of it for our larger families and then how to store it in our smaller-sized houses, and produce it as rapidly as possible and inexpensively.

Today's house may "over approximate" the hot water-gulping constrivances, but fail to be equally modernized in its hot water capacity.

This is the case with water heaters in many American homes today, according to the National Fueloil Council. While householders go merrily along buying such time-saving items as automatic dishwashers and washing machines, and adding extra bathrooms, not to mention having lots of babies, the incumbent water heater becomes literally "swamped" by the increase in the demands placed upon it.

From early morning till late evening, the kitchen, laundry, and bathrooms of the modern American house are continually in use for any number of purposes — showering, shaving, bathing, washing, shampoos, brushing teeth, food preparation — and, of course, washing dishes frequently in a new, hot water-gulping dishwasher.

Add to this, washing the family clothes in the automatic washing, and the other general household uses for hot water, and it is easy to see how this element — and the water heater — play a vital and new role in modern living.

A generation ago a family of four used about 1,000 to 1,200 gallons of hot water a month. Today's needs are triple — around 3,000 gallons a month (100 gallons a day). Dishwashing and automatic laundry consume about 45 percent of this, showers and baths another 30 percent. The rest goes into washing hands and face, housecleaning and miscellaneous uses.

Not only do homes need more water, but a lot of it has to be hotter — 140 degrees for average uses up to 180 degrees recommended for dishwashers.

Among modern developments for the home aimed at solving this problem is a new oil-fired water heater that needs only one hour a day to produce 120 gallons of hot water in a compact 30 gallons storage tank.

It burns oil combined with air in a gun-like burner head as do the automatic oil heating plants. The secret of this heater is its "recovery coil" in the tank, with which it can heat up water for the storage tank as the supply is used.

This spacious home could be built on a 100 foot lot by reducing the width of the breezeway to 8 feet. As you can see, each area serves its purpose very efficiently. The living-dining area is a beautiful "front-to-back" "L" with the contemporary fireplace gracing both rooms. The breezeway is jalousey enclosed and can serve as an informal social area. Master bedroom has separate bath with stall shower and a walk-in closet. Two other bedrooms and full bath with a double bowl vanity unit complete the sleeping section. Rear exit and basement stairs are located off kitchen landing. Construction is brick veneer but instructions for building in solid brick or frame are supplied.

Sunken Logs Recovered for a Profit

Underwater log salvage is becoming an important phase of the Canadian lumbering industry in certain areas. Until recent years "sinkers" or "sunken heads", as sunken logs are called, were recovered from shallow water only. This was done with a pike pole which literally speared logs lying on the bottom. However, since the perfection of Scientifically Controlled Underwater Breathing Apparatus (SCUBA), recovery of sunken logs in deep water has become practical and profitable.

For many years it was believed that sunken logs were not worth recovering. Some thought only a grade log, wood sank; or if submerged for more than a few weeks, logs would quickly decay when recovered and exposed to air; or logs would be badly discolored, they would not produce marketable lumber. All these claims have been disproved as logs recovered after being submerged 25 to 30 years are producing excellent lumber.

Three factors are required to promote wood decaying fungi: a sufficient degree of moisture, air, and a favorable temperature, usually 75 to 90 degrees. Lack of any one of these requirements will inhibit decay. A log lying on a lake or river bottom absorbs sufficient moisture but lacks air and warmer temperatures. It does not rot.

Some firms in Ontario import logs for peeling to veneers, store their logs submerged in fresh water to prevent checking and splitting. At Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, squared timbers (about 10" x 10") are stored underwater until ready to be installed as sills on the bottom of canal lock gates. Recently such a timber, stored underwater for 30 years, was floated in to place on a lock gate and is expected to give many years service there.

One Ottawa valley lumber producer salvages logs from the Ottawa River in this fashion. Last year this operation recovered 7,000 White Pine logs. Some logs were nearly 50 years old. Sufficient lumber was produced from these logs to build about 100 houses.

Room Expansion Calls for Attention to Heating Needs

At last! You've decided to build that new room addition — and just in time to keep your home's seams from exploding.

But — have you decided how you're going to heat the added room? Will it be hooked into the present warm air system? Is your present heating plant large enough for adding the new room? Do you want electric heat? How about insulation?

These are basic, important questions — so perhaps the first thing to do is to find a home improvement expert to consult with about the entire project, including heating.

If the addition isn't too large your present heating plant might be adequate to heat the new room, too. If so, your home improvement dealer simply has the hot air ducts or hot water pipes extended into the new room.

But remember that how much heat the new room needs for comfort depends on its size and how well it is insulated. Even if an entirely new system is needed to heat the added room, thorough insulation will pay off in lower fuel bills.

Assuming that you decide the old plant won't be adequate, what are your options?

1. All-electric heating of the added room is one possibility. The heaters may be base-board-type units or recessed into the walls to radiate into the room. Some have blowers that force air over heated elements.

2. A new fuel-burning central plant can be installed that will heat the whole house, including the added room. If your old furnace is due for replacement, this option might make sense.

The type chosen may be oil or gas, furnishing warmed forced air or re-circulating hot water. Most of the new central, fuel-fired systems are designed for add-on air conditioning at lower cost than independent cooling systems.

3. A second fuel-burning furnace or space heater can be installed in a closet of the new room addition, with no connection to your existing heating plant. Usually, this will be the forced air type, with ducts running in the crawl space under the floor.

PILL WORKS

CHICAGO (AP)—A pill to prevent influenza has worked fairly well in first human tests, researchers announced Wednesday. It also seems to help reduce chills, aches and pains and other nastiness that come along when you do get influenza. The need for shots against some types of flu will end if the drug lives up to its first blush of promise. It may also protect against German measles and perhaps other virus infections.

Paint Styling Brings Out Good Features of Rooms

It's Time! Clean Up, Check Up

It's a sure sign of spring when homeowners begin sprucing up their property. For spring has been the traditional season for cleaning since early Biblical days when it was customary to bring livestock into the house or ten. during winter.

Naturally, when spring finally "sprung," there was a good deal of cleaning and repairing to be done, both inside and out.

Today, spring cleaning is not only a colorful custom, but also an essential operation in maintaining a high and healthy standard of "liveability" through repairs, replacements and remodeling.

Start your spring spruce-up right now by running down this checklist of potential trouble spots.

ON THE ROOF

Inspect roof for shingles which have been torn loose or curled upward by wind. These should be renailed, or cemented down with a liberal dab of roofing cement.

On the roof, check condition of mortar around chimney, and look for holes, cracks or corrosions in roof flashings. If severely damaged, the flashing should be replaced. (Call in a professional roofer for this job.) Minor cracks or small rusted areas can be repaired temporarily by coating with a heavy layer of roofing cement.

Check gutters and downspouts for damaged connections and clogging. Refasten hangers which have worked loose, and remove debris collected during winter.

AROUND THE WALLS

Examine clapboard or shingle siding for cracks or rotted places. Prompt application of caulking compound or white lead putty will prevent moisture from entering. In severe cases, replace shingles or length of clapboard as soon as possible.

FIX minor cracks in brick, stucco and other masonry walls with caulking compound or patching cement. Do same with cracks or openings in walls, patios and other concrete surfaces.

Check exterior of house for worn, blistered or peeling paint.

Examine window heads and sills (framing above windows and doors) for deteriorating caulking and replace wherever required. Check window panes for cracked putty.

Clean, patch and paint screens. Use metal corner brackets to reinforce screen frames which have begun to work loose at corners.

ABOUT FOUNDATIONS

Check ground around foundations for holes left by washouts and fill them with layers of sand or gravel, topped with soil at grade level.

Repair foundation cracks with a pitch base waterproofing cement that can be applied with a pointing tool, trowel or putty knife.

Look for signs of termites around all foundation walls, crawl spaces and basement areas. Eliminate all possible connections between the ground and wooden parts of the house.

Indoors, check for cracked plaster or wallboard; split, worn or loose floor tile; cracked basement masonry; overloaded electrical circuits; cracked or stained plumbing fixtures; and worn, split or loose stair treads and risers.

Give the home heating and hot water system an annual tune-up and adjustment. Call in a service man for this job.

Outside, look for fenceposts which have worked loose; boards or trees which have split or are leaning against the house, weakened TV antennas; damaged pipes and warped or split boards in porch floors or exterior walls.

Housing Hints

Q. Is it possible to do your own contracting when building under the National Housing Act?

A. Yes it is, but the borrower would have to satisfy the approved lender concerned of his ability to complete the transaction properly. This method calls for a lot of hard work, time and a good knowledge of the building industry. You would, for example, have to make your own arrangements for the purchase and delivery of all materials and equipment required and the hiring of sub-contractors. You would also be responsible for having the sewer, water and hydro connected and for your own accounting. It can be a very complicated undertaking and unless you're entirely satisfied you can handle it properly, it might be well to employ a reputable contractor.

Q. What assistance is available for the purchase of older homes?

A. There are a number of ways to finance the purchase of existing houses. First, a loan may be obtained from a lending institution such as a life insurance or trust and loan company. In 1961 these companies invested more than 300 million dollars in mortgages on existing residential properties. Mortgage loans made by lending institutions on their account — that is, not under the National Housing Act — are known as conventional loans. Private mortgage loans are also available from real estate companies, private corporations, trustees of estates and individuals.

Q. How may the owner of an NHA financed house sell his property?

A. While it's not possible to obtain a new loan under the National Housing Act to finance the purchase of such a property, it is possible for a buyer to make arrangements to assume responsibility for the existing mortgage. He would of course have to provide from his own resources an amount equal to the difference between the selling price of the house and the amount of the loan outstanding. Then, with completion of the assumption agreement, he'd carry on the payments on the NHA mortgage for the remainder of its term.

Q. Is the repayment term for conventional loans different from the 25, 30, and 35 year terms permissible under the National Housing Act?

A. Yes. As in the case of the interest rate, the term of the loan is also a matter of individual arrangement between the borrower and the lender. Repayment periods can vary greatly, but 15 years would probably be the most general term and payments are not necessarily arranged in monthly instalments. They may be monthly, quarterly or even semi-annually.

Q. Does CMHC have publications of housebuilding hints, and how can they be obtained?

A. Books and pamphlets on nearly every aspect of housing are available, free of charge, at your local CMHC office. They have a series of pamphlets which cover everything from mortgage loans to home improvement loans. One of their more popular booklets is "Choosing a House Design" which contains some very good advice often overlooked by the eager house purchaser. They also have a catalogue of small house designs featuring photographs and floor plans for bungalows, two storey and split level houses. Plans for these houses may be purchased from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

THE HUNTER — Puppies can be imaginative, adventuresome, mischievous and sometimes all three. Take the case of this little pup who obviously imagines himself a great hunter as he peers from the door, top left, sights his prey and cautiously stalks it, top right. He also enjoys the adventure of the chase, closing in, bottom left, only to have his more experienced adversary leap away, bottom right, saving the mischievous pup from another scolding. Most Homes Need Better Wiring Brought up to Date

If your home was built ten or more years ago, it's almost certain that your family and the house itself will benefit from an electrical modernization job. Good enough in its day, as old-fashioned wiring system cannot deliver the "housepower" needed for the wide array of electrical equipment and lighting which most American families need and want.

SURVEY THE SYSTEM

Even in many homes which have been built quite recently, inadequate electrical capacity as insufficient outlets place irritating restrictions on enjoyment of electrical living.

Almost any home improvement job will require some electrical work. So, why not let the electrical contractor survey the entire wiring system? It will be far more economical to have needed improvements made all at one time.

For instance, you may be planning to modernize your kitchen, or to create a laundry area for the electric washer and dryer.

Modern standards call for at least two 20-ampere, 120 volt circuits to serve plug-in appliances, plus individual circuits for major equipment, such as the electric range, refrigerator-freezer, dishwasher - disposer, automatic washer and electric clothes dryer. In addition there should be at least one duplex convenience outlet for every four feet of kitchen counter.

PLAN OUTLETS

Lighting fixtures should be installed to provide general illumination, plus supplementary lighting over the sink and under cabinets.

If you are redecorating, general living areas, strategically placed lighting fixtures — perhaps with dimmer controls — can work magic on colors, fabrics and art objects.

And don't let the new decor be marred by trailing extension cords and "octopus" plugs! Have additional outlets installed to accommodate portable lamps, TV and hi-fi in the locations you prefer.

TRAFFIC TOUCH-UPS

Halls, doorways and heavy-traffic areas of your wood floors should receive an extra coat of wax occasionally, to retain a matching shine to the rest of the floor.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Five hundred and forty years ago, to be exact, two brave Scotsmen, the heather-scented breezes of their native Highlands blowing their kilts, were strolling across their favorite moor.

One carelessly smote a small pebble with his walking-stick. It rolled some 20 feet and disappeared from view into a small hole.

His companion stared. He tried it—and missed. He tried again and sunk the wee pebble. This went on all the way back to the town.

Thusly, the records say, was born the "game o'gowf."

Little did the wee Jocks know that their Highland fun was the forerunner of a sport that has spawned millionaires and "maniacs," and a following that runs into the millions.

It has run the gamut of society from royalty to chimney sweeps. Gradually the wheat separated itself from the tare and the day that famous Bobby Jones won golf-dom's "clean sweep" it was a rich man's game.

Today it is a rich man's game but in a different sense. It breeds them, makes them and keeps them that way—if they can maintain championship status.

Those early "Jocks" would rattle their bones if they knew that their innocent pastime developed into a sport that brings six-figure incomes to topnotch performers.

Take Arnold Palmer. The current king of the links earns $400,000 to $500,000 annually from golf and business. It has interests in some 27 corporations, enough for him to form an insurance company just to collect the premiums.

He recently became the first four-times winner of the famous Masters Tournament. If you watched it on television, you saw this master of the fairways and greens stroke his way to an eleven-under-par score.

And you saw thousands of golf addicts follow their idol in king-sized galleries as he swept aside the opposition in a superb 36-hole display.

They tell me every golfer has a different style; a different approach to the game—different temperament. Some play the game like chess-players, taking time out carefully with every stroke. Others play it boldly, relying more on power than finesse.

Palmer is one of the latter. He is a "go-for-broke" believer—and this cost him twelve strokes on one hole at one time.

Pennsylvania-born Palmer was born, so to speak, with a golf-club in his hand. He teethed on the small white balls. At the age of three he got a set of sawed-off clubs.

Four years later he broke 55 for nine holes and at twelve he broke 70. Two years later in his first match at high school he carded a 71.

But success has not gone to the 34-year-old Palmer's head. The idol of golfdom thousands, he refuses to accept a seat on a private pedestal. He likes people —and people like him. (No soap commercial intended.)

What I'm leading up to is this. That golfers in circulation radius of this newspaper can read, study and practice the Palmer system starting next week.

The "master" has produced a series of illustrated briefs that show stance, and contain written instructions.

Golfers from pros to dubs can benefit from this fine series which starts in this newspaper next Tuesday on the sports pages.

The Palmer Method series which will run three times weekly is profusely illustrated. You can not only read how it's done, but see it. Instruction is worded in simple language, short and to the point.

Grey-thatched veterans of the links as well as pink-checked novices can benefit. It is the best, most informative golf series this newspaper has published in years.

Howe Sets Up Winner Again ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Wings Blow 3-Goal Lead, Then Win It

By DAVE BETTS

DETROIT (CP) — It's little wonder Gordie Howe is nervous. The superstar right winger and the rest of the Detroit Red Wings have been leaving everything to the last-minute lately.

Thursday night Howe's linemate Alex Delvecchio scored at 19:43 of the third period against Toronto Maple Leafs to give the Wings a 4-3 win in the third game of the Stanley Cup finals.

In the final minute of the second game in Toronto goalie Terry Sawchuk was beaten and the Wings had to win in overtime. In the first game Toronto's Bob Pulford beat Sawchuk with only two seconds remaining to hand the Wings their only loss of the series.

"Nerves, Nerves," said Howe Thursday as he mopped his blended brow in the Olympia dressing room. "The pressure in these playoff games keeps building and building and I don't know how long I can take it."

His eyes were almost shut, he was blinking so rapidly.

WINGS WERE TIRING

"I'm glad this one didn't go into overtime. I just don't know whether any of us would have had any gas left. Maybe some of the young fellows could have lasted but I'm glad this one is over."

Delvecchio gave a large share of the credit to Howe for setting up the game-winning goal after the Leafs had crawled back from a 3-0 deficit to tie the score only 36 seconds earlier.

"I didn't want to take a chance if I couldn't sink that one," said captain Delvecchio. "Gordie and Andre (Pronovost) worked it over to me and Johnny Bower was on the other side of the cage."

The relentless Wings, who have been giving the older and more experienced Leafs a stern-ing lesson throughout the series, simply refused to wilt after the tying goal by Don McKenney at 18:47.

They dumped the puck into the Toronto zone and held it there in the final minute. Manager-coach Punch Imlach of Toronto said later the game was lost because his defenders demonstrated no prowess in clearing the puck from their own end.

The Wings streaked into action in the first period as if each player had motorized skates.

TAKE 2-0 LEAD

While Toronto fumbled to get footing amid rapid changes in line combinations, the Wings zipped in three quick goals, two by Floyd Smith and one by Bruce MacGregor.

It took a penalty to Ed Joyal of Detroit in the second period to set the stage for the first Toronto goal. Seconds after Joyal jumped out of the box, Andy Bathgate let a screened shot from the point that Sawchuk did not see until it was behind him.

When both clubs started to tire in the third period, the Leafs put on one of their one-man 11th-hour rallies, and first Dave Keon and then linemate McKenney found openings from scrambles near the net.

With the Leafs apparently resigned to overtime and looking forward to a break, the Wings evoked the gods of energy and plummeted into the Toronto zone.

Delvecchio's goal elicited a booming crescendo of glee from 15,005 Red Wing partisans whose idols have not won a Stanley Cup for nine years.

Manager-coach Sid Abel, who handles the Wings like a favorite uncle manages children on the way to the candy store, beamed with pride and pleasure.

HAS COMEBACK CLUB

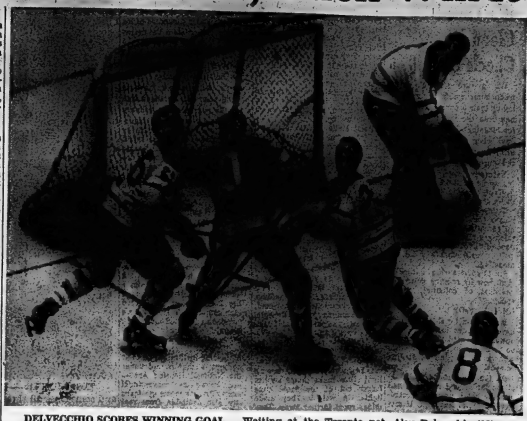
Abel said above the joyous dressing-room din: "I've got a real comeback club. When you win one in overtime and then another in the last minute, you know you have a team that just doesn't believe in quitting."

Toronto's potency was mainly centred in the only forward line left unscrambled by coach Imlach — Keon, McKenney and George Armstrong.

The two rearranged units — Bathgate between Frank Mahovlich and Ron Stewart, and Bob Pulford between Red Kelly and Gerry Ehman — did not seem to be able to readjust quickly enough, and the irresistible Wings forced their backs to the wall for most of the first two periods.

Imlach left the Olympia quickly after he was jostled by a dozen or so over-enthusiastic Detroit fans. He said the team played well after the shaky start and added: "We have to win three now, and don't bet we can't do it."

LEAFS TO PRACTICE



He announced the team will practice again today while the Wings relax at Toledo, Ohio.

Centre Norm Ullman, who was given special attention by the Toronto defenders, managed another point Thursday night—an assist on Smith's second goal—and moved his total points to 19, just five short of the record held by Chicago's Stan Mikita.

Smith says his second goal was really Ullman's, and apparently the official scorer thought so for some time because Ullman was given credit at one point.

"Norm had a clear shot," said Smith, "and I think the puck would have gone in anyway. It ticked off my stick but didn't really change direction."

The fourth game in the series is here Saturday and the fifth in Toronto Tuesday. The sixth, if needed, will be played here next Thursday.

TORONTO (CP) — Norman W. He contended the amendments would mean that end of archery ranges within municipal boundaries, because most municipalities forbid firearms.

Reds Whip Dodgers, Giants Win

Cincinnati's first-footed Vada Pinson, who got into trouble last year for failing to speed, may have solved his problem.

Criticized last year for not capitalizing on his speed by bunting for base hits, Pinson has stepped off to an unusually quick April start without laying one down. Instead, he's been slaying them up the middle for base hits.

Pinson lashed three singles Thursday night and along with rookie Chico Ruiz, who collected a single, double and triple, provided enough firepower for the Reds to hand the world champion Los Angeles Dodgers their second loss in three games, 5-2.

Pinson, who has been a National League batting title contender since he became a Cincinnati regular in 1958, has amassed 965 hits over that stretch—more than Stan Musial, 975 Willie Mays, 958, and Hank Aaron, 914, in their first five years.

Yet he always has been beset by the bunt-more-often critics. He was so incensed by one writer last season that the two tangled in the Reds' dressing room and ultimately finished up in a no-decision court battle with the matter dropped.

Whether to bunt or not still is up to Pinson, but he may be able to solve some of his problems with a solid start. He's 4-for-8 now, quite an improvement over last season when he managed only 10 hits in 60 April at-bats and still finished with a .385 average.

PITCHES A SHUTOUT

While Pinson was collecting three hits, Curt Simmons allowed only three to the hard-hitting San Francisco Giants, starting off his 17th season by pitching St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-0 shutout. In the only other game scheduled, Milwaukee Braves edged Houston Colts 4-3 with Hank Aaron and Felipe Alou playing key roles.

The Reds' Ruiz-Pinson combine was too much for the Dodgers. Ruiz doubled in the first and scored on a single by Pinson, then tripled on another single by Pinson. In the fifth, Ruiz and Pinson both singled with Deron Johnson's sacrifice fly accounting for the run batted in.

That was more than enough for Jim O'Toole and Joe Nuxhall, who checked the Dodgers on eight hits. O'Toole retired the first 14 batters he faced but fi-

Rosburg 67 Leads Field

HOUSTON (AP) — Bob Rosburg said two years ago he never would play in Houston again but he started the second round of the $50,000 Houston Golf Classic today with a one-stroke lead.

After posting a four-under-par 67 first round, Rosburg, with a sheepish grin, said he was a bit mad at Houston two years ago when the crowd applauded after he missed a short putt and then booed as he walked off the 18th green Rosburg finished Thursday one stroke ahead of Ramon Sota, a young newcomer from Spain, and veterans Billy Maxwell and Jimmy Clark.

Jack Nicklaus, a 3-to-1 favorite, took a 76 while playing the first 18 without benefit of a practice round.

Grouped at 69 were Lionel Hebert, Tex Baxter Jr., Doug Ford, Ken Venturi, and Don Cherry. Will Komasnik of Winnipeg was one of 12 golfers shooting 70, one under par.

'Twas A Sad Day For Yogi, Whitey

Ford Wild Pitch Lost It

By MURRAY CHASS

Tony Oliva, who reached the United States on his brother's name, appears ready to go far in the American League on his own.

The rookie outfielder is setting the early batting pace for Minnesota Twins with five hits in 10 times at bat in two games.

He clouted a single, a double and a triple and knocked in two runs Thursday night as the Twins whipped Washington Senators 6 - 2 for their second straight victory.

Oliva's real first name is Pedro but he has been known as Tony ever since he used his brother's passport to get into the United States from Cuba.

In batting .500 in two games, the left-handed Oliva merely is following the routine he set in two previous appearances with Minnesota. He batted nine times last year, socked three singles against the Yankees before he tripled in the 11th. Whitey Ford, who pitched the whole game, then uncorked a wild pitch, allowing Tillman to score the winning run.

The defeat spoiled Yogi Berra's debut as a manager. It also spoiled Ford's first loss as a pitcher-coach.

Orsino's home run, his second of the young season, climaxed a four-run fifth inning for the Orioles. Chicago rookie second baseman Don Buford helped the rally by bobbling Luis Aparicio's grounder.

The White Sox had grabbed a 2-0 lead in the second on Ron Hansen's home run, Charley Smith's triple and Gerry McNertney's sacrifice fly.

Picton Ints. Meet Lucan Tonight

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON (Staff) — The Picton Intermediates and the Lucan Intermediates start their best-of-five series for the OHA Intermediate "B" title at the Picton Arena tonight at 8.00 p.m.

The Picton team has brought up "Rugged" Robert Brown who played such sensational hockey for the Picton Juniors all season, and who, by next season will be too old for Junior "B" competition, for the finals.

They have also brought up for a three-game tryout (if needed) the sensational young netminder of the Junior club, Larry Holmes. If Mr. Tim O'Halloran, a public school teacher, cannot make the trip to Lucan, it is possible that Larry will take a position between the pipes for the Lucan game.

The two teams play here tonight at 8 p.m. and again tomorrow (Saturday) night, this game at 7.30 p.m. The third game will be played at Lucan on Friday the 17th of April, and if a fourth game is needed, it will be played there the next day, Saturday, April 18.

This is it—this is the big one —that is what the Picton Intermediates have been working for since the first puck was dropped away back in November. They have played some real fine hockey in the interval, but they have kept it a deep, dark secret, as the fans stayed away by the thousands.

Now is the time for the hockey fans in the area to rally round and show their support to a hustling team, that could bring the OHA title to Picton.

Once again, game time Friday (tonight) is 9 p.m. Saturday (tomorrow) night game time is 7.30 p.m.

Defeat Horlocks Three In Row

SACO Wins Quinte Title

Travelling at a goal-a-period pace, SACO clipped Horlock Electric 3-2 last night to capture the Quinte Hockey League's playoff championship in Trenton last night.

SACO swept through the best-of-five titular series in three consecutive games to climax the loop's first year of operation with both the regular season and playoff crowns perched on the team's trophy shelf.

It was another nip and tuck battle last night. Each club scored once in the first half, SACO moved ahead 2-1 in the second and the teams split another pair in the torrid third period.

D. Ray collected a pass from H. Reid and rapped it home for the champions' initial goal but Horlock's G. Little scored on a solo effort for the 1-1 score.

In the middle frame, C. Allen scored the marksman for SACO, finishing off a lengthy scoring play with H. Reid and D. Ray.

Ab Wright triggered Horlock's second goal, unassisted, in the third but Jack Calnan bagged the decisive goal for SACO, aided by D. Deline and Barry Porteous to wind it up 3-2.

Referees Gord Gregory and Ted Hurst doled out a total of nine minor penalties, five of them coming in the final 20 minutes. The winners collected four minors, three coming in the dying minutes, but they held on to preserve the narrow victory margin.

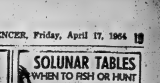
Four Entries Or Softball League Folds

It's time to "put your money where your mouth is" on the Belleville and District Softball League front.

President Harold Bawden has called an entry deadline meeting at the Club Camera Sunday afternoon at two o'clock and he has this to say on the matter: "If four or more clubs file entry we will go ahead with details but if not we will call an end to the entire matter."

There have been three meetings to date and teams have been scarce but matters are looking up now.

Four teams turned out last week and indicated they would be back this weekend with the $35 entry fee ready for posting. The clubs were Joyce Realty, Trudeau Motors and the Juniors, all from Belleville plus Tweed Lombards.



And if a team or two turn out from this week is the time. The town cannot be counted completely out on the picture yet either. A player or two from Trenton town is said to be attempting to line up a sponsor and will form a club if he is successful.

At any rate, Sunday will tell the tale, one way or the other.

Meanwhile, the Belleville and District Umpires' Association also has a meeting on tap Sunday, at the CNEA Hut, at two o'clock.

Both meetings are most important to those involved and all are urged to attend.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Coach Pete Reiser of Los Angeles Dodgers suffered what a doctor described as a mild heart attack Thursday night at Dodger Stadium in Vero Beach, Fla.

Reiser, 44, complained of chest pains about 2 hours before the Los Angeles-Cincinnati game.

Courtney Wins Junior MVP Award

TORONTO (CP)—Yvan Courboyer, right-winger with Montreal Junior Canadiens, was announced Thursday as the 20th winner of the Red Tilson Memorial Trophy, awarded to the player voted most valuable and gentlemanly in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The trophy perpetuates the memory of Albert (Red) Tilson who played for junior teams in Regina and Oshawa. He was killed in action in the Second World War while serving with the Canadian Army.

Courneyer was the overwhelming favorite in a poll of sports writers covering the Junior A league in eight cities.

Runner-up was teammate Andre Boudrias, league scoring champion. Third was Fred Stanfield, St. Catharines Black Hawks centre.

Nine others received votes—Ron Buchanan and Bobby Orr, Oshawa; Ron Ellis, Rod Selling, Peter Stemkowski and Wayne Carleton of Toronto Marlboros; Ron Schock, Niagara Falls Flyers and Jim Peterson of Peterborough Petes.

Last year's winner was Wayne Maxner of Niagara Falls Flyers.

EXPORTS INCREASED

Britain's statistics bureau says Canadian exports to Britain set a peacetime record of $336,000,000 in 1963, 11 per cent higher than 1962.

60 Cars Enter Big Rally

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sixty cars are to leave Saturday in the annual cross-Canada auto rally with organizers praying for rain or snow or some other ingredients of "good" weather that will make poor roads even worse.

Already, organizers, say, indications are that the 120 drivers and navigators from Europe and North America will meet "interesting" conditions on the pre-rally secondary and back country roads they will use in the 10 days between here and Montreal.

The rallyists will spend a gruelling 19½ hours on rugged mountain roads between here and Calgary on the first leg. Then, it is hoped, they will slip and slither on prairie gumbo—such as most have never experienced—before arriving at Regina.

With the outcome of a rally dependent on the navigational and driving skill and endurance of the participants and the reliability of cars, the worse the driving conditions the better the test.

The winner of a rally is the one who arrives at the end with the least number of penalty points which are given for a wide variety of slips.

The rally was "cursed" with good weather last year and as a result the winners, Canadians Dick Doyen and Clay Gibbon of Wauwatosa, Wis., had only two penalty points.

NEW REGULATIONS

New regulations have been added to make the rally tougher this year, so much tougher that organizers hope the winner will have about 30 penalty points.

In an effort to interest more Canadian drivers in the rally speed tests have been added. Five closed sections along the route drivers will be told to go as fast as they can. The most fastest in each class will receive bonus points and the slower cars will be penalized proportionately.

Participants will be permitted only 15 minutes to work on their car at the end of each day compared to one hour last year. The work must be done by participants.

The speed tests, general toughening of conditions and a $4,000 increase in prize money for the rally has attracted top-flight drivers from seven European countries, 14 states and seven provinces.

Woodstock Ottawa Tonight

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woodstock Athletics and Ottawa Montagnards meet tonight in the second game of the best-of-seven Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals with the Athletics holding a one-game lead.

Woodstock whose senior teams have walled 18 years to advance beyond the Ontario Hockey Association playoffs, opened the series with an impressive win Wednesday downing the Montagnards 7-2.

Montagnards, the first team from Ottawa to step into Allan Cup contention since '40, won 22 out of 30 games in the Ottawa-St. Lawrence senior league action this season. They edged Windsor, N.S., three games to two in their best-of-five Eastern semi-final series.

The Athletics, who have lost only twice in 28 home games this season, have been victorious in all but three of 18 playoff games.

Says West Should Help The West

EDMONTON (CP) — Leo LeClerc, manager of Edmonton Oil Kings, said Thursday it might be a good idea for the Western Hockey League to support a proposed two-division Western Canada junior hockey league.

LeClerc was commenting in an interview on a Regina story that Frank Boucher, commissioner of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League, will ask all Prairie clubs for support in establishing the new league.

Each NHL team would be asked to contribute $25,000 to the league and the money would be divided among 12 clubs.

"I'm not sure the WHL shouldn't sponsor the league," LeClerc said. "After all, if they want to attain major league status, they can't do it without farm clubs. Maybe the West should help the West."

nally needed Nuxhall's relief help in the ninth. The loser was Bob Miller.

Simmons befuddled the Giants, who had collected 18 hits and 18 runs in their first two games. He allowed only three singles, did not allow a runner past first base after the second inning and retired the last 13 in order. Meanwhile, Bob Hendley was bringing about his own downfall.

Hendley allowed only four hits in eight innings but threw wildly after fielding Simmons' bunt in the third inning, putting men on second and third. Julian Javier's single and a sacrifice fly by Dick Groat brought in the runs.

Aaron hit a three-run homer as the Braves struck for four runs in the third inning. Then, when the Colts battled back to tie in the fourth, Aloc cut down the potential tie-breaking run by rifling a throw home on Nellie Fox' single and nailing Eddie Kasko at the plate.

Lee May's third single drove in the tie-breaking run.

Question, Who Will Ride Dancer

TORONTO (CP)—The saddle of Northern Dancer, Canadian-bred entry in the Kentucky Derby Saturday, May 2, still is officially empty.

Trainer Horatio Luro is plumping to have Bill Hartack handle the colt in the classic but Joe Thomas, manager of Windfields Farm of Toronto, will not commit himself.

Hartack is scheduled to ride the Dancer in the Blue Grass Stakes next Thursday at Keeneland, Ky., and Thomas says:

"We'll have to see how he fits the horse. I don't know who gave people the impression that Hartack is our man, because it isn't for sure.

"If something happens to Hill Rise and he can't make the Derby then Willie Shoemaker would become available."

"This is the big one and we'll ride the best rider available. Hartack may not be the best rider available.

"If we decide not to use Hartack, then every rider in America with the exception of the Shoe, would become available."

Says CAHA Not Paying Whole 'Shot'

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Fred Page, vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Thursday Winnipeg Maroons are getting "no more than normal expenses" from the CAHA for their Allan Cup semi-final against Saskatoon Quakers.

He commented on a Winnipeg story that cost of a flight by Maroons to Saskatoon for a rearranged third game next Wednesday would be borne by the CAHA and a party not named by officials.

Flight plans followed an announcement Tuesday that Maroons were withdrawing from the series. The new plans allowed the contest was back on.

Maroons had argued they were unable to get time off for the midweek trip by train. The game originally was scheduled for next Friday.

BOOMING BROILERS KENTVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Broilers are a booming business in Nova Scotia. The poultry industry last year showed a 24 per cent increase in the production of broilers. The 1963 output in the Maritimes was 3,971,526 birds. The industry started here in 1936 and now is considered one of the fastest growing phases of agriculture in the Maritimes.

DON'T SEE OCEAN

Today's jets fly in the neighborhood of 40,000 feet and, as a result, it's possible to fly over the North Atlantic without seeing the ocean.

DETERMINE WEIGHT

When calculating the take-off weight of an airliner, the airlines use an average of 165 pounds for adults in winter and 160 in summer.

Biologist Battles Birds For Air-Safety's Sake

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP)—For an ornithologist, Bob Harris has an odd assignment. Instead of studying the protection and preservation of live birds, he's helping out the mechanical variety — the kind with aluminum bodies and roaring engines.

His task is to "M Canadian airports of birds—the ones with feathers—and leave the areas safer for airliners. Some of his methods may shock bird-watchers, but he's getting the job done.

Birds have been a worry to world airports since the early 1950s when two air tragedies in the United States were caused by birds colliding with aircraft. A flock of starlings wrecked an Electra turbo-prop over Boston and two swans caused the crash of a Viscount turbo-prop in Maryland.

The drive to chase birds off Canadian airports hit high gear about a year ago when authorities called in the Canadian Wildlife Service, a federal research agency, to help handle the problem.

Mr. Harris, a biologist at the service's Vancouver office, was tabbed to run the project. The 44-year-old bird specialist has had to draw on his long experience helping birds and turn it against them.

NOT SOLVED

In Ottawa for a recent wildlife conference, he said in an interview that the problem still isn't solved completely.

The high incidences of bird strikes had been worrying the air carriers for several years. Plane wings and fuselages have been dented, windows cracked and a $150,000 jet engine ruined.

After studying available data, Mr. Harris pinpointed five problem areas—Montreal, Toronto, the Lakehead, Winnipeg and Vancouver. Then he set out to examine each one.

The Lakehead's main problem was quickly diagnosed. A garbage dump beside the airport was attracting large flocks of birds. After it was abandoned in a fast piece of civic co-operation there was a quick drop in bird-plane collisions.

At Toronto and Vancouver, blackbirds were being drawn by farming operations near the runways. Feed crops such as corn were mainly to blame and suggestions have been made for planting different crops to reduce bird traffic.

Gulls were a headache everywhere. Removal of garbage operations cut their numbers but in many spots they were found to be feeding on earthworms in the airport grass. Control of earthworms now is being tested.

TRY FALCONS

An experiment in falcons was carried out at Victoria with a bird trainer. The killer birds appeared effective in scaring off gulls, and tests are planned with bigger and faster types of falcon.

Pheasants were reduced by destroying their shelter areas. Hawks and owls started moving out when airport crews were instructed to cut away the tall grass where small rodents live. Nesting birds departed with the removal of water sources.

"But the biggest problem are birds that just like to come to an airport and sit," Mr. Harris reported. "They seem to enjoy the view."

Noise and lights have been used to drive them off. Old wartime flare pistols were dug out of storage. Shotgun patrols were mounted. Exploding devices used to scare ducks from prairie crops were brought to coastal areas for duck control.

One of the most effective scare devices has been the tape recorder. Distress cries of starlings and gulls are recorded and played back at increased volume.

Some of the methods will be introduced at RCAF bases in Europe.

High-altitude birds pose a different and more difficult problem. This is being met by radar. Large migratory flocks will be tracked on the radar screen and airport given directions to avoid them.

FISH LANDINGS

Preliminary estimates show $1,819,000 pounds of fish, valued at $5,462,000 to primary producers, taken in Ontario during 1963

Cross-Canada Survey

Most of Cigarette Smokers Intend to Quit Tomorrow

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

All right, so you've read all those statistics about cigarettes and lung cancer. What have you done about it?

You've quit? You don't intend to quit?

Oh, you'll quit tomorrow.

Well, you can make up your mind content in the knowledge that—however you decide you'll be able to identify with some of the country's most prominent figures.

The Canadian Press, in a Cross - Canada Survey, found there are sneaky quitters, frightened quitters, tentative quitters and a whole raft of categories which boiled down to not quitting at all.

The sneaks swore off, but filch cigarettes and blow the smoke up the fan over the kitchen range.

The timid souls come from the "I just totalled up those statistics" category.

And then there is the vacillating "I just quit—who's got a cigarette?" bunch.

WOMEN STRIDENT

Two of the most strident anti-cigarette statements in the survey came from women. The voice of sweet persuasion was male.

Mrs. Lois Haggas, New Democratic Party member for Grand Forks-Greenwood, said in the British Columbia legislature she wouldn't vote a penny to help smokers stop puffing.

"Let them use will-power. Maybe we can get them all in a room with some bleach and disinfectant. They could form Smokers Anonymous."

Health Minister Judy LaMarsh says such agencies as the national health and welfare department "have a duty to inform the public about the risk to health connected with cigarette smoking."

Possibly conferences would have to be held to tailor the advertising to fit the program, but:

"Oral-audio seduction, if it exists, I hope will be withdrawn voluntarily."

APPROACH DIFFERENT

Quiet Barry Mather, federal member for New Westminster, is a pet-mate of Mrs. Haggas, with a different approach.

He stopped smoking 10 years ago and formed the Nevertouchem Club whose emblem is a little man with crossed fingers below a halo of smoke.

He has crossed all party lines on Parliament Hill to hand out his buttons and recruit converts to his Non-Smokers' Association of Canada, to whom he refers as "souls being snatched from the burning."

The Social Credit government of B.C. grants the association $1,000 a year and distributes its literature through the high schools.

Mr. Mather has a private bill before Parliament "to restrain the use of tobacco."

On the other side of the parliamentary argument stands Jack Roxburgh, former president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and Liberal member for Norolk, the heart of Ontario's tobacco country. He wants bigger federal grants for research into production and processing to keep the tobacco industry — pardon the word — healthy.

WORRIES ABOUT WELFARE

In the same vein, Marketing Director Wilmat Tennyson of Rothman's of Pall Mall, declares:

"As tobacco people we have a natural interest in protecting the economic welfare of many people who are dependent on tobacco from irresponsible and hasty actions on the part of well - meaning but misguided people."

In the Tennyson "misguidtd" category stands the president of the Canadian Medical Association, Dr. William W. Wigle of Toronto, who says flatly:

"I believe that smoking is dangerous"—though he himself is a social smoker who has a cigarette "in the evenings from time to time."

Lloyd Percival, fitness expert and track and field coach, is a cigarette smoker despite his finding in recent tests that "you are better off if you don't smoke."

He would prefer to smoke a pipe, but I need a new bridge and a pipe is uncomfortable," he says.

FOOTBALL DIVIDED

Dick Shatto, Toronto Argonauts backfield star, says he was told as an athletic - minded youngster that smoking was bad for the wind so he never started.

"I have never had the urge to smoke," he says. "I don't know why."

But Jim Trimble, coach of the rival Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference, has smoked 15 cigarettes a day for 20 years and doesn't intend to stop.

"I figure there are a lot of other ways to get into worse condition."

Dave Skrien, coach of British Columbia Lions in the West, feels otherwise and imparts that feeling to his players:

"Never smoke, never did. Don't like players smoking. Restricts breath; never felt it was necessary to start smoking."

Gordie Drillon of Saint John, N.B., former National Hockey Leaguer with Toronto and Montreal:

"I smoke 1½ packs a day and never tried to quit. My weight is 235. It would go up if I stopped."

IDOL AN INFLUENCE

Howie Meeker, former NHL star with Toronto:

"I have never smoked. When I was just a kid I was at a father son banquet where Syl Apps was guest speaker and was at the age when anything Syl Apps said really sank in. He said smoking doesn't do you any good."

Frank Boucher, who went from NHL player to commissioner of the Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League, smokes but says "I don't think it's going to hurt me."

"I smoke only half of each cigarette. All the tar and nicotine collects in the half I don't smoke."

Hec Gervais, the farmer from St. Albert, Alta., who won the Canadian curling title in 1960, smokes cigarettes for almost every end I play" and is not convinced the cigarette-cancer link has been proved.

Frank Pellerin, manager of the Charlottetown Hotel, gave up it a pact with his wife.

"I was coughing my head off. One night we decided to stop. Then she wouldn't start again because I hadn't and I couldn't start again because she didn't."

The stalemate has lasted two years.

COULD BUT WON'T

Mrs. E. J. Mooney, Saint John, N.B., vice-president of the National Federation of Liberal Women, can quit smoking, but she won't.

"There's nothing I find more relaxing than to have a book and a cigrette. I don't doubt it's dangerous but practically everything we do is dangerous."

At one time she quit for an entire year, just to prove she could.

How about those politicians in the "smoke-filled back room?"

Not on the West Coast.

There isn't a single cigarette smoker among the members of Premier W. A. C. Bennett's cabinet.

An example is Highways Minister Philip Gaglardi:

"I had smoked for years before I gave it up, I decided it was a matter of conscience. It wasn't the right thing to do.

"If we were intended to be smoking, we'd be built like houses—with chimneys."

An Era Is Ending

VIENNA (Reuters)—Vienna's traditional coffee houses, once so popular they were regarded as part of their homes by the Viennese, are disappearing from the city's streets.

Every so often one or another of the once famous places closes its doors. The often valuable site on which it stands is then used for offices, automobile show rooms, stores or warehouses.

The old-fashioned type of coffee houses with huge, high rooms, plush seats, gilded mirrors and marble-topped tables are no longer a paying proposition.

The coffee house, founded originally in 1683, soon after the siege of Vienna was raised by the Turks, was for more than two centuries one of the most important features in the social life of the city.

EVERYBODY CAME

Then, students, lawyers, traders, artists and writers often worked at their local coffee house.

Families met there of an evening and played chess or checkers.

Visitors were entertained there. Marriages, births, even deaths, were celebrated there.

Many factors have been blamed for the disappearance of the old coffee houses. First and foremost—the social revolution.

The family no longer gathers together as it used to do. Movies, cars, and television draw more and more people away from the coffee house.

Even Viennese no longer seem to have time to sit for long hours reading all the local and foreign newspapers, and talk about the political and economic situation.

TOO EXPENSIVE

Social legislation also has made it expensive to run the establishments. Huge coffee houses with large staffs, including young boys who often used to work 15 and 16 hours a day, have been hard hit by the 45-hour week. They cannot compete with the small espresso coffee bar, run by two or three people.

Experts estimate that at present nearly 70 per cent of the 1,100 odd, old-fashioned type coffee houses in Vienna show no profit.

Even an interest-free 100,000 schillings loan offered by the Vienna municipality to anyone who will keep these historical places going has not saved many of them from being closed.

Danny Kaye Had Serious Accident in His Home

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Danny Kaye, who made an off-hand reference to a leg injury on his Wednesday night television show, actually had a serious accident.

Kaye was making spaghetti for a party of 15 at his home 10 days ago when a pot of boiling water spilled over his right leg and foot. Foot and leg swelled into an enormous blister that put him in bed for five days.

CBS executives urged Danny to re-run an earlier program this week but the comedian refused. He devised and rehearsed Wednesday's show around a specially constructed wheelchair.

Viewers may have believed it was merely an off-beat experiment in immobilizing the extremely mobile star. Danny was seen only in closeup—never below the waist and never moving around.

Art Carney will be seen Sunday night in NBC's A Day Like Today, playing a man, looking back over what he believes was his last day after taking a dose of poison by accident.

Group of Actors Turning Classrooms Into Theatres

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — There's nothing like an explosion to enliven a chemistry class and give students a personal inkling of the potential of bits of powder and crystal.

It's not as easy to demonstrate the explosive power of words in a classroom but a group of actors here is trying. They are touring Toronto high schools, turning classrooms into temporary theatres.

When they worked in a gymnasium at Oakwood Collegiate, 100 Grade 13 students listened, hushed and still, to the story of the sinking of the Titanic, told in verse.

There was no stage, just the gym. Students sat in a semi-circle, some on the floor, around the group. The actress was wearing a skirt and blouse, the three young actors were in shirtsleeves. They had few props, preferring to depend on words to do the job.

The Titanic scene done, the actors stood a moment, holding the mood. Then a shrug, a grin, some horseplay while the men put on smoking jackets, the woman a shawl and hat, and the scene shifted to an Edwardian drawing room. Enter Eliza Doolittle and 'enry 'iggins for an excerpt from Shaw's Pygmalion.

WINNIPEG IDEA

The performers are the Hour Company. The school was about the 70th they had visited.

The troupe was formed this year by Barbara Chilcott, who acts with it, and Toronto's Crest Theatre Foundation. It was modelled after a similar group in Winnipeg. The Crest has so far underwritten the cost with an assist from the Junior League of Toronto, which supplies transportation and administrative help.

Over coffee, after the Oakwood performance, Miss Chilcott explained what sparked her interest.

"It seemed to me, remembering my own school days, that too many English courses were a bore. Too much dissecting of poems and plays can kill a budding interest in reading or going to the theatre. You have to have work presented to you to get the emotional impact. We want to arouse the kid's curiosity."

The company has about three hours of material based on school curriculum.

All members of the Crest repertory company, the group includes two actors who were students of the National Theatre School in Montreal when they were asked to become Hour players. They are Neil Dainard of Cloverdale, B.C., and Lionel Simmons of Halifax.

PLAYED HAMLET

The third male actor is Richard Monette of Montreal, the 19 - year - old who played the Crest's Hamlet this winter. Ron Francis of Stoney Creek, Ont., travels with them as stage manager and Curt Reis directs the group.

The actors try to create a vivid illusion with as few props as possible and at the same time build an easy personal relationship with the audience.

"When they see the actors as real people, the poetry becomes real, too," says Simmons.

Students are encouraged to ask questions and these range from the personal ("Why did you decide to become an actor?") to the artistic ("What is the difference between your approach to lyric and dramatic poetry?").

The project got started when the Crest approached four Toronto English teachers who formed a committee and wrote to other English teachers to arrange performance and organize the repertoire.

Rusty Hamer at 17 Finishes 12-Year Acting Engagement

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Gee, I hope I don't fall into obscurity," says 17 - year - old Rusty Hamer.

Offhand a high school senior worrying about obscurity might seem ridiculous. But Rusty has just finished an acting engagement that lasted 12 years, about as far back as he can remember.

He played Danny Thomas' son in the comedian's weekly television sow, and Rusty was the only member of the supporting cast who spanned the series' entire history.

The Danny Thomas show filmed its final segment last month. Danny has retired as a weekly television performer.

"How do I feel? Not sad, really," says Rusty. "You can't go on doing the same thing all your life.

"I haven't had much reaction at all. Of course it might hit me next fall, when I would ordinarily be starting to go back into production."

THINKS OF FUTURE

Without that prospect, Rusty has had to give some thought to the future.

"I want to work right away, and the prospects are good," he says. "They're interested in me for several of the Mr. Novak shows at MGM. Walt Disney is interested in me. And there are chances I might do shows like Dr. Kildare, Ben Casey and Arrest and Trial. I'd like that. I want to do some dramatic shows. There were some dramatic moments in the Thomas show, but mostly it was played for laughs."

Rusty will be graduated from high school in June and plans to go to college.

"That's what Danny told me to do, and I always do everything he says. I've always called him my second father."

500 Surplus Air Officers Being Retired

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCAF plans to retire 500 surplus air crew officers this summer ahead of their normal retirement dates, Defence Minister Hellyer told the Commons today.
A special benefit plan to compensate these officers for early forced retirement is being considered by the government, he added.
Yukon), Mr. Hellyer said he Replying to Erik Nielsen (PC is not sure that all 500 have been advised of their plan but would see that this was done immediately.
The group would be made up of an equal number of ship service officers now serving on extended terms and permanent commission officers nearing the end of their engagements.
Mr. Nielsen then wanted to know if there were any plans for similar advance retirements in the army and navy.
OTHERS NOT AFFECTED
The minister said there are no immediate plans for the army and navy, but these would depend on the progressive integration of the forces take effect.
The white paper on defence, tabled in Parliament last month estimated that 10,000 jobs in the armed services would disappear when integration is complete.
Mr. Hellyer indicated that the compensation plan being considered for the benefit of future officers would be applied to future retirements caused by integration.
«Outside the House, a defence department official said the 500-man retirement plan was suggested by the RCAF some time ago, before the white paper was tabled.
Most of the officers involved now are in non-flying jobs. They are serving at least in every part of the country.

White Tams Claim Taxes Are Robbery and Extortion

SPANISH, Ont. (CP) — The White Tams, popular name for members of the Union of Electors, intend to stick to their simple program: don't pay taxes.

They claim taxes are robbery and extortion.

A spokesman in the Spanish area, although he denies he is the leader, is Maurice Brisson, a father of 11 children who has lived on welfare for the last three years — and drives two cars.

In an interview Wednesday he denied charges made in the Ontario legislature Tuesday that the union encourages others to quit work because they can make more money on welfare.

But he did admit to travelling throughout Ontario, Quebec and New Brunswick in 1962—while on welfare—and signing up 1,539 families to the movement.

Members wear white berets, large medals of the Virgin Mary and armbands bearing a skull and crossbones insignia and the words, in French, "Death to Taxes."

Residents of Spanish claim that Brisson and those cars carry signs reading "Taxes are extortion" and "Taxes are robbery" —has brought 15 large families to the community, all living on welfare.

Stanley Farquhar, Liberal member for Algoma-Manitoulin, claimed in the legislature that "agitators were involved in a movement to bleed the government's welfare fund, telling potential recruits to "join our ranks and we'll get you welfare."

Welfare Minister Louis Cecile replies that the White Tams had caused some trouble. "We've dealt with them as severely as we can," he said. "I hope we'll be able to take some action soon."

Brisson emphasized that the union is not a political party, but an organization "aimed at promoting a better social order in which the abundance of modern production shall be made accessible to all with the preservation of private property and free enterprise."

Some local persons have claimed the organization, predominantly French, for an ill-feeling between the English and French-speaking sectors which has developed since the movement arrived here in the 1950's.

(During the same period, an organization known as L'Union des Electeurs was active politically in Quebec.)

Said Brisson: "We don't believe in elections or political parties because they divide the people."

Not satisfied with the $180-a-month welfare and $82 in family allowance he receives, Brisson said he expects at least $400 a month to support his large family.

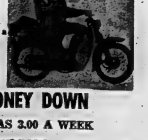
"There are too many families without food and the necessities. It is the job of the welfare people to help them but they don't, so we have to help them."

GIVES REASON

Cecil Dumas, a father of six, said he joined the movement in 1961 when Brisson, manager to get him on the welfare rolls at Sault Ste. Marie.

He said he had dropped his membership but plans to rejoin because he has been cut off welfare and he knows Mr. Brisson can get it for him.

The former tax collector for this area, Rene Legault, became well aware of the influence of the union so much so that he resigned his post in frustration last January. Tax collecting was a hopeless task, he said.



One occasion he was beaten while attempting to collect from a union member, he recalled. He said the group seems to believe "they don't owe anything to the government, but the government owes them everything."

Mrs. L. J. Pollock, an active community worker, said the White Tams "deplore communism, but use Communist tactics in spreading their doctrine. . . . Until they become community conscious and earn their right they have no right to make these demands."

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Our mail indicates that since their previous ticket of collecting sales commissions in advance has been largely cleaned up by the profession and the regulatory agencies, the "Gumshoe Boys" are hard at work on a new one. This time it is collecting from owners of "anticipated" discount charges for the mortgage a potential buyer may require.

A letter from Mr. E. T. M. illustrates this process in action.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: A year ago, when we put our house up for sale, the salesman said that in addition to his commission he needed $500 to pay for the discount on the mortgage a buyer might need. It seemed odd to us but we felt he knew more about it than we did, and we gave him the money.

After a full year he not only hasn't sold the house, he hasn't brought anyone to see it. We want our money back so we can get another salesman, but he hasn't been around in eight months, and every time we call he is out and never calls us back.

Is there something we can do? — Mr. E. T. M.

Answer: The behavior of this "salesman" is not that of a reputable real estate broker and you must take prompt action if you wish to get your money back.

The F. H. A. and V. A. do not collect discount fees for guaranteeing mortgages. Lenders, under certain market conditions may require discount fees, but this is dependent on such factors as the down payment, term of mortgage and the credit of the borrower. Since these cannot be determined in advance of a specific buyer, neither can the discount.

Realtors carefully scrutinize the ethics of their membership, so you can be sure that this salesman is not a realtor; therefore, a complaint to the local Realtor Board would not be appropriate. I suggest that you send a complaint (in writing) to the State Real Estate Commission, outlining the details of your problem. You will either get your money refunded immediately, or the full authority of the law will be brought against this unscrupulous operator.

Dear Dr. Meltzer: Irked with interest your solution to the chic wall apartment noise problem. I have a somewhat different, very serious problem — one that must be solved if I am not to lose my apartment.

I own a nice 2 storey red brick six apartment building. I find it impossible to keep the first and second storey apartments occupied at the same time. Any footstep across the second floor can be heard distinctly on the first floor — and when children are playing, or even a quiet party — it is bedlam. You can see why first floor tenants move out after a short time. Is there anything I can do short of rebuilding the whole place? — Mrs. T. M. G.

Answer: While not inexpensive providing the second floor apartments with durable, easily maintained wall to wall carpeting — with an extra heavy underlay — has worked very satisfactorily in cases like this. This solution has a dual advantage. It not only muffles, effectively, the undesirable noise, but commands (by reason of its attractiveness) a rental premium. In all probability the additional rent you can ask will quickly amortize the cost of overcoming your noise barrier to rental income.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Can you put me in touch with someone who has an urgent desire to own a little red school house? I have owned one for six months, but don't know what to do with it, and can't get rid of it.

My wife and I (usually sane intelligent people) stopped to watch a country auction, got carried away by the novelty and excitement and not only bought some stroller benches, but the building they came from — a genuine one-room red brick schoolhouse (bell tower and bell) that was built in 1883 — and one acre of ground.

"When sanity returned, we realized that we had no use for it, but when we tried to sell it there were no takers at any realistic price (or maybe their price is realistic and we aren't). Anyway, here we are. Any takers? Any ideas? Any hope? — Sign me "Auction Buff"

Answer: In my cellar, a statue with a clock in its stomach stands in mute testimony to how one can be carried away at an auction. Fortunately my wife and I were never exposed to a little red schoolhouse.

Perhaps there is nothing you can do — some problems are unsolvable — but since you can't store this mistake in your cellar (and must continue to pay taxes on it each year), I suggest that you turn your problem over to an imaginative realtor. He may be able to find a little red school house buff or give you some ideas of useful alternatives. Then again, perhaps our readers will come up with some solutions — with you, we will anxiously await their suggestions.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am writing this to thank you for the help we got from your column. We were negotiating for a building lot on a lake when we read your column about riparian rights. We examined the proposed agreement of sale for the property, and sure enough, the riparian rights were excluded.

We told the owner we were buying primarily for free access to the lake, and after some relatively painless dickering he agreed, and included these rights in the sale. We are now the envy of owners of neighboring lots who didn't get all of their rights — so you can that they read the column now, too. — Mr. L. L. G.

Answer: Thank you for your letter. I hope other readers are able to use the information that appears in this column as positively and effectively as you.

* * *

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many questions as possible through his column.

Wonders of Past, Present, Future
Expect 100 Million to See World's Fair

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP)—The official countdown clock ticks and clicks amid the hustle and bustle of feverish construction activity in Flushing Meadow these last hectic days before the opening of the billion-dollar New York World's Fair.

The electronic clock in the fair's administration building will hit zero hour at 9 a.m. EST Wednesday, April 22, and the gates will be opened to the public.

Before the gates are shut for the last time Oct. 17, 1965, after two six-month runs interrupted by a winter closing, as many as 100,000,000 people are expected to crowd the 646-acre showplace to see the wonders of past, present and future from many lands.

Some 60 countries, offering displays of their people, their arts and crafts, architecture, culture and cuisine, will give the extravaganza a definite international flavor.

But the "made in the United States" theme is predominant with four of the fair's five general areas filled mainly with the exhibits of federal and state governments and the giants of U.S. industry.

CANADA ABSENT

Canada, the United Kingdom and the Communist-bloc nations, with the exception of a private display from Yugoslavia, are among the countries without exhibits at the New York fair.

Members of the 30-country International Exhibition Bureau, which has given first-class rating to the 1967 Montreal world's fair, are prohibited by the bureau from participating here. The U.S. is not a member and the New York fair is not recognized by the bureau.

Canada is a bureau member but Canadian government participation here was ruled out. Private interests apparently are saving their funds for the Montreal fair.

Lack of any participation by Canada has been a disappointment to authorities of the New York World's Fair 1964-65 Corporation, set up to promote the show here, but they haven't let it detract from their colossal production.

The New York World's Fair has been nearly five years in the planning and building—and is a pre-opening tour amid the hectic last-minute preparations offered plenty of evidence that little of that time has been spent idly.

PLENTY TO SEE

There are enough sights, sounds and sensations to please even the most avid fair-goer—from the 140-foot-high unisphere which is the fair's symbol to the Florida state house restaurant; from the beer garden depicting Little Old New York to the Finnish cuisine built by Belgium; from the life-size animated figure of Abraham Lincoln in the egg-shaped theatre of IBM; from the Billy Graham pavilion to the Vatican exhibit, where Michelangelo's Pieta will be shown for the first time outside St. Peter's.

The fair was organized to mark New York City's 300th anniversary. Its purpose is to promote "Peace through understanding" and its theme is "Man's achievements in an expanding universe."

Among these achievements is the physical structure of the fair itself, where exhibitors have invested more than $500,000,000 in weird and wonderful creations of concrete, steel, wood, plastic and fabric of every nature imaginable.

And that price tag doesn't include $125,000,000 in work to complete highways to the fair or the more than $100,000,000 the fair corporation itself has invested.

The Flushing Meadow location, in the Borough of Queens, about 3 minutes by subway from Times Square, is the same area where the last New York World's Fair was held in 1939. Only the New York City Building remains from the 1939 show and it has been thoroughly refurbished.

BIG ADVANCE

The fair corporation, a private but non-profit company set up by New York State and city to organize and administer the production, estimated that 70,000,000 persons would visit the fair. But when advance ticket sales reached more than 28,000,000 by the end of February, they said the total might reach 100,000,000.

Regular admission fee for each visit is $1 for children aged two to 12 and $2 for adults—and this will give the visitor access without further charge to roughly 75 per cent of all facilities and exhibits on the grounds.

Nominal charges will be made to see some art displays and prices for some entertainment productions and rides will range up to the $5.50 to be charged for a helicopter tour.

The mile-square fair grounds are nine times larger than those at the Seattle World's Fair in 1962 and authorities have estimated that an individual, devoting five hours a day for 30 days, could see and do most everything offered.

FIVE AREAS

The fair is separated into five areas: International, industrial, transportation, amusement and federal and state. All are linked by roadways and walks fanning out from the unisphere, a giant steel globe set at the centre of the fair.

In the international section, where all foreign pavilions are located, the visitor will find the Vatican's magnificent edifice and inside it the Pieta. He'll find priceless paintings by Goya and El Greco in Spain's pavilion; the Dead Sea Scrolls in Jordan's.

The industrial section features such things as a demonstration of thermonuclear fission, the marvels of the computer age, an armchair ride through the latest in communications and the wonderful world of chemistry.

Ford, Chrysler and General Motors offer such spectaculars as a walk-through V-8 engine, a simulated ride to the moon and a trip into the past and future in the latest of today's automobiles—all to be in the transportation area.

A monorail suspended from steel rails circles above the amusement area, giving riders —at 80 cents each—a three-quarter-mile aerial tour over a continental circus, dancing waters, an amphitheatre with a simulated ride to the moon, a Texas music hall and many other displays.

THE TALLEST

In the federal and states area, the block-square U.S. government building and the vast New York state forecast of the country fair of the future are predominant, the state's exhibit including a series of observation towers to a height of 230 feet—the highest structure in the fair.

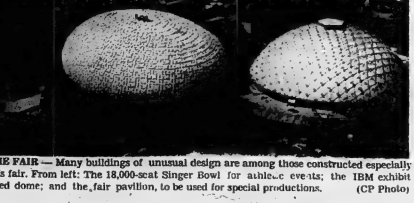
About half of the 50 states have pavilions here.

Major pavilions are devoted to religion, among them the Protestant Centre in which more than a dozen denominations demonstrate their work; the Mormon Pavilion, patterned after the Salt Lake City Temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints; and a Christian Science pavilion.

For the adventurous eater and drinker, there are more than 100 restaurants and dozens of cocktail lounges and bars. Many foreign pavilions will feature native dishes and a large number will provide typical entertainment.

Prices will range from modest to expensive—for instance, from 50 cents to $2 for Jordanian food in the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan Restaurant; from $1.20 for lunch to $7.50 for supper with music and dancing at the House of Japan.

A $7.39 AVERAGE



There will be free entertainment in several structures and modest to expensive entertainment in others. General exhibits will close nightly at 9:30 p.m., but the entertainment night spots will continue until 3 a.m.

The fair visitor can spend as much as he wants—but the fair estimates the average adult will spend $7.39 a day at the fair and the average child $3.45.

Up to 500,000 persons a day are expected to attend, coming by car, rails, subway, boat and helicopter. The fair has provided ample rest rooms, drinking fountains, benches, a fully equipped hospital and a huge staff to assist visitors.

Exhibitors have provided comforts, too, all the way from 7,000 push-button payphones to special facilities for changing baby's diapers.

Fountains and gardens are everywhere—as will be the people after the countdown clock ticks off its last seconds to zero hour.

Penny Investors Set Record For North America

28,704,000 Shares Traded in Toronto

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP)—Stock market experts were still busy today at the record trading volume on the Toronto Stock Exchange Friday—and not really believing it.

The analysts were saying be careful, but it was obvious no one was listening, as thousands of speculative buyers who hadn't been near the market for years suddenly caught the fever again.

The final volume Friday totalled 28,704,000 shares, the largest quantity of shares ever exchanged during one trading session in North America.

The previous record on the Toronto exchange was the 16,626,000 shares traded Thursday when the first settlement of a major zinc-copper-silver strike near Timmins sent speculators with get - rich - quick ideas to their brokers.

Both days eclipsed the record volume of 11,000,000 York Stock Exchange — 16,410,000 shares. That record came when the New York market was going the other way, during the 1929 crash.

ANALYSTS STUMPED

The analysts, who usually can find an explanation for anything the stock market does, were stumped by Friday's frenzied trading.

Dick Daley Jr. of the large R. A. Daley and Company brokerage firm, said "everybody went crazy, so to speak."

Another veteran analyst said: "We haven't been able to understand it."

Scoffed still another: "This volume is completely unjustified — the thing is ridiculous."

"Overdone," "speculative" and "damned strange" were some of the other experts' conclusions.

But for the penny investor, everything was clear: for the first time in six years there was a boom market, with money to be made quickly and easily. And he wanted some.

He had to struggle for it.

Motion Opposed By Crown

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Supreme Court trial of Vancouver financier Ralph K. Farris, president of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company, could end Monday if Mr. Justice Dalton Wells approves a defence motion for directed acquittal.

Defence counsel Joseph Sedgwick made the motion Friday on the two counts of perjury, the ninth day of the trial arising from distribution of NONG stock several years ago to municipal politicians involved with the company on franchise dealings.

Crown Attorney Harvey McCulloch, who had completed his evidence, opposed the motion. If it is rejected, the trial will continue, probably until Wednesday, for defence presentation of the all-male jury.

Farris, 53, is charged with swearing falsely in evidence he gave at judicial inquiries in 1958 and 1962 as to the disposition of NONG stock.

Mr. Sedgwick argued that the investigators for the Ontario Securities Commission who questioned Farris had gone beyond their jurisdiction and that his client could not provide some of the information requested because he didn't know the answers.

CHARGE CONCERNS SHARES

Farris is charged with lying in 1958 that he did not know of the disposition of shares in a special 14,000 - share account with a Vancouver brokerage house, and again in 1962 in denying he gave instructions for the distribution of a particular 600 shares from this account to four Ontario municipal officials.

On both counts, Mr. Sedgwick argued that the inquiries had no

Hear Viet Cong Suicide Squads May Try to Assassinate Rusk

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese security forces braced today for a possible attempt on the life of U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk amid reports that Viet Cong suicide squads might make such a move. The massive air-ground security net thrown around Rusk was tightened after a terrorist bomb was tossed into a military bus early today wounding two U.S. servicemen.

One intelligence report said a Communist suicide squad planned a grenade assassination like that used to kill Thai Lap Thanh, Vietnamese governor-general under the former French regime after the end of the Second World War.

Thanh and a French general were killed when a terrorist walked up to them, pulled the pins from two grenades and stood next to them until the grenades went off.

Police spotted a suspicious person Friday night near a large electrical plant in the same area where the big explosion occurred. They chased him but got away. Police are behind an 11-pound high explosive bomb. The bomb had not been armed and did not explode.

Police intelligence reports said the Communist Viet Cong planned a wave of bomb explosions in Saigon during the three-day Rusk visit. The bombs were to be directed at electrical transformers around the city, U.S. military installations and American vehicles.

"Two of the transformers, both reported to be Americans marked as targets by the Viet Cong, are within a half block of the home of Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, were Rusk is staying. All transformers in Saigon are under heavy guard.

Rusk left Saigon for a tour of cities and installations north and east of here today, accompanied by Lodge, and Vietnamese Deputy Premier Nguyen Xuan Oanh. The highway was guarded by large army units and armed helicopters flying as escort.

Six Americans have been killed since Feb. 1 and more than 90 wounded by Viet Cong terror bombings.

"We are jittery as hell," said security agent, after today's attack on the military bus. "We expect more Communist terrorism like this during Rusk's visit."

Sitting On Top Of Riches

TIMMINS (CP) — The most sensible townsfolk of this Northern Ontario mining community use words like "fanatical," "hysterical" and "mad" to describe their fellow citizens these days.

The reason lies buried 800 feet beneath the ground 10 miles north of Timmins—the rich copper-zinc-silver strike made by U.S.-based Texas Gulf Sulphur Company that was confirmed Thursday.

The ore body—estimated by Texas Gulf management at about 25,000,000 tons—could be one of the largest and richest found in Canada, and more important, could provide new life for this gold-mining community.

The drive to gold production in Northern Ontario and the threatened closure of Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines Limited within a year had brought despair to this town of 29,000.

Now there is new mine and a new metal for the town has brightened their hopes.

MAYOR IS HAPPY

Mayor Leo Del Villano, said happily: "We're sitting on top of a gold mine here."

Nowhere is this attitude better reflected than in the investment actions of people living here.

Everybody's gone crazy," said John Angus, Timmins' manager for the brokerage house of A. E. Richardson and Sons Limited.

"There were 300 people in the office Friday," he added, "and people were jammed in the street outside trying to get in. Everybody wants to buy."

Bevin Anderson, manager of the town's only other brokerage house, Dobie-Dobie and McQuaig Brothers, said: "Our office is full from early morning until late afternoon, and the people are lined up outside."

Since Texas Gulf owns about 70 per cent of the mineral rights in Kidd Township, where the find was made, speculation largely centres on small mining companies which own land or mineral rights on properties adjoining or close to that of Texas Gulf.

CAREY MAPS

"Everybody has a map of Wark and Posser Townships (two adjoining townships) in his back pocket," Anthony Pecjak, assistant manager of the town's largest bank said.

"Our hotel is booked solid," he added, "and prospectors are pouring into the district from Timmins."

But the happy optimism of the people of Timmins is somewhat offset by the realistic attitude of stock market professionals at Toronto.

Most brokerage houses are advising caution. This is not strictly a speculative market and that stock purchases should be made only after careful further developments appear.

This attitude has not dampened the spirits of Timmins people. Speculative fever remains high in the town, and rumors are the counter currency spread rapidly.

Mr. Pecjak summed up the town's feeling: "I'm glad for Timmins," he said. "The town needed a break."

Jury Deadlocks For Second Time In Evers Case

GREENWOOD, Miss. (AP)—An all-white jury freed on bond $10,000 bond Friday two hours after an all-white jury deadlocked in his second murder trial at Jackson.

District Attorney William Waller, who prosecuted both trials, said it was not definite whether the state would bring Beckwith to trial a third time.

"I don't see any way we could ever put on a better case than we did at this time," Waller said.

British Soldiers Slug Two Greek Police in Scuffle

NICOSIA (AP) — British soldiers slugged two Greek-Cypriot policemen in a scuffle Friday over the placing of a sandbagged gun post at Nicosia's Ledra Palace Hotel.

British troops of the United Nations peacekeeping force had stormed out of the hotel to protest the placing of the gun post.

Their critters were ignored by the Greek police auxiliaries and gendarmes later on one soldier punched one Greek with his fist and another soldier cracked a second policeman across the jaw with his gun butt.

The hotel is on the dividing line between the Greek and Turkish sections of the capital. It houses a British headquarters and is the residence of the UN mediator, Sakari Toumioja of Finland.

Tuomioja was in Ankara for a three-day visit with Turkish leaders to discuss the thorny Cyprus question. He is due back in Nicosia Sunday and is scheduled to go to Athens next week.

Toumioja arrived in Ankara as the Turkish Assembly extended martial law for two months in Ankara and Istanbul because of the continuing Cyprus crisis. Martial law originally was imposed after an abortive Turkish army coup last May.

Greek Premier George Papandreou, fresh from talks with Cyprus' President Archbishop Makarios, went to the Isle of Rhodes for a weekend holiday.

Lt.-Col. David Cooke, commander of the 2nd Light Regiment of the Royal Artillery, whose headquarters is in the Ledra Palace, ordered the Greek police to halt putting up their gun post, in the name of the United Nations.

The Greeks refused, saying

Belgian Doctors End Strike, Socialized Law Unsolved

BRUSSELS (AP) — Belgium's 12,000 doctors and dentists ended their 18-day strike today, but the dispute over the new socialized medicine law remains unresolved.

The doctors agreed to meet with the government next Wednesday in an attempt to settle their differences over the controversial legislation.

Belgium's embattled medical profession agreed to call off the strike after 15½ hours of intensive negotiations during which the rectors of Belgium's four universities acted as intermediaries.

Afterwards Premier Theo Lefevre said confidently that "conditions now are ripe to reach a prompt agreement on the law which would leave no bitterness."

The government is under strong pressure from Belgium's labor unions to resist major changes in the law, which would give more than half of Belgium's 9,000,000 people free medical care or require them to pay only a token charge.

The doctors fear their offices will be flooded with cranks inundating ailments. They say this would force them to practice "chain medicine"—quickly examining patients in a production line.

They also contend hospital facilities would become overcrowded and complain of the considerable bookkeeping they would have to do under the health insurance plan. In addition, they say the set fees are too low.

Labor leaders scoff at the doctors' complaints about the bookkeeping, charging that they are really worried about a loss of income and additional taxes.

Lefevre's government concedes the doctors may have a legitimate fear in anticipating a flood of patients, but the cab-

Canadian Troops Establish Precedent for UN Forces

NICOSIA (CP) — Canadian forces established a precedent when they decided to return Turkish-Cypriot gunfire in the Kyrenia mountain range last Wednesday.

United Nations troops on Cyprus had never done so before, and some observers interpreted the Canadian action as an indication of a permanent hardening attitude toward the feuding Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

Canadian military authorities reject this interpretation.

"It had become necessary to show the Turkish- and Greek-Cypriots that we can defend ourselves," said Lt.-Col. Andrew Woodcock, commander of the Canadian contingent on Cyprus. "We took the only course open to us to make them respect us."

This did not indicate any change in attitude. The Canadian command was not becoming either firmer or softer, but correspondent as always with UN directives to its Cyprus peace forces.

"Our decision to open fire on Turkish - Cypriot position was

Rugged Fight Is Seen

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons appears to be dug in for a long and rugged fight over the government's crucial redistribution bill.

Although MPs of all parties have referred to the measure as a non-political issue, Friday's debate teetered on the edge of a political dogfight.

At some points the Conservatives accused the Liberal and New Democratic parties of having made a deal to get the kind of bill they want.

The legislation would set up 10 independent commissions — one for each province—to handle the British chore of drawing new boundaries for the 263 federal ridings in line with population changes reported by the 1961 census.

Ever since Confederation, this carving assignment has been done by the cabinet or a committee of MPs set up after each decennial census. No MPs would be allowed on the new commissions.

CENTRES ON AMENDMENT

Friday's debate centred on an amendment moved Thursday by Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) who proposed a new formula for selecting members of the commissions.

The bill now provides that the prime minister and the opposition leader will have the key right to appoint one member to each of the four-member commissions. The other two would be a judge, chosen by the provincial chief justice, and Representation Commissioner Nelson Castongay.

Mr. Knowles said appointments by the prime minister and opposition leader would give an appearance of partisanship to what was designed to be a strictly non-political system.

He suggested the provincial chief justice be empowered to select three members, with Mr. Castongay continuing to fill the fourth seat on each group.

Mr. Castongay, named by Parliament last fall to be the key man in the redistribution plan, has been listening to the debate from the Commons gallery.

Eight Conservatives came out strongly against the Knowles amendment, claiming it was unfair to the provincial chief justices and cast aspersions on the integrity of the prime minister and opposition leader.

Justice Minister Favreau, Transport Minister Pickersgill and Bert Leboe (SC—Cariboo) lined up beside Mr. Knowles and Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood).

"I am disposed to support the amendment," said Mr. Pickersgill, who is piloting the bill.

Liberal backbencher Ron Basford suggested Mr. O'Day

Price Of Pension Accord Includes Baby Bonus Deal

Pay Quebec $14 Million Lieu of New Allowance

OTTAWA (CP)—After nearly a year of trying, the federal government has come up with a retirement pension plan which all provinces seem likely to accept.

The new plan, to be outlined in Parliament on Monday by Prime Minister Pearson, is understood to be a compromise between Premier Lesage of Quebec's Pension plan and the revised Canada pension bill now before the Commons.

Mr. Pearson also is expected to announce a better tax deal for the provinces next year in the form of a larger share of personal income tax, plus an immediate adjustment that will give Quebec some $14,000,000 a year in lieu of planned new family allowance payments by Ottawa to Quebec students aged 15 and 17.

The announcement will come only four days before the Quebec government's annual budget is presented by Premier Lesage. It is expected to meet to some extent his urgent demands for greater taxing powers for his province. Previously, he had hinted at the possibility of double taxation if Ottawa

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario government's reaction to the reported Ottawa-Quebec pension compromise will be made known to the legislature Monday by Premier Robarts.

The premier told reporters Friday he had received a telephone call earlier from Prime Minister Pearson, followed by a lengthy telegram dealing with pension negotiations between the governments of Canada and Quebec.

While Mr. Robarts did not say so, Ottawa reports said the telegrams to provincial premiers outlined the provisions of a proposed new Canada Pension Plan and a change in the bargaining with Quebec.

The telegram would be studied by provincial authorities during the weekend, said the Premier. He told reporters the contents of the message showed "a progression that is very heartening."

Mr. Robarts refused any further comment, saying he would make a statement to the legislature Monday. Prime Minister Pearson is to make an announcement Monday in the House of Commons.

WAS NOTIFIED

It was not clear whether Ontario had played any part in the pension negotiations. However, Mr. Robarts disclosed earlier in the week he had been notified by Mr. Pearson that talks were under way with the Quebec government.

An outline of Quebec's proposed provincial retirement scheme was first given to the federal-provincial conference at the beginning of the month.

Premier Robarts said he had told Mr. Pearson he would be willing to enter into the negotiations "in order to devise a pension plan that would be national in scope, embracing all provinces.

The details of the pension agreement between the federal and Quebec governments, as disclosed in reports from Ottawa, were expected to satisfy almost all of Ontario's original objections to the federal pension bill now before Parliament.

Mr. Robarts has been particularly adamant that at least 90 per cent of the reserve pension fund to be established by the pension plan should be made available to the provinces for investment purposes.

OFFERED ABOUT HALF

Previously the federal government had offered the provinces only about half of the total reserve fund. However, Ottawa reports say the new plan would make 100 per cent of the fund available for provincial investment.

Diefenbaker Still Prefers Quebec Plan

TORONTO (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker said Friday the Quebec pension plan is infinitely better than even the latest revision to the proposed federal plan.

Interviewed during a 90-minute stopover at Toronto International Airport, Mr. Diefenbaker said the federal pension plan was one of a step forward and then a retreat. It was impossible to follow the government on the plan.

He said he preferred to wait and see what the "tinkerers are going to do" before commenting in more detail on reports from Ottawa that the government is expected to bring in plan closer to the $125-a-month maximum of the Quebec plan.

The Conservative party, he added, stands fully behind a national contributory retirement plan with survivor benefits.

Candle Sets Fire to Mortgages, Scarborough Millionaire, 72, Dies

TORONTO (CP) — An eccentric millionaire who preferred poverty to rich living was burned to death in suburban Scarborough Friday when a candle he used for a light set fire to a box of mortgages.

John Michael O'Day, 72, known as "Old Man O'Day" was found dead on the floor in his kitchen, the only furnished room in the dirty two-storey brick and frame house in Cliffside. The house had no electricity, no water, no toilet and no phone. The fire apparently started in the kitchen, but did not spread.

Police estimated Mr. O'Day held mortgages worth $1,000,000 and that his estate may total $2,000,000. A neighbor who has known Mr. O'Day for 15 years said $4,000,000 would be a more accurate estimate.

Neighbors said Mr. O'Day scavenged the area for wood and paper to heat his home and had an almost pathological fear of entering his own home, particularly meter readers.

Mr. O'Day owns many homes and other property in Metropolitan Toronto and was said to have mortgages on several valuable properties. Neighbor Tony Pagnello said Mr. O'Day told him shortly before he died that he had just purchased another home.

"But he was sick," Mr. Pagnello said. "He sat on the fence to talk to me and he groaned." His wife said the saw Mr. O'Day stumble into a pool as he walked home from a corner store around 5:30 p.m.

Mr. O'Day was reported to have no relatives. He had lived in the area for as long as many neighbors could remember.

One neighbor said he understood Mr. O'Day had willed his fortune to the Roman Catholic Church.

Bridge Street Church Choir To Present Famous Oratorio

George Frederick Handel's "Messiah" is considered as one of the finest oratorios of all time. This extremely religious work was composed in the white heat of inspiration in the unusually short space of twenty-four days in 1741. First performed in Dublin, Ireland, on April 13th, 1742, it was enthusiastically received. Since its first appearance in England a few months later it has been a landmark for all English choirs to sing for over two hundred years. It has gained in popularity so greatly that it is without doubt the most popular oratorio of the English speaking world.

The work is divided into three parts. Part One contains the Prophecy and the narration of the Nativity. Part Two tells of the Passion and the Resurrection, climaxing in the mighty Hallelujah Chorus while Part Three deals with man's hope of his own resurrection.

This famous oratorio will be presented in Bridge Street United Church Choir under the direction of Robert Reid for the enjoyment of Belleville district music lovers on Monday, April 27th. The approximately fifty voice choir will be assisted by soloists, all of whom have performed this opus with the Toronto Mendelssohn Choir and the Toronto Symphony Orchestra.

Haselanne Reid, wife of the conductor, Robert Reid, will be the only unfamiliar musical event has a decided flair for inspired interpretation. His contagious enthusiasm has certainly enabled him to get the most from all with whom he works, and he has successfully combined a nucleus of professional musicians with a larger group of hard working dedicated amateurs to produce this famous oratorio.

Music lovers of the Quinte District can be assured of a memorable evening of musical entertainment at Bridge Street United Church on Monday, April 27th, when this fine rendition of this large scale religious composition will be presented.

Visiting Hours At Hospital To Be Changed

Afternoon visiting hours at Belleville General Hospital are to be advanced by half an hour, it has been announced.

As in the future the afternoon visiting time will be from 2.30 until 3.30 instead of from 2.00 to 4.00 as at present.

The decision of the board of governors to change the afternoon visiting time was mainly as result of a request from the nursing staff and was made after giving careful consideration to the effects it might have on the convenience of the general public.

The reason for the nurses' request was because under existing visiting hours the hospital parking lots are occupied with visitors' cars and when the afternoon nursing shift arrived for work about 3.45 there is no place to park.

The hospital board of governors are sure the public will be happy to co-operate by concluding visits and vacating the parking lot as soon as possible after 3.30.

Two Children Burned to Death At Joyceville

KINGSTON (CP)—Two boys were burned to death early today and their father suffered burns in a vain attempt to save them as the family home burned to the ground near Joyceville, 10 miles north of here.

The bodies of Dale Edgar, 8, and his brother, David, 4, were recovered in the debris lying in the rubble Factory worker Frederick C. Edgar, 34, was in satisfactory condition in hospital here with burns to his face and upper body.

A fireman quoted Mr. Edgar as saying he tried to drag the boys from the home, but the flames were too hot.

The mother, Evelyn, 31, was away at the time. When she visited her husband in hospital, she was admitted for treatment of shock.

There was no immediate indication how the fire started. Firemen from neighboring volunteer brigades said the two-storey frame home was destroyed in little more than an hour as hoot Flames spreading through several acres of fields could be seen for miles before they were extinguished.

Two Grass Fires

At 9.10 p.m. last night the fire department received a call to a fire at 19 Stanley Street The address was checked out by the department officials before a truck was dispatched and they found 19 Stanley Street did not exist.

The department was also called to two grass fires yesterday afternoon at the old arena property on Turnbull Street and at Tice Crescent.

The department was called again at 11.50 p.m. last night to Bray's chick hatchery on North Front Street where fence posts were on fire. It is believed that they may have caught fire from burning grass.

Number of Wards of CAS Is Lowest in Thirty Years

The Children's Aid Society has fewer children in ward care than at any time in the past thirty years, less than 150.

Local Director Bruce Kerr made this statement in a report to the Board of Directors at their regular meeting on Thursday.

Mr. Kerr said that the low unemployment situation helped to reduce the intake of children by more than 50 per cent in the average over the past ten years during the first three months of 1964.

He went on to say that at the same time more children were being returned to their parents or legally adopted than were being admitted.

Mr. Kerr also stated in his report that the Society was equipped to handle the volume of children normally requiring attention and much credit was due the professional staff.

Mr. Kerr dealt at considerable length with plans for assisting former wards now over 18 years of age. The aim will be reaching the age of 18 with-in the year. He asked the Board for approval of an expenditure of approximately $2,400 in the year 1964 to assist these young men and women complete their secondary school education and/or take certain trade or professional training. This money is obtained from interest earned on investments of funds invested which have been made available to the Society over the years. Maintenance (tax monies) ceases when a ward reaches the age of 18. Mr. Dr. R. Collden and Mr. Stanley Wiggins, who along with Mr. Kerr, administer the Society's Contingency Reserve Fund (which was established in 1960 to make it possible for emergency loans to make bequests for educational purposes) stated that the Fund had received by $2,000 to date. Although this was already invested in long term bonds at a good rate of interest, the annual dividend would provide little more than maintenance for a month or two. It was recommended that the Society again publicize the nature and purpose of the Fund.

WELCOMES DIRECTORS

At the start of the meeting Dr. S. C. Reid, who was elected president at the annual general meeting in March, welcomed to the Board Members Douglas Burr, K. M. Douglas and James Musgrove; Reeves Morris Irwin and Guy Reynolds; Messrs. Donald Lockyer and Joel Mazer, and F/L L. B. MacQuarrie, all of whom were attending their first meeting. All twenty members of the Board were present Mr. Thos. H. Wilson presented the treasurer's report, dealing with the financial position of the Society as of the end of the first three months of the year. Receipts amounted to $45,000 — expenditures $67,000. It was stated that the Society was operating well within its planned budget.

Alderman George Wishart reported that a small group had met with the city council finance committee of the Belleville City Council in February and that, from what he was aware, the Society's request for an increase in the city's annual grant had been included in the 1964 budget. Mr. Wishart, who has been a sitting member of the Society's finance committee for a number of years, stated that in light of the regrettable failure of the United Appeal to achieve its objective in 1963, the Society was finding it an inalternative but to seek increased municipal financing of its protection and family service work.

NAME COMMITTEES

On a motion by Mrs. A. S. Lewis, which was seconded by Mrs. Farley Healy, the Board accepted the recommendation of the executive committee naming the chairman of the Board to the various standing committees: Dr. Reid will serve as chairman of the executive committee; Mr. Thos. R. Colden as chairman of the finance committee; Mr. R. W. Burley as chairman of the nominating committee; Mr. Linton D. Reed as chairman of the personnel committee; Mrs. E. E. Follwell as chairman of the property committee and Messrs. Donald Lockyer and Joel Mazer as co-chairmen of the public relations committee.

Dr. Rose reported that Mr. John H. Lennox, Q.C., the Society's solicitor, had made application to the Provincial Secretary for supplementary letters patent changing the name of the Society to the Children's Aid Society for the City of Belleville and County of Hastings.

Maple Syrup Now Plentiful, Price Declines

Slow to start, the Quinte area's maple season has gone over with a bang this year, according to farmers selling at market square this morning. Reports of calamity and high prices came faster than the syrup when the sap started running about March 1. The week of March 15 to March 22 brought a big change and a rush of syrup and potash for most producers has been well above the year-to-year average.

As production went up, prices dropped, and the syrup which sold early in the season at eight dollars a gallon is now down to six. Fifty-two ounces named carton of syrup are selling at $1.75 and 26-ounce tins are selling for 90 cents. Maple sugar patties are selling in different sizes at different prices, from two for 25 cents to two for 50 cents.

Apples are still a big item on the market, with McIntosh selling at 75c a six-quart basket, Delicious at 75 and 85 cents, Talmas also at 75c and Spies at 75 and 85 cents a basket. Most stands have potatoes selling at 50c a 10-pound bushel, $1.80 a 50-pound bag or 90c a six-quart basket. Onions are selling at six cans for 75c and carrots at 50c a basket. Sge and summer savory are selling for 10c a bunch.

Eggs are on the market at 50c a dozen for extra large, 45c for large. Honey is selling at $1.10 for a four-pound tin and pies are available at about 70c each. Homemade bread is selling at 20 and 30 cents a loaf and buns are being sold at 50c for a dozen for the lunch crowd.

And for the final touch of spring on the market, a commercial nursery has a stall selling packaged fertilizer and other garden supplies.

Librarian Presents March Report

The Branch Library, at the corner of Victoria and Farley Avenues, is nearing completion. The Library Board is planning an "Open House" for Monday, June 1st.

CIRCULATION OF BOOKS

A total of 30,406 books were loaned to library members in March. Adult members borrowed 14,385. Books loaned to boys and girls were 16,121.

Adult: Male — 14,061; Hospital — 324. Total 14,385.

Boys' and girls': Male — 8,826; Queen Elizabeth — 1,578; Queen Mary — 1,419; Prince of Wales — 1,633; Sir. Winston Churchill — 1,487; King George — 1,152; Harry — Clarke — 1,962; Hillcrest 963. Total 16,121.

Total circulation of books 30,406; periodicals and pamphlets loaned 207; records 16.

MEMBERSHIPS

Adult — 118; non-residents — 7; boys' and girls' — 101.

FILMS

One hundred and eight films were loaned in March and thirty-nine projectors.

The film festival of the Film Council was held in the Library auditorium March 17, 19, 24, and 26. The festival was well attended and the films were enthusiastically received. "Wilderness Venture," produced by the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship, was one of the most popular. The photography in the films is outstanding and the scenes of activities and life in the summer camp in the Lake-of-the-Woods area have great appeal. The Belleville and District Film Council now owns a print of this very fine film.

BOOKS

Many new titles have been added to the library, both in fiction and juvenile departments. Some of the more popular adult titles are: "Love, Let Me Not Interfere" by Paul Gallico; "Picture of Japan" by Colin Simpson; "As I Remember Them" by Eddie Canter; "Dear Enemies' by Gwethalyn Graham and Solange Rolland; "The West Below Heart Lake" by Cora of the World" by J. D. Scheetz' "Europe in My Country, the Story of West European Co-operation" by F. Wales; "Common Sense in Teaching Reading" by Ross Gans. In the boys' and girls' library fairy stories, space travel, animal tales are in great demand.

The staff has been busy since the beginning of the year cataloguing books for the new Branch Library. There are approximately fifteen hundred titles for the boys and girls section assigned to the East Hill Branch and they are in circulation. The ordering and cataloging of all these books is a very time consuming task and there is still a great deal of work to be done before the collection is completely rounded out.

MEETINGS

The second art appreciation lecture; sponsored by the library, was held in the library auditorium April 7 at 8 p.m. Those in attendance were delighted with the program which was under the direction of Mrs. L. Andrews.

Other meetings and exhibitions March were: The Hastings Historical Society, Executive of the International Reading Association and exhibition of the paintings of Mrs. Andrew's students and the Belleville and District Film Council Executive.

$10,000 Fire at Smithfield Burns Garages and Barn

TRENTON — A fire in the heart of the village of Smithfield, west of Trenton late yesterday afternoon caused great concern in the occupants of a dozen houses located around 350 yards either side of four burning structures.

Destroyed in the fire were a 40 x 60 foot barn owned by Frank George and garages owned by George Huttley, John Freeman and Gordon Berry.

The fire which broke out shortly after 3.00 p.m. "seemed to explode into flames" in the George barn according to one eye witness. Within seconds, the fire leapt "in a great big ball" from the barn to the Huttley garage 150 yards east of the barn.

From there it spread in minutes to apple trees and cedar trees and the Freeman garage which was to have been shingled next week.

The Berry garage and a children's playhouse were also on fire within a matter of minutes.

Firemen from Trenton, Brighton and the RCAF rushed to the blaze which seemed to be raging on a half dozen fronts all at once. Six fire trucks came from the three departments were in hand. Firehoses were lowered into wells and strung through the area in a maze.

The occupants of the frame houses consider themselves extremely lucky as the stiff wind was blowing from west to east along the line of burning buildings. Had it changed course during the fire the home owners feel their dwellings would have gone up in flames.

An estimated $10,000 loss has been set on the George barn as it contained some farm implements, new lumber and a quantity of hay. Other losses have not been estimated as yet.

Cars parked in the Huttley and Freeman garages were pushed out of danger by neighbors.

FIND PRINCESS' CASE

DEAUVILLE, France (Reuters)—A restaurant waiter, Bernard Lemoequet, 30, was arrested here Friday night after he was found in possession of a gold cigarette case belonging to Princess Lee Radziwill, sister of Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, police said today. Princess Radziwill who lives in London, reported losing the diamond-studded case to local police during this Normandy resort last July.

Clean-up Job Started Day Motion Passed

TRENTON — On the same day, April 15, that the Trenton Board of Health passed a motion calling for the immediate clean up of the north Trenton premises, occupied by the Happy Harry Furniture store before fire destroyed the building and stock last December, men, employed by the former store owner, Harry Seymour, started a man - sized clean - up job of the lot . . . coincidently, before Mr. Seymour was told of the board's motion.

WILL CLEAN-UP TOWN

Clean Up Week in Trenton will be the week of May 11. Fire Chief Cecil Ellis has urged town residents to dispose of all rubbish collected over the winter months and stashed away in cupboards, garages, attics and back yards. Special garbage collections will be held during the week.

Meanwhile, two members of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, Douglas Whitby and Donald McPherson, have been named to head up a committee to investigate the "Nonwich Plan," whereby downtown store owners would be asked to participate in a paint-up campaign, and otherwise improve their buildings.

HOW MONEY DIVIDED

Out of the $1,852,754 and some cents Trenton must spend to keep mobile this year, $638,282 go for education; $218,260 for debt charges; $179,301 for public works; $141,450 for sanitation and waste; $138,718 for social welfare; $125,934 for the running of the police department; $85,647 for an item enigmatically designated in the budget figures as "other"; $84,282 for general government; $73,209 for the operating of the fire department; $58,842 for "other protection"; $46,256 for recreation and community service; $29,876 for law enforcement; $28,428 for capital expenditures out of revenue; $19,220 for public parking and bringing up the rear, $16,776 for the conservation of health.

Nineteen Cuban Refugees Adrift On Rough Ocean

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A small open boat with 19 Cuban refugees aboard — eight children, eight women and three men — was adrift in the rough Atlantic Ocean off Miami today, the U.S. Coast Guard reported.

A spokesman said five other Cubans in another small boat accompanying the missing craft were plucked to safety in a basket lowered from a hovering helicopter before darkness closed in Friday night.

The rescued refugees — three men and two women—were described as cold but in good condition.

PREVENTION is epitomized in gathering of Hillcrest public school students as they seriously discuss pamphlet with safety officer Robert Hall. From left: Cherul Vesterfelt, Bonnie Lee Grave, Billy Mondeville and Carol Ibbotson — all grade 2 students.

Irregularities of Human Nature Being Emphasized To P.S. Students in City

Prevention can be a ticklish problem.

Yet — as any public school youngster can tell these days — it's a principle of police work.

For instance:

Ever read about the officer who stops a car because professional intuition tips him that something is afoot? He discovers all the implements of crime secreted in the automobile and — after questioning — a handful of crimes has been solved.

Or the extreme example, reft the whole chain of circumstances began with a professional police officer who only decided to be preventive. The test was merely an accident.

Applied on the intimately personal level, prevention of offences today is a major factor in police work.

But police departments are not concerned with perpetrators alone, since it takes two to make a crime — the victim and said perpetrator. Possible victims can also be educated.

A sound example of this is the latest addition to the school's safety program — now being practised by the Belleville police department.

The department launched into that program several years ago in co-operation with Belleville Kiwanis Club. Up to recently it dealt only with traffic problems — kids on bikes and crossing hazards.

FATS DIVIDENDS

It has paid large dividends. Now however, a new, and equally serious note has been added. Along with traffic rules and regulations public school students are being gently acquainted with the irregularities of human behavior which result in child molestation.

While Belleville, in common with most communities of its size has no consistently ominous record of such occurrences, police are playing it on the safe side.

"As far as I'm concerned we're not taking any chances and I think we can pass the warning along, as tastefully as possible without raising any extreme reaction," says Chief Constable J. B. McLauchlan.

Among the main reasons why the warning is being passed along "as tastefully as possible" is once again due to co-operation of the city's Kiwanis Club, the chief adds.

Fresh from a recent donation of a new station wagon to police traffic-accident prevention, the club has now issued a picture entitled "Always Say 'No' to a Stranger."

The pamphlet now is being passed out in bulk to every public school student by constable Robert Hall, now the department's field officer in its child-safety campaign.

With a nice turn of phrase, the "Kiwanis pamphlet emphasizes to the youngsters that a "stranger" is someone you do not know — they may look healthy, but they may be sick."

PREGNANT WARNINGS

Illustrated for ready mental digestion of the youngster's mind, the pamphlet points up such ancient, but still pregnant warnings as: "Never Take Candy from a Stranger." "Never Go Into a Building With a Stranger." "Never Take Rides from a Stranger."

It also adds some simple — but significant advice:

"Know how to use a phone."

"Always get the license number."

"A policeman is your friend — he will help you."

The pamphlets are now being currently distributed by Constable Hall during his safety lectures at every public school in the Belleville area.

As a personal family man himself, he strives to emphasize a significant message to his charges without arousing more tender aspects of the problem.

Prevention is a ticklish proposition — after all.

KIWANIS pamphlet, being emphasized by local police, carries a succinct message for school children. It is now being used as a part of police prevention work in the Belleville area.

First Solo Flight Around World By Woman Successfully Ends

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It may be just plain old Saturday everywhere else, but here it's Jerrie Mock Day, officially proclaimed.

Because Jerrie Mock, at 9:36 p.m. EST Friday, became the first woman to fly solo around the world. And Ohio's home of the Wright brothers, Gen. Curtis LeMay and Lt.-Col. John H. Glenn Jr.—is proud of its aviation history.

Brunette Mrs. Mock landed her single - engine Cessna at Port Columbus 29 days after her takeoff. She descended into a throng of well-wishers lured to the airport by civic pride and the unseasonable warm weather.

Clutching her four - year - old daughter, Valerie, and flanked by husband, Russell, and sons Roger, 17, and Gary, 16, Mrs. Mock found herself short of words to express her reaction to the reception.

"I should get my auto-pilot here to talk for me," she commented.

SHOWS FATIGUE

Visibly tired, although laughing and greeting friends, the 38-year-old pilot seemed to hesitate a bit before proclaiming her trip "wonderful." She then added, "I didn't get much sleep or food or anything."

Thousands of spectators crushed toward a flag-draped platform as state and city officials offered words of congratulations. A telegram from President Johnson was read over the loudspeaker system. Columbus Mayor Maynard Sensenbrenner made the proclamation formally designating Jerrie Mock Day.

Also on hand were Governor James A. Rhodes, flown in from a speech in Xenia just minutes before Mrs. Mock's plane touched down, and U.S. Air Force Gen. Richard Lassiter, an old friend of the Mocks.

A representative from the Federal Aviation Agency announced that a medal for exceptional service to aviation will be presented to Mrs. Mock when she got to Washington.

Her official aviation records are the women's speed record for around the world flight and the first globe-circling flight of her plane's weight class, 2,000 to 3,858 pounds.

The five-foot, 105-pound pilot began the final stretch of her trip from Tucson, Ariz., Friday morning. She flew southward to El Paso, Tex., to pick up extra mileage needed for the sanctioning of around-the-world flight by the Federacion Aeronautique Internationale. She stopped at Bowling Green, Ky., for fuel and a candy bar before the final hop home.

business looking into the transactions because they did not constitute "trading" as defined in the investigators' terms of reference.

He said the evidence of Mr. Justice Leo Landreville, who had been mayor of Sudbury when NONG got its franchise there in 1958, states he dealt with the brokerage house and not with Farris.

Mr. Sedgwick argued there was not a line of evidence to show that Farris knew what happened to the 14,000-shares after they left Continental Investment Corporation.

SEES CONTRADICTIONS

Dealing with the 600 shares distributed by Gordon McLean of Victoria to four designated persons, Mr. Sedgwick argued that McLean's evidence was contradicted at every point where it might have been confirmed.

He said that on the day when McLean claimed Farris was handing him the 600 shares in Toronto for delivery, a letter written by Farris showed he was in Vancouver.

Kennedy—Challenging But Obscure

Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy of the United States addressed the annual dinner of the Canadian Press, Canada's co-operative news-gathering association, in Toronto this week.

His address, as reported, provides us with a curious mixture of platitudes and ideals.

Current history suggests that the leaders of the developing nations throughout the world for the next few decades will come from the young intellectuals, the students, the young labor leaders and politicians of today."

From where else could they come? Are not tomorrow's leaders always drawn from today's group? Perhaps he was trying to say something different, that for the next few decades the leaders of these young nations would be young men, or, virtually the reverse, that the young men of today would hold control in these nations for many years ahead.

But, besides remarks like these, his speech contained other observations which, while some may argue that they contain nothing new, are truths often overlooked. He said, for example, that "we of the western traditions are all heirs of revolution." This is true, but one wonders whether it is safe to draw from this fact his conclusion that we of the West have, therefore, much on our side in the years ahead. Mr. Kennedy evidently believes that these years will be revolutionary ones and it is hard to quarrel with that conclusion. But the heirs of revolutions themselves revolutionary? Does not history suggest the opposite, that once a country has itself staged its revolution it tends to look askance at other revolutions elsewhere? Mr. Kennedy may be overlooking that fact because, by a peculiar twist of fate, it is obscured by the history of his own country. The U.S. having won its revolution partly as the result of aid from monarchist France, sympathized with the French revolution which shortly followed. But these two revolutions were close enough to be considered contemporary. In both lands the free-thinking revolutionary spirit of the eighteenth century was swallowed up by nineteenth century reaction.

Mr. Kennedy seems to have been aware of some contradiction in his remarks, for he preceded his reminder about our heritage of revolution by declaring that "it was the natural course for nations and diplomats and those who publish newspapers to speak to the established order." To speak to it and also, more often than not, to speak for it.

There is this to be said for this revolutionary age, however; the established order in many of the lands where revolutions will come is so obviously an anachronism in the twentieth century that certainly publishers, probably nations and perhaps even diplomats will find it hard to defend.

Who in the revolutionary West can feel much sympathy for Africa's tribalism, South America's peonage, or the feudalism still prevalent in many Middle East countries?

Who Will Espouse Centralism?

"Quebec in a very real sense is not a province like the others."

That statement has been made by Prime Minister L. S. Pearson.

What followed made it evident that the Prime Minister is not embracing in toto the arguments of the Quebecois who want that single province to be considered the equal of all the rest of Canada. Nevertheless, he made it abundantly plain that he is in sympathy with the Quebec moderates who, while demanding something less than a veto over national policies, want something more than influence proportionate to population.

We do not propose to debate the wisdom, or otherwise, of such an attitude but merely to call attention to the fact that Mr. Pearson said bluntly his policy is "the very opposite of centralism."

That defines the position of the Liberals under Pearson.

But there is enough to be said for centralism to warrant it being offered to Canadians as a policy they can support with their votes.

What Canadian political party will come out flatly and say that it supports the power of the federal government against the encroachments of the provinces? What party will argue that if the British North America Act does not provide the federal regime with all the authority it requires to weld ten provinces into one nation, then the Act should be amended? What party will maintain that centralism is not just something which is necessary to hold the provinces together but that it is the proper and desirable end of the process of unification which the Fathers of Confederation only began?

O'Leary Aims to Awake Lotus Land of the Senate

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Well, as everybody all along knew it would, the Senate has survived the never-never, or let's pretend, "crisis" of threatened other abolition.

But people may be thinking a little about the Senate and its uses or uselessness — your point of view is decided almost entirely by whether or not you are one of its financially fortunate few — and thinking about the life and times of the Honorable Senators is something new.

The case against the Senate — and against all Canadians who are non-Senators are said to support it — has been ably stated by that old Socialist crusader Stanley Knowles of the NDP.

And the case for the Senate — supported, it is suspected, only by the Senators themselves — has been ably stated by that even older anti-Socialist crusader, life-long spectator of Parliament and distinguished newspaper editor-executive-become-Senator, W. Grattan O'Leary.

Stanley Knowles spoke of the Senate as a fifth Parliamentary chamber, a time-bottered, full of broken spokes.

Senator O'Leary spoke of its dignity and worth, and, more important, its potential.

CHANGED AND CHANGING

But he hasn't always felt and talked that way.

In the latest edition of "The Government of Canada" a fact, if there ever was one, of what the Senate Parliament is, the eminent authority Dr. Norman Gregor Dawson has quoted Senator Dandurand as his pre-Senate days, as having written this:

"A Senatorship isn't a job, it's a title. Also it's a blessed as a stroke of good fate; something like drawing the royal straight flush in the biggest pot of the evening; or winning the Calcutta Sweep.

"That's why we think it's wrong to think of a Senator-ship as a job. It's wrong to think of the Senate as a place where people are supposed to work.

"Pensions aren't given for work."

"Pension" then was the O'Leary word for the lifetime annual $10,000 — since raised to $15,000 — Parliamentary emolument the lucky political poker player wins when he draws from the fifty-two straight flush.)

There's another "pension," even more important than the assured, good, annual income until the day they die, that Senators get.

And that's more than the normal life expectancy.

The Senators themselves were discussing it the other day, remarking in self-satisfied wonder, on the truly remarkable number of years many of them seem to enjoy.

There are 31 of them over 70, the age that Prime Minister Pearson, like former Prime Minister Diefenbaker, proposes to set for compulsory Senate retirement.

STILL GOING STRONG

And there are old warhorses, like Senator Tom Crerar and Senator Arthur Roebuck, both not far off 90 who, indestructible, threaten to go on forever. Only a crackling good job, both "it's the interest," suggests Senator Crerar. Quiet, "it's the still being involved in things that makes the difference."

But not everybody agrees.

MacGregor Clark sees the Senate as the land of the political lotus eaters, and to the Honorable Senators quotes these applicable lines from Ulysses:

"Surely, slumber is more sweet than toil, the shore, Than labor in the deep mid-ocean, wind and waves roar and oars; Oh rest ye, brother mariners, we will not wander more."

Then, getting down to cases, he reads this bill of complaint against the Senate:

It lacks the incentive to and for work . . . political ambition he had [when] he spoke to its speeches . . . fewer care the drama and excitement of politics is dead. . . . the vital issues hang on its votes . . . there are no reputations to be made. . . . or fresh, aggressive men bringing young minds to satisfy. ".

Then he puts the tired trademark of advantages given the Senators with these almost pathetic words:

"Occasionally one of them reminds his fellows of the achievements in extreme age of the Shaws who wrote the plays, the Churchills who wrote the books, and the Grattan O'Learys who ran the ball teams — an exercise as revealing as it is soothing."

Washing Hands Important Before Preparing Food

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: How important is washing the hands before handling food or eating utensils.

Personally, this is a must with me. But perhaps I am too touchy.

Several months ago an elderly relative (76) came to live at our home. The fact that she does not wash her hands causes me to cringe whenever she asks to help in the kitchen. Although I admonish my two small children quite purposely in her presence of the necessity for clean hands before handling food, she doesn't seem to get the point.

For my own peace of mind I have refused to let her dry dishes or set the table. After all, I am responsible for the health of five persons. Yet maybe this one thing has reached mountainous proportions with me — Mrs. S. H.

Rather astonishing, don't you think, that any adult should need to be told the importance of having clean hands before touching food.

It's part of the difference between a healthy civilization and a disease-ridden one. Safe milk, safe drinking water, refrigeration, food inspection, sterilizing bottles between uses, sanitation, all these things are the difference between nations where life is consistently long, and the backward nations where life is still short.

Oh, sure, you can violate any of these rules and get away with it most of the time, just as some people drive recklessly and still escape disaster, most of the time.

But sooner or later, someday gets caught. The unwashed hands occasionally will carry pneumonia, or a germ that causes diarrhea, or an infection of the mouth, or skin. Or whatever germ that happens to be lingering. Perhaps the ever-present staphylococcus, which can cause anything from pimples to blood poisoning, when it encounters a susceptible victim.

And if, as I suspect, your elderly relative hasn't learned this, she isn't going to.

All I can suggest is that you tell her, calmly but firmly, that the children are going to be brought up in the habit of washing their hands, and that as long as she is in the household, she will have to cooperate by washing hers. That or stay out of the kitchen. Because I don't see how you can impress this sufficiently on the children when they see an adult violating this.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is a man an alcoholic when he consumes but one real cocktail in whether a person has a drinking problem? Seems to me that makes the answer obvious in this case.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Blood tests taken of a man and woman have venereal disease, can they still get married. — X

No. They could not be issued a marriage license, unless both persons are beyond the reproductive age and non-infectious.

• • •

Note to W. W. : Yes, I've heard before that a "person isn't normal" unless he has five or six bowel movements a day. That is not normal, it could be regarded as diarrhea, or as incomplete evacuation if less than one or two in any 24 hours is abnormal in my judgment.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 12th, 1904.

Jack Brett, a reporter with the Ontario Intelligencer for the past two years, was presented with a gift by his fellow workers this week on the occasion of his leaving for Hamilton to take a position on the Hamilton News.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Lodge, No. 123, A.F. and A.M., held in the Masonic Temple, Foster Avenue, a team of young Masons from the four Blue Lodges in the city, exemplified a first degree to a packed lodge room. Many visitors were in attendance from the district and there was a large representation from outside lodges including visitors from New York State and England.

Plans have been made for a community meeting on Sunday evening at the Sons of Jacob Synagogue in behalf of the State of Israel Bond drive in Belleville. The State of Israel Bond issue is the outstanding investment dollars for the young nation's growing economic structure. In the announcement of the forthcoming community event, Kenneth J. Shulman, chairman of the Bond Appeal—[illegible] Bond Committee, disclosed that purchases of Israel Bonds, by Jew and non-Jew alike have already played a large part in strengthening the new state.

David Ernest Reid, one of the most distinguished former residents of Hastings County and a native of West Huntingdon township where he was born 78 years ago, died in Toronto Sunday morning the 15th. inst., at his home in Rochester, N.Y., where he had lived for the past 35 years. He was interested in Canada as the inventor of non - inflammable cinematograph picture films and was regarded as one of the leading specialists in pharmacology in Canada and the United States. At the time of his death he was at the head of a staff of chemists of the Eastman Kodak company in Rochester, N.Y.

The late Mr. Reid was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Reid of West Huntingdon. He originally graduated with honors at Toronto University as a chemist; his apprenticeship being served in a drug store in Trenton. Eventually he went to Rochester, N.Y., where he founded a company of manufacturing chemists devoted principally to the manufacture of photographic films. George Eastman, president of the Eastman Kodak Company, was attracted by the young chemist's skill in his chosen field of pharmacy and induced him to enter the chemistry department of the kodak company. He was then retained as head of the chemical department of the Eastman Kodak Company.

He is survived by his wife and two small sons, Ernest and David, both at home also by two brothers, Robert Reid of Shanghai, China and Armour Reid of Belleville. Mr. Reid frequently visited his old home and his boyhood days in West Huntingdon. He was a personal friend of Mr. J. Owen Herity of this city.

The 26 southern counties of Eire severed their last ties with Britain 15 years to-day, when they became the Republic of Ireland and became independent—after 700 years of British rule—on the 32rd anniversary of the 1916 Easter rebellion.

1906—Earthquake and fire virtually destroyed San Francisco.

Editorials From French — Canadian Newspapers

This is a selection of editorials on current topics, translated from the French-language press of Canada.

Trois - Rivieres Le Nouvelliste—Our foreign trade merchant shipping field can only be attributed to factors foreign to Canada and contrary to Canadian interests. These factors are the agreements giving a favorable position to vessels from Britain and other European countries in coastal shipping. As our ships cannot compete, in our inland waterways, with foreign fleets, we are driving our own merchant marine to extinction.

In 1947, 20.2 per cent of the ships handling Canada's maritime transportation flew the Canadian flag. By 1958 the proportion had sunk to 2 per cent, at which level it has stayed.

The Canadian government, when Leon Balcer was transport minister, established a program of subsidies for shipbuilding. Vessels totalling 26,300 tons were subsidized to the extent of $6,000,000, representing a federal contribution of 35 per cent of their cost. But what is the point of such a program if, as a result of unfair competition, ships built there with the yards are not in a position to operate at a profit? The vessels will end up being sold abroad, and the government subsidizing for foreign maritime industry.

How can Canada practise a policy so harmful to the country? Would the government allow foreign the government to compete with local enterprise inside Canada? This policy of suicide imposed by Britain on a former colony cannot be explained other than by a desire to make the interests of a foreign people prevail over ours. . . .

It has been recommended that we maintain a merchant fleet able to carry 40 to 50 per cent of our trade, raise federal subsidies for ship construction to 40 per cent to bring prices closer to the British level, and, above all, denounce the 1931 convention giving exorbitant advantages to British ships. That is the only way to have the shipbuilding industry. (April 6)

Granby La Voix de l'Est—The campaign launched by the St. Jean Baptiste Society to give us a more truly French appearance, is obviously aimed at something besides putting frosting on Quebec's tourist cake. Moreover, tourism stands to gain a great deal from this undertaking, if people finally grasp the necessity of positive action in this domain. It is utterly inconceivable that, in a French province, in French towns, restaurants should be seen calling themselves Snack Bars, Hot Dogs Steamies, Milk Bars or even Restaurant Therese, Chez Arthur, etc., etc. Such horrors reveal total incomprehension, or obvious lack of culture. It is not by them that we are going to ensure the growth of our tourist industry.

It is our duty to eradicate these horrors and regain for ourselves a truly French appearance. The tourist, whether he comes from another province or the United States, comes here — make no mistake—to see something different, something special, and it is up to us in offer it to him while making his visit pleasant. (April 7)

Quebec Le Soleil—The rather negative results of the Quebec - federal - provincial conference are hardly of a nature to reinforce the ties of Confederation. One could certainly not expect to see the central power and the other governments agreeing to all Quebec's requests but one was entitled to think that there could have been evidence of more flexibility on certain matters. If there is agreement in principle on the possibility of provinces pulling out of joint programs, it nevertheless remains that no concrete step can be taken in this direction for several months.

Between now and then we shall be plunged into a new period of uneasiness. Everything will depend on the measure to which the government has to take to face its obligations. . . .

Whatever is done, there will be new arguments, new weapons at the disposal of groups wanting to separate Quebec from the rest of the country as quickly as possible, maintaining this to be the only solution to the present Canadian crisis and Quebec's problem of survival.

It must be anticipated that the discontent shown by a part of the people of Quebec will spread to others hitherto not much concerned. The malaise will grow rapidly and nothing good can come out of it. . . . The acts of violence that we witnessed a year and again recently are a warning to be on our guard ceaselessly. We must all ourselves fall behind the march of events. If, inwardly, most of the people condemn itself, they sometimes give the impression of excusing them, without thinking for a moment of the serious consequences such an attitude can have. That is why we cannot do too much to put the people on guard and show them the dangers of violence. . . . (April 8)

Montreal La Presse—Pressures are said to be growing for Ottawa to modify its dealing with foreign magazines. On all sides Mr. Pearson is being asked not to make an exception in the case of the Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest. These pressures are fully justified. They are inspired by the purest logic. If we want to save our periodical press, we must at all costs prevent foreign as a matter from coming and taking the bread, meaning Canadian advertising, out of its mouth.

Opponents of this thesis claim that the holy principle of freedom of expression is being threatened, that it would be violated if our business firms were forced to use selecting periodicals, foreign or Canadian, in which to advertise.

The Globe and Mail has particularly exploited this point of view. There it has put a "a fundamental principle," the freedom of advertising, is at stake and Ottawa's commitment is essentially a form of news, with the same right to freedom from any official censorship.

Such an argument borders on sophistry. Equating ads with news is going a little too far. At this rate the salesman who rents a store and starts announcing his excellent bargains is a sort of newspaperman.

The advertisement is, in fact, quite simply the soliciting phase of the selling process. It can be regulated without harm to freedom of the press. It has already been rendered in Montreal that the merchant cannot solicit your business from the street or the sidewalk. Nobody has seen in this any blow to freedom of speech. . . . Vincent Prince. Montreal Le Devoir — We like Quebec's retirement pension plan for its realism and its sense of proportion.

A key characteristic of the plan is its universality. It will be obligatory, not only for wage - earners, but for the self-employed. In this way the obligation will be met and small businessmen will also be covered.

The premiums are lower than expected. That's an agreeable surprise. The ceiling foreseen for the pension covered by the plan is lower than union leaders would like it to be. These two characteristics will leave a significant margin for the development of complementary private schemes.

The scales of premiums and pensions were uniform in the federal plan. The big wage-earner was thus favored at the expense of the small. The Quebec project fortunately provides for norms of contributions and benefits taking into account different wage scales and age categories. On the whole, the basic figures seen under the Quebec plan will be 25 per cent higher than those set out in Miss Laurendeau's revised project. The Quebec plan takes as if it will be more generous in the case of widows. Also, for the benefits of invalids and orphans, it contains interesting clauses that Ottawa was unable to include in its project. . . .

Two problems remain intact: That of Quebec recovering the $75 million pension at present paid by Ottawa and that of old age assistance, which Quebec also wants to take over. These two problems will have to be solved sooner or later in the spirit of Quebec's legitimate claims. But Mr. Lesage was right in having a law drawn up whose operation will not necessarily be linked to the solution of these dangling questions. . . . Claude Ryan. (April 11)

Aside from the problem—almost completely ignored—that some of the most heavily played stocks were gyrating wildly, there was the physical difficulty of getting his order placed.

OFFICES PACKED

Stockbrokers' offices were packed with spectators, especially during the noon hour when tens of thousands of office workers came to see what was happening.

Switchboards at the houses were jammed all day.

Then there was a frequent problem in getting a stock broker to take an order, as many brokers tried to warn would-be investors of the dangers of a speculative market."

Finally, there was the difficulty of getting the orders processed, as thousands came rolling into the Toronto exchange within minutes of its 10 a.m. EST opening.

So many orders came in that the exchange's high-speed tickertape which records all the transactions fell 15 minutes behind the actual business after only 20 minutes.

For more than two hours it was more than an hour late and by the 3 p.m. close it was still lagging behind sales and purchases by more than 15 minutes.

On a normal day, when volume runs between 2,000,000 and 4,000,000 shares, the ticker tape notes transactions within seconds of their being made.

EXCITEMENT SPREADS

Similar excitement broke out on the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges in Montreal, where several companies with properties with rights near the site of the big Timmins strike are listed.

The scene on the exchange's trading floor was hectic. Employees of brokerage houses working on the floor became hoarse within an hour from shouting out orders from clients.

Two public galleries were filled all day.

One broker was almost as enthusiastic as the investors.

"This 30,000,000 shares is nothing," said A. J. Reid of Waite, Reid and Company. "We'll see 50,000,000 before this is over."

Other bosses and the exchange, however, were advising caution.

Lt.-Gen. Howard Graham, president of the exchange and former chief of staff of the Canadian Army, issued a special statement saying "new and unsophisticated investors . . . were taking very real risks in venturing into the speculative market."

They should stay out "unless they are prepared and able to accept losses," he said.

H'YE NO BABE

Other sources noted that the speculative issues being traded had done little or no exploratory work and there was no concrete fact on which to base an investment.

"We spent all day telling clients that," said one broker. "But all they wanted to do was buy, buy, buy."

"They wouldn't listen," said another. "Everyone wanted to buy something."

$1,000,000-PROGRAM SET

TORONTO (CP) — Public Works Minister Ray Connell announced Friday that reconstruction of dams, locks and docks in Ontario will cost $1,000,000 this year. Mr. Connell said about $700,000 worth of capital work would be carried out in addition to $190,000 worth for the completion of projects started earlier. A $120,000 reconstruction program at the Normandale fish hatchery on Lake Erie is also part of the 1964 outlay.

"Her April Days"?

How could such a title suit Mrs. Robert Hemery's last book which covers much of her mother's later years of life? (It is in the Corby Library).

This we pondered, until we noted the fly-leaf and read this quotation by Shakespeare:

"Thou are thy mother's glass, and she in thee Calls back the lovely April of her prime."

Truly, the title couldn't be more apt.

This thought came to mind upon reading the current Royal Bank of Canada Monthly Letter, entitled "Shakespeare after 400 Years." (The author, John R. Heron is said to qualify as Canada's most popular unknown writer; for this unique, unsigned publication exceeds 600,000 monthly copies, is not copyrighted, sent only by request and is devoted to Mr. Heron's scholarly essays cover any topic but economics and finance, which is adequately read by business, industrial men, parents, teachers and professors, as you may suppose.

Shakespeare, Mr. Heron continues, is not a dead poet who lived in London, whose breathing spirit thrusting himself into our everyday lives, . . .(he) continues to be a living force to mankind.

The ultimate test of literary merit is survival, which is the index to majority opinion. . . . Shakespeare is still moving and breathing in his writings in our everyday talk, and in the life of the world, as he has been out into books (such as the one mentioned) have taken their titles from Shakespeare.

Crack of Doom, Tomorrow and Tomorrow, All Our Yesterdays, Brief Candles, The Undiscovered Country, Re-mearsy (or Remembrance, Dear Brutus, Hot in Our Shades, Strange Bedfellows, Brave New World, The Web of Life, Gaudy Night, The World My Oyster, Valiant Dust, etc.

It's pointed out how he is quoted daily, due to his "glowing" phrases:

Flaming youth, a "...homely eye, to the manner born, the primrose path, it smells to heaven, there's the rub, method is his madness, brevity is the soul of wit, cudgel thy brains, more matter and less art, neither a borrower nor a lender be, this mortal coil, yeoman's service, sweets to the sweet, winter's tale, the dogs of war, hearts of gold, give the devil his due, he has eaten me out of house and home, make assurance doubly sure, the milk of human kindo ess, measure for measure, a sea of troubles, set on with a trowel, an ill-favored thing, but mine own, what's in a name? a, fool's paradise, elbow room, every inch a king, the wheel is come full circle, throw cold water on it, play fast and loose, the main chance, a foregone conclusion, a spotless reputation, something in the wind, one touch of nature makes the whole world kin, etc.

Shakespeare, says Mr. Heron, planted one leg of his compass in the Elizabethan era and then with the other swept the whole circumference of Time.

His plays will endure because they embody undying states of mind concludes Mr. Heron, saying how they have been now and forever, a conception of human dignity, a sense of the importance of human passions, and a vision of the amplitude of human life.

Little wonder then that a hundred foreign ambassadors will raise their national banners at Stratford-upon-Avon on April 23rd in honour of a poet whose plays are enacted in scores of languages. Or that this year All England is going Elizabethan in celebration of the 400th anniversary of Shakespeare's birth.

How glorious to remind Mankind, so often downcast with discouragement and sorrow with words of sublime faith and truth, asserted in Hamlet:

"What a piece of work is a man, how noble in reason, in form and moving how express and admirable, in action how like an angel, in apprehension how like a god.

Jetliner Lost In Desert Storm, 49 Persons Die

BAHREIN, Persian Gulf (AP) A jetliner lost in a desert sandstorm overshot the airport at Dhahran, Saudi Arabia, Friday night and crashed in the Persian Gulf with 49 persons aboard, including 33 Americans.

A U.S. Navy spokesman said a helicopter crew saw no survivors in the wreckage of the Middle East Airlines-Air Liban Caravelle jet spotted this morning in shallow water about 10 miles off the Arabian coast.

The spokesman said the search for survivors was continuing and that more helicopters and small boats had been sent to the crash site, where only one wing of the plane jutted above the waterline.

Divers set out from Dhahran to start an underwater search at the scene, but the navy spokesman said "it doesn't look like there can be any survivors."

The twin - jet airliner went down in the gulf about halfway between Dhahran and the archipelago of islands which make up this British-protected Arab sheikdom on the Persian coast.

LOVE RADIO CONTACT

An airline spokesman in Beirut, Lebanon, where the flight originated, said the jetliner was only three minutes northwest of Dhahran air base when radio contact was lost Friday.

The twin-jet airliner took off from Beirut on the two - hour, non-stop flight to Dhahran and ran into the sandstorm near the end of the journey. There was visibility then was near zero.

The plane was found during a search for air land and sea search.

Dhahran, a comparatively modern desert city, is the heart of Saudi Arabia's multi-million-dollar oil operations and the headquarters of the Arabian American Oil Company. There is a large American colony in Dhahran connected with Aramco.

The debate ran to the adjournment and at once the amendment did not reach a vote. Monday the Commons opens a two-day money resolutions and the redistribution measure cannot come up again until Wednesday at the earliest.

Ken More (PC—Regina) and Hazen Wooliams (P Co—New River) levelled accusations of a Liberal-NDP deal.

It was a "marriage deal." Mr. Wooliams said. While Mr. Pickersgill and Mr. Knowles sparred in the Commons, they slept in the same bed when it comes to negotiations."

CALLS IT DEAL

Mr. More called for "an open admission that this is a deal between the Liberals and NDP."

The bill received second reading — approval in principle— Wednesday and now is in clause - by - clause study. Mr. Knowles' amendment came at Clause six of the 32-clause bill.

During previous debates, all parties have endorsed the principle of the measure. Several said it would be a proud day for Parliament when the bill is passed.

There was a sharp clash, however, on its provision for a tolerance level for the adjustment of riding populations. This says a riding's population must not be 20 per cent above or below the provincial average.

Conservatives are backing for 25 1-3 per cent in the tolerance figure. Most Liberal and NDP members want 20 per cent.

Because of this dispute, Clause 13 has been put aside until all the other clauses have been approved.

Premier Robarts in Toronto termed it a "very heartening" improvement, and Premier Bennett of British Columbia said he was "very pleased."

The new plan was outlined to all premiers in an eight-page telegram from Mr. Pearson Friday. It's anticipated here they will agree to it.

It would provide uniform pension terms for Canadians in all provinces—a single plan which Quebec and any other province could administer on its own.

But it's understood that even where a province leaves the administration to Ottawa, the pension fund reserves would be available for investment in provincial securities—a major goal of Quebec and other provinces.

The federal Canada Pension Plan now before Parliament would have provided only half of the pension funds for provincial investment.

The new pension plan is the third to be drawn up by the federal government since it took office a year ago. The first, unveiled last July 18, was extensively revised — primarily to meet objections from Ontario. The result was the Canada Pension Plan bill now before Parliament.

It's not certain whether this legislation will be withdrawn in favor of a new bill, or else amended on the floor of the Commons.

Extensive changes in terms would be needed. It's understood the federal and Quebec governments reached a middle-ground compromise on many points in the two plans differ.

Individual contributions would average about three per cent of income—close to that of the Quebec plan instead of the two-per-cent contribution proposed by the Canada Pension Plan.

Maximum pension benefit after 10 years is likely to be about $100 a month, mid-way between the Canada plan's $75 and the Quebec plan's $125.

Under the Canada Pension Plan, contributions would have been levied on earnings up to $4,500 a year, while the Quebec scheme would have levied on earnings between $1,000 and $6,000.

Here again a saw-off was reached, it is understood. Earnings would be exempt up to about $2,000, while the income ceiling would be in the neighborhood of $5,000.

The settlement also opens the way for the new national plan to provide survivor benefits for widows and orphans—a feature of the Quebec plan. A constitutional amendment is anticipated to allow the federal government to provide this coverage.

Even before provincial conferences with Quebec were begun, Prime Minister Pearson had recognized—in speeches—the need of provincial governments for greater tax revenues to finance desperately needed evacuation, highways and other provincial services.

Even the federal-provincial conference in Quebec City early this month produced no tangible improvements in the present tax-sharing plan—only the decision that a joint committee should study the matter.

Premier Lesage was strongly critical, saying Quebec's need was urgent.

On Monday, Mr. Pearson is expected to spell out his government's willingness to give the provinces more room in personal income taxes. Under the present five-year arrangement, Ottawa allows the provinces taxing room by abating its personal income taxes by 18 per cent—a share rising to 20 per cent by 1966.

Though it is unlikely any improvement will take effect until next year, another arrangement is expected to provide Quebec with extra revenues this year by allowing the province to opt out of the new federal plan to extend family allowances for students aged 16 and 17.

Quebec, which makes similar payments on its own, has criticized this allowance extension as treading on provincial jurisdiction over education.

Bandits Hold Couple Captive In Their Home

KITCHENER (CP) — Five armed and masked men held a storekeeper and his wife captive in their home for three hours during the night before making off with $3,500 in what police said was one of the coolest robberies ever in the Kitchener area.

The men, each armed with a pistol and disguised by a silk stocking or cloth over his face, threatened to kill Willis Shantz unless he gave them the keys to his grocery store in nearby Bridgeport and the combination of the store safe.

While three of them went to the store and took $3,000 from the safe, the others stood guard over the couple.

Police said the men helped themselves to beer and whisky at the Shantz home and took food from the refrigerator.

Before leaving they ransacked the home, taking $200 from Mr. Shantz's wallet, $150 from under a mattress, a coin collection valued at $100 and $35 in United States coins.

Police said the men seized the Shantzes when the couple arrived home at 11 p.m. They tied Mr. Shantz to a bed and bound Mrs. Shantz to a chair, with a pillow slip over her head.

Trade Surplus Favorable

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada had a favorable trade surplus of $97,500,000 with all countries in the first two months of 1963 despite a sharp rise from a year earlier in imports from the United States, the bureau of statistics said Friday.

Value of imports in the two months rose 16 per cent to $1,065,800,000 from $936,000,000 in the corresponding period last year. However, the value of exports advanced 20.2 per cent to $1,183,100,000 from $984,200,000.

The resulting trade balance—excess of exports over imports —at $97,500,000 was more than double last year's corresponding export surplus of $48,500,000.

The trade tables showed that Canada's surplus with Britain has ballooned so big that in the two months it almost covered the traditional huge deficit with the U.S.

During the two months the deficit with the U.S. was $167,800,000, Roughly two-thirds of before - tax $106,000,000—was covered by Canada's surplus in trade with the United Kingdom.

Exports in the two months to Britain rose by $48,700,000 as compared with the similar period last year. They were up also by $600,000 to the U.S., $9,900,000 to other Commonwealth countries and $21,600,000 to all other countries.

Imports from Britain advanced by $9,200,000 in the two months. Shipments from the U.S. jumped by $117,600,000 and there were increases of $4,000,000 from other Commonwealth countries and $22,300,000 from all other countries.

The January - February figures on country of trade, with figures in millions of dollars:

Exports	1964	1963
United Kingdom	185.0	136.3
Commonwealth	67.6	57.7
United States	891.1	797.8
Other	259.4	207.8
Total	1,183.1	984.5
Imports
United Kingdom	78.8	67.1
Commonwealth	43.9	43.7
United States	780.9	681.3
Other	166.2	143.9
Total	1,065.8	936.0

Imports in February rose 19.2 per cent to a record $514,300,000 for the month from $431,200,000 in the same month last year. Exports also were up 23.8 per cent from the preceding February peak of $411,900,000 set in 1960.

The bureau announced April 1 that exports in February also reached a record for this month of $349,000,000, an increase of 25.6 per cent compared with 1963's preceding February peak of $437,700,000.

This trade pattern produced an export surplus for February of $34,800,000 compared with a favorable balance of $6,400,000 a year previous.

taken in the normal course of events," Col. Woodcock said.

Did this mean Canadian troops would fire on anyone attempting to cross the "green line" between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot positions?

Any army spokesman said two months that neither side has the right to cross the line.

"UN directives on this matter—which contain the rules governing the British troops who policed the green line before—make no change in fire on Greek- or Turkish-Cypriots if either side launches an assault to cross that.

The spokesman said this approach is neither harder nor softer than it has always been.

There were indications, however, that the Canadians—far from having their trigger fingers—were taking precautions against shooting anyone accidentally.

Friday was a quiet day in Trakhonas, a suburb of Nicosia, and soldiers at one guard post were seen patrolling with the magazines removed from their weapons.

But the army spokesman emphasized that crossing of the green line would not be permitted. He said a Greek- or Turkish-Cypriot who does so, to take pictures for example, will be considered guilty of an act of aggression.

As UN directive authorizes its peace-keepers to open fire in cases of aggression.

Brig. A. J. Tedlie of Montreal arrived on Cyprus Friday, accompanied by eight officers and 11 men, to determine how many men will be needed for a brigade headquarters on the Mediterranean island.

Bonkers' Saturday Column

BY MARY MOORE

QUESTION:

Will you please explain the difference between Smorgasbord and Buffet? . . . "Dotty".

ANSWER:

Smorgasbord is Swedish and means literally "bread and butter table". It is a type of luncheon or supper served buffet style and consisting of many hors d'oeuvres, hot and cold meat, smoked and pickled fish, sausages, cheeses, salads, relishes, desserts, etc. Buffet service, as you know, is food served from a buffet or counter and is often a stand-up affair in Canada, with fewer items than a Smorgasbord.

Boil first amount of sugar and water together for 5 minutes. Cool. Add fruit juices and water (second amount) and sliced maraschino cherries and juice. Add barely enough pink food coloring to tint delicately. Chill. Just before serving add ginger ale or soda water. Pour over ice in punch bowl.

Sift together flour, oatmeal, whole wheat flour, salt, baking soda, skim milk powder and sugar. Tip bran remaining in sifter into dry ingredients. Cut in shortening or butter or margarine until very fine. Drizzle water over, mixing only enough to make dough pack together. Shape into ball, pat and flatten on slightly floured board and roll out to ⅛" thickness. Cut out with 2½" floured cutter. Bake on greased baking sheet at 325 deg. Fahr. about 20 to 25 minutes. Husband Must Recognize His Problem Is Alcoholic

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm 25 and my husband is 27. We've been married four years. Don is a good person but when he drinks too much he is impossible.

About eight times a year he goes on a toot. The first clue is when he doesn't come home for dinner. As the night wears on I go crazy. When he shows up the next afternoon all he says is, "Don't ask me any questions."

Last night Don got drunk in a restaurant and picked an argument with a college kid. They ended up in a catsup fight, squirting each other from the plastic bottles. We were ordered to leave.

I've tried talking myself dry but Don insists he has no problem. I even left him twice but he begged me to come back — and promised to do better. Please tell me what to do. — DUMB DODO.

* * *

DEAR DODO — Your husband is an alcoholic. His needs help more than your threats.

The city health department can lead you to groups which offer help to alcoholics. Of course, you can't drag the guy. Conquering alcoholism is the daddy of all do-it-yourself projects.

For you I suggest Al-Anon Family, a branch of A.A. which helps the families of alcoholics understand the nature of the illness. Some Al-Anons eventually get the problem drinker to choose the road to sobriety. Goodluck to you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please tell me what to do about me. Yes, Ann, you are reading right. I am the problem.

My parents are the greatest. I can't say the same for myself. I will be 16 next week and I am the rottenest daughter in 50 states.

Deep down inside I feel like a real beast because everyone thinks I'm an angel. That's because I'm so sweet to outsiders. If they could get a load of me at home they'd be shocked.

Please don't tell me I'm going through a stage because it is lasting too long for that. How can I get over being such a lemon-puss at home? Thank you. — MISS WITCH.

DEAR MISS — The fact that you accept responsibility for the trouble is encouraging. Most teen-agers who have problems with their parents blame the parents.

Resolve to control your temper. Count to 20 if 10 isn't enough. Pitch in at home and offer to do things. Everyone has grouchy spells. When you feel one coming on go off by yourself so you don't make life unpleasant for your family. You can do better because you want to.

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am a respectable girl who works in a bank. The woman in the next apartment is an attractive brunette. We were on a "good-morning, good-evening" basis until two months ago when her husband was shipped overseas, for an oil company.

A week after he left I was invited to a nice party. The man who invited me asked me to find an interesting date for his friend. On a wild impulse I thought of my brunette neighbor. She was delighted and allowed as how she was lonely and that I was very kind to think of her.

To make a long story short, the brunette and the friend hit it off so well together that he is over there every night.

Am I to blame? I feel guilty, even though I keep telling myself a woman of this type would have taken the cheating route, eventually, with no help from me. Comment, please. — UPSET.

* * *

DEAR UP — You are indeed to blame, but you can do nothing about it now. It's true that in time the brunette may have stepped around on her own, but the fact remains that you fixed her up with this one.

What's the matter with you? Don't you know any single women?

Going Places

Facts Show Steamship Travel Inexpensive and Delightful

NEW YORK — The next time the wife complains about the marketing chores, you might point out to her the problems faced by John J. Bishop, chief steward of the Aquarama, flagship liner Constitution this shopping list runs something like this:

Eighty thousand pounds of beef, including 9,500 of sirloin steaks, 6,000 of prime ribs, and 6,500 of filet mignon.

Fifteen thousand pounds of pork products, virtually all of the above food is free to passengers in unlimited quantities.

Fifty thousand pounds of fish.

Eggs: 7,360 dozen. Milk: 9,200 quarts. Butter: 5,000 pounds. Poultry: 17,500 pounds of chickens, turkeys, quail, pheasant and partridge.

Also, 30,000 pounds of potatoes, 21,000 of fresh fruit, 16,000 boxes of cereals, and 9,000 pounds of assorted baked goods.

The only other items running into a mere three figures are caviar and pate de foi gras — only 150 and 120 pounds respectively

From all this you'd suspect that an ocean crossing is the most expensive means of transportation. Actually, all of the above food is free to passengers in unlimited quantities.

CHEAPER THAN TRAIN

Actually, sea voyage is about the cheapest form of transportation there is. If you were to buy a train ticket in New York and offer the driver a check therefore he would drive you to California, back to New York and back to California, and pay for your accommodations as well as meals en route, all for $200, you would — unless the man had a sense of humor — be treated to a stream of the kind of vituperation only New York cab driver know.

Yet $500 will buy you a 9,300-mile Mediterranean cruise in the winter season, including your bed and all the board you can take aboard. How can they afford such fare.

According to Haley, it costs about $36,000 a day to operate a ship like the 30,000 - ton Constitution. Of this, about $5,500 — 15 percent — is represented by food. Obviously, to accommodate on this most traditional of economy going delights would be both futile and bad business.

A steamship is an individual self-sufficient instance of the country whose flag it bears. Along with it go all the customs, traditions, and problems of the country.

North Americans who have been abroad know, for example, the minor annoyances of trying to use foreign matches. For some reason, only here does anyone know how to make book matches that don't explode in your face or break in your fingers. Only here do we know what it is like to try to get more than one cube of ice in a drink, or a decent cup of coffee. All of these are taken for granted on American carriers.

ADULT MILK DRINKERS

So is a glass of milk. North Americans are about the only people in the world whose adults drink milk; elsewhere it is considered appropriate only for children and invalids. To come to this taste, American Export moved heaven, earth and the world of science to figure out a way to keep dairy products — especially milk — fresh over a three-week period, something that had never been accomplished before.

With the cooperation of the Carrier refrigeration people, it was finally determined that the flavor and freshness can best be maintained only by keeping the milk somewhere between frozen and not frozen, a nice trick if you can do it. They did it by maintaining a locker humidity of 50 percent and temperature of 32 degrees which, while the freezing point, is low enough to hold the delicate balance every time a crew member enters the locker to remove a supply.

American health laws are the most stringent in the world. Most fresh foods left over at the end of a voyage have to be dumped, meaning there is little room for waste in Chief Steward Haley's shopping list. But, with the exception of fresh fish and vegetables, everything consumed on board is loaded in New York. Everything is preserved, in its own prescribed way. Vegetables are kept at 40 percent humidity, 36 to 40 degrees, cheese at 38 to 40 degrees. Crewmen who smoke in food lockers are subject to severe discipline.

MENUS IS PROBLEM

Menus, while they and suits are good American traditions, service, unfortunately, is not. It is the one department in which sailing with the Constitution is unlike any other American ship.

Because they must constitute most of American Export's passengers, appreciate neither seasickness nor familiarity. So even those in between lies courtesy and friendliness, which they do appreciate. The cultivation of these also falls under Haley's department.

American seamen — like American air stewardesses — are considerably higher paid than foreign counterparts. But constant attention is given to educating personnel in doing what they are paid so well for, while retaining their dignity.

Like America itself, the best of what was originally foreign has been incorporated into the menus of American ships like the Constitution. The cuisine is a considerable blend of continental and American. Head chef Giuseppe Antonini is Italian trained, and trained. Roger Brigaudin, cabin class chief dining steward, is French, and his colleague, Lawrence Trundling, came from Holland. Among the waiters and crewmen are Puerto Ricans, Cubans, Filipinos, Barbadians, Europeans and native born Americans, Negro and white all.

Passengers off the ship for the day at the various ports of call, coming back to the pier, usually can be heard remarking that "it's good to be home." It is.

SO YOU HAVE ALWAYS WANTED TO RUN YOUR OWN BUSINESS

This column sometimes receives requests for advice on the successful operation of a small business. I was delighted to learn about a new Federal Government training plan for the management of small business.

It all started last summer when the Small Business Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce started a 12-week training for representatives of seven provinces plus a trade organization. This nucleus of specially recruited instructors from business and professional men in their cities and towns. They encouraged local associations to act as sponsors for these courses. First groups were set up in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Ontario, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

It was found that the most popular courses were management accounting and retailing. Management accounting shows the commercial manager of a small business, be it a peanut stand or a dress store, how to read financial statements, how to set up a company ledger. Better budgeting and a better cash flow are the end results of such a study. Retailers learn from experts with other retailers. Some of these owners are surprised finding that, by pooling their experiences, they can often help at lower wholesale prices, etc.

The sponsors of these courses are usually the local boards of trade, chambers of commerce, service clubs and business organizations. It seems that courses lasting from eight to 12 weeks are the most successful. A class of from 20 to 25 is just the right size to stimulate discussion and to provide an interesting variety of business ventures. Discussion groups dealing with the specific local problems of the students often lead to practical solutions. Emphasis is placed on the local situation and the local resources, thus making these courses beneficial to the whole community.

Sponsoring organizations are often eager to start such a course, once they learn of the training plan, but they needed help. This can be had from the provincial superintendents.

The following is the list of these provincial superintendents in the provinces where the course is now in operation:

Ontario — Jack Wright, Technological Branch, Department of Education, Parliament Buildings, Queen's Park, Toronto.

Nova Scotia — Robert V. Davies, Department of Education, P.O. Box 1650, Halifax.

Prince Edward Island — Ronald Storey, Research Branch, Department of Industry, P. O. Box 2000, Charlottetown.

British Columbia — Roy Bath, Department of Education 3650 Willingdon Ave., Burnaby 2.

Alberta — Eric M. Baker, Vocational Educational Division, Department of Education, 725 Administration Building Edmonton.

Saskatchewan — Robert Simon, Department of Industry and Information, Regina.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Butcher Observe Anniversary

Friday, April 10 was a very memorable occasion for Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Butcher of Belleville, their 35th wedding anniversary. In honor of the occasion a surprise dinner was given for the couple by their eight children. The dinner was held in the King Edward Suite of the Quinte Hotel. A bouquet of coral carnations was presented to the mother by their eldest daughter, Mrs. Jean Pinniere to the father by their eldest son.

Several toasts were made expressing congratulations and appreciation to the couple. Following the dinner everyone gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Butcher to convey further good wishes. At this time the couple were presented with a coffee table.

Thirty five years ago Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Butcher travelled by train from Coe Hill to Carnahon, where they were married. They made their home in Coe Hill for fifteen years and during this time had five children including twin boys. Later they moved to Belleville and three more children were born here.

For the past twenty years the family has resided at 328 Coleman Street, Belleville. Of the couple's eight children, four are married, two are living in Toronto and the other two in Belleville. Four children are still living at home with their parents. The couple also have eight grandchildren.

Take off Pounds Sensibly Club Has Many Members

MONTREAL (CP) — Mildred McLeod, in tight white - knit dress and white sandals, stepped gingerly on the scales in standing feet.

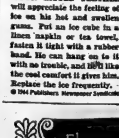
She upped both hands to her chin in happy surprise as the scale registered her weight. Then, in loud pleasure, she stepped down, once again champion of TOPS, a club that awards prizes to losers.

TOPS, founded in the United States in 1948, stands for Take Off Pounds Sensibly. Mrs. McLeod has been Quebec champion for several months in a row. She has shed 85 pounds since January, 1963.

But, more important, she has managed to keep her weight down after losing the pounds. A lot of members allow their weight to fluctuate, either up or down, and rarely keep the top crown for any length of time.

Mrs. McLeod is vice-president of the TOPS club in the Notre Dame de Grace district, and she has organized clubs in suburban Verdun and Lake of Two Mountains. She is planning now to start one in her own northwest-end Park Avenue area. "One of my fondest hopes," she says, "is to get one started for men."

TOPS has grown to 1,700 clubs with 55,000 members. There are 91 clubs in Canada.



"TOPS purpose is to help the overweight who are sincerely interested in losing pounds the right way," says Mildred. "This means, first of all, that every member must have an authorized diet from her doctor before she can even be eligible to join the club."

Each member gets the names and phone numbers of fellow members whom they can call for help whenever urge to nibble comes along.

The club also holds weekly weighins at which the champion must defend her title. Each member's weight is closely guarded secret. Only the recording secretary knows the weight of each member.

The club has a series of status symbol badges which members wear. The pig badge goes to the member who has gained weight, a turtle for the one who is top weight, a top for the one who has lost weight, and a crown to the champion weight loser.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

When and how to make introductions referal to be an ever present problem to many people Here are some typical questions:

1. When you stop to say hello to a friend in passing, is it necessary to introduce the person you are with?

2 Must all new arrivals be introduced around the room at a party?

3 Is it necessary to make a general introduction when a person stops at your table in a restaurant?

4. How does one introduce two young friends about the same age?

5. How is an introduction handled between two older friends?

6. When a young person is being introduced to an older person, how is the introduction handled?

7. When a man is being presented to a woman, what is the proper form?

8. How is a person introduced to a group?

10. Must all guests be introduced to the guest of honor, if he happens to be one?

ANSWERS:

1. In passing, no. But if you have to call for a few minutes, introductions should be made.

2. Yes, if the party is small. At a large party, it's only necessary to introduce new arrivals to a few guests, after which they may introduce themselves.

3. If he lingers, it would be rude not to. However, if a person just says hello and goes on right on, introductions are not necessary.

4. "Mary Jones, Jane Brown," would be correct, without commenting unnecessarily about which name comes first.

5. "Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Brown," would be most suitable, instead of mentioning first names as in the case of two younger women.

6. The name of the older person is mentioned first — i.e., "Mr. Smith, may I present Mr. Brown."

7. By identifying him either as "my husband," or as "my friend, Bill." "He is not presented as "my husband, Mr. Smith."

8. The man is presented to the woman, so the correct method of introduction would be: "Mrs. Brown, may I present Mr. Jones."

9. The name of the person being introduced is given first — "Mr. Smith, may I present Mrs. Brown. Mrs. White and Mr. Jones."

10. Yes, guests should be introduced to the guest of honor at some time during the party, preferably soon after the arrival.

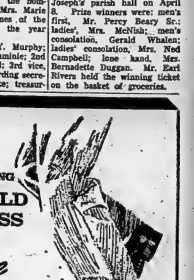
ST. JOSEPH'S C.W.I.

The members of St. Joseph's C.W.I. were welcomed to the monthly meeting by the president, Mrs. Y. Murphy.

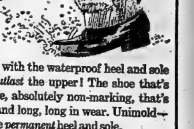
The executive reports were read. A potluck supper will be held for 97 Guides and Brownies and their mothers on June 2. It will be held in the parish hall and served by members of the C.W.I.

A membership coffee party will be held for the May meeting and each lady is asked to bring a member along with her. The general meeting will begin at 7.30 ending with a social evening.



The chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. Marie Bell, gave the names of the new executive for the year 1964-65:

President, Mrs. Y. Murphy; 1st vice, Mrs. M. Duminie; 2nd vice, Mrs. R. Ellard; 3rd vice, Mrs. L. Bibby; recording secretary, Mrs. H. Clarke; treasurer, Mrs. J. Walsh; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. Bankey.



A euchre was held in St. Joseph's parish hall on April 8. Prize winners were: men's first, Mr. Percy Beary Sr.; ladies', Mrs. McNish; men's consolation, Gerald Whalen; ladies' consolation, Mrs. Ned Campbell; lone hand, Mrs. Bernadette Duggan. Mr. Earl Rivers held the winning ticket on the basket of groceries.

When collectors on envelope flaps won't stick, coat both sides with a light coat of nail polish. Press together when almost dry.

This is the shoe with the waterproof heel and sole that actually outlast the upper! The shoe that's instantly flexible, absolutely non-marking, that's light in weight and long, long in wear. Unimold—the shoe with the permanent heel and sole.

St. Andrew's W.M.S. Holds Delightful Springtime Tea

St. Andrew's Presbyterian church hall presented the appearance of a flower lane in Springtime on Wednesday afternoon when the Women's Missionary Society held their annual tea. White wire baskets holding sprays of artificial pink flowers snapdragons, tulips and tiger lilies were suspended from the ceiling around the tables. Spring flowers, daffodils, tulips and pussy willows were entwined on trellises, while white candles held apple blossoms and pussy willows in white containers.

Assisting on this attractive tea were Mrs. H. Elvidge and Mrs. C. Barragar.

Mrs. L. Sutherland, wife of the minister, and Mrs. W. M. Barlow, president of the W.M.S. received the guests at the entrance with warm hospitality.

The tearoom hostesses were Miss L. Burnside, Mrs. O. J. Reed, Mrs. Murray, Mrs. W. Hamlin and Mrs. E. Pigden. Mrs J. Browning convened the arrangements in the kitchen.

Small tables held individual bud vases containing daffodils. The appointments colors were carried out on the tea table with a centrepiece of a low crystal bowl of feathered chrysanthemums sprayed with pink glitter, sweetpeagrass and daffodils. It was flanked with two candelabra holding yellow candles. A lace cloth covered the table and silver services were arranged at each end.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. G. Durpo, Mrs. J. Allen, Mrs. J. Craig, and Mrs. V. Weir.

An unusual display of pot holders was shown by Mrs. J. Robertson, who designs and makes all types of interesting styles to add a touch of glamor to the kitchen.

The Evening Branch of the W.M.S. had a miscellaneous table which was just what the name implied with a collection ranging from aprons to asparagus, and a wide choice in between. This booth was conversed by Mrs. P. B. Sheffield.

The home cooking table held an array of tempting food and was in charge of Mrs. H. York and Mrs. D. Kane.

The treasurers for this successful tea were Mrs. J. Miller and Mrs. R. White.

A Lift for Living

Healthy Soul One That Can Recover From Life's Wounds

By REV. HAROLD E. KOHN

Now in April we watch with wonder the earth's miraculous recovery from its winter afflictions. The earth "snaps back" with surprising elasticity, as we say of a patient who recovers from an illness. Earth has been hurt by winter, by its frost, sleet, snow and winds, but its convalescence is certain. The pulse of spring is firm and regular, and earth's breathing is normal — with gusts of damp breezes carrying the heady perfume of awakening buds, sprouts and blades and the sweet sounds of running water.

The lawn outside my study window is greening now. Countless blades of grass died last fall from ice formation within the cells, causing irreversible damage to grass protoplasm. But fresh blades are rising to take the place of the old. Sap mounts in the trees. Young leaves struggle to break out of their encasements, reaching for the brilliant, blue spring skies. Birds return to nesting sites from their winter quarters in Central and South America.

Days grow gentler, longer, lovelier until we suspect if the land, the sky and the waters could speak, when we give the friendly greeting, "How are you?" we would be answered, "Fine thank you, in fact, better than ever."

A healthy person, like the hearty earth, knows many springtimes of renewal. Your body stays healthy not by avoiding germs and injury, but by constantly overcoming them and recovering from them. Every body is bombarded by countless germs every day, but usually the body rallies its defences and fights off infection. White blood corpuscles rush to the point that is threatened and the invading germs and transform them into substances harmless to the person. Even when the disease wins a skirmish the body usually wins the battle and health is restored. Doctors inform us that there are few people whose lungs do not have scar tissue on them, reminders of some past battle with the germs of tuberculosis. Most of these wars taking place in our bodies occur without our being aware of the wounds sustained and healed.

READILY CURED

Small cuts and bruises are incurred and readily cured. When a wound festers long after it is incurred we know that there is something seriously wrong with the entire body. Its powers of recovery are impaired. Physical health is the capacity to recover from hurts wrought by germs, viruses and accidents.

A healthy mind and spirit are not those that can avoid life's troubles. No one can escape affliction. Rather, healthy minded-ness and spiritual heartiness are marked by the ability to be hurt and them to recover.

Many are the signs of poor spiritual health that make us feverish and fretful with ourselves and annoying to our fellowmeq. Readiness to belittle, disparage, humiliate — to hold grudges, cynicism, narrow prejudice. Chronic suspicion of the motives of others; extreme sensitivity and readiness to take offense — such symptoms of sick souls distress us and those around us. They mean that some old cut has not been cured; some long ago bruise has not been healed. One woman confesses that she cannot derive any good from the worship services of her church. Upon questioning her she admits she holds a long-standing resentment against her minister for something he once said from the pulpit with which she disagreed. Others who know her minister and those who attend his services tell me he is a capable and dedicated servant of God, and they are spiritually strengthened by his leadership. So evidently the good is there in that church but she is too sick at heart to respond to it. She is dying spiritually, because she won't let an old wound heal.

BROTHERS DIVIDED

One almost incredible case of unhealthy attitudes came to light a few years ago at Canisteo, New York. An elderly man attended the funeral of his brother, and there revealed that he had not spoken to his brother, nor heard his brother speak to him for more than six decades, although they had lived under the same roof all of that time. Sixty-two years before that fateful day the brothers had quarreled. They then divided their one-room cabin in half with a chalk line, and neither brother crossed that line or spoke a word to the other the rest of their lives. They were unhealthy souls, without the power to recover from a spiritual wound.

In Psalm 147 the writer says of God, "He heals the broken-hearted and binds up their wounds." We need such a God. All of us are hurt by life, not only by griefs but more frequently broken by the thoughtlessness and callousness of others. The life of faith heals, because it reveals us as spiritual members of the community of the forgiven and the forgiving. We can treat our neighbors with grace when we are aware that we have been mercifully treated by God's grace. Then we "snap back" from slights and offenses like the sapling of springtime following the assaults of winter.

Spiritual health is the capacity to recover from life's wounds.

Rural Church Still Exerts Much Influence

ORONO, Ont. (CP) — Delegates to a United Church regional meeting Thursday decided that the country church still exerts some pressure on the community.

The 100 delegates to the three-day meeting at this community, 30 miles south of Peterborough, represented the five United Church conferences of London, Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa, Bay of Quinte and Montreal.

The conference concluded that the church still sets the standards of worship in the community. They also said the church is definitely working in the community and exerting influence and leadership in education, municipal, moral and social affairs.

They disagreed with Dr. Ralph Krueger, chairman of Waterloo Lutheran University's geography department, who told the conference earlier that the church is no longer the social centre of the community.

Some Predict Election Soon

Are Those Storm Signals on Parliament Hill?

One year ago a Liberal minority government took office, declaring its intention to operate as if it had a majority. It has survived 23 confidence votes. In this story a Canadian Press reporter relates the events of the first 12 months and discusses election prospects.

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson's leadership has undergone its first acid test.

He has struggled through 12 turbulent months of decisions and retreats, strains of Confederation, labor strife on the Great Lakes, frictions with the United States.

His minority government has been tested 23 times by non-confidence votes in the Commons. Its smallest winning margin has been eight votes.

The question now is whether the government can cling to office for the full four-year term it seeks.

It is four seats short of an over-all majority in the 265 seat Commons. The Liberals have 128, Conservatives 94, New Democrats 17, Creditistes 13 and Social Creditors 11. There are two vacancies. Likely to be filled in June byelections.

Mr. Pearson nonetheless has been running the government as though it had a majority—as he said he would. He said on April 23, 1963, the day after taking office:

"We will not be seeking to evade any issues, to avoid any votes in Parliament. We will not be seeking any special deals. We will breach no trust, barter no principles."

OPPOSITION STIFFENS

What happens next depends largely on the Opposition.

Last year the voting stance was hesitant and awkward, all parties fearing an election. On most votes about 20 Conservatives were absent. The New Democrats declared their own moratorium on elections and twice abstained en bloc in non-confidence roll calls. Social Credit openly backed the government.

But now some detect storm signals.

This year so far more Conservatives are standing to be counted; on two recent votes only five or six were absent. The NDP has rallied against the government on five of the six motions since the new session began Feb. 18.

Robert Thompson, Social Credit leader, may no longer be able to pull as much weight to the government side on crucial votes because of his remaining Quebec followers show signs of going their own way. Four of them were in the House voted opposite to Mr. Thompson and his three Western colleagues on the 90-day-tax issue on Feb. 25, giving the government its closest shave—128 to 120.

ELECTION POSSIBLE

Thus an election in the near future is becoming a possibility.

What of achievements could the Pearson government hold out to the electorate?

In brief, it has:

—Forecast a one-third cut in $455,000,000 this year in the federal deficit, while still budgeting for a 3.8-per-cent rise in expenditures.

—Added no taxes through the stretched-out 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials and production equipment, plus the extra personal income tax of up to $30 a year levied to finance this year's $10 increase to $75 monthly in old age pensions.

—Initiated a scheme for publicly administered retirement pensions, proposed tax protection for Canadian periodicals, imposed labor trusteeship on the lakes, moved toward unification of the three armed forces.

—Set up the Dunton-Laurendeau royal commission on bilingualism and bicultural-ism.

—Taken some tentative steps toward greater Canadian ownership industry, established an industry department, offered tax plums to spur development of backward regions, moved toward long-term economic planning by creating the Economic Council of Canada.

—Revised the Columbia River power and flood-control treaty with the United States.

—Provided tariff incentives and begun negotiating a 12-mile fishing limit.

for greater auto-parts export to the United States.

—Proposed loans for university students, and family allowances for 16- and 17-year-olds still in school.

—Begun to implement the Glassco royal commission recommendations on government organization.

—Proposed a new system of electoral redistribution, and promised legislation to limit election-campaign expenses.

For the most part these are plans, proposals—or at best, firm measures whose effect only time can gauge. In a sense the government has sown many seeds, but still has no crop.

PM MAIN ASSET

Its biggest asset still appears to be Mr. Pearson, who will be 68 Thursday, April 23.

Whether his public stature as a prime minister has improved in a year is debatable—the kind of debate that only an election could resolve.

He came to office somewhat as the conciliator than on the known as intellectual, diplomat, mediator, Nobel Peace Prize winner.

The Liberals knew it. They put their accent more on "the Pearson touch" than on the man. They told everyone who would listen that "if he is less a politician, he is more a statesman."

After the first year this much is clear:

While it still may be a team effort, Mr. Pearson is increasingly calling the signals—is carrying the ball himself more often than even his most ardent fans envisaged.

He has taken on virtually sole responsibility for the cool to cool some balm to heal the festering wound in Canadian unity, the Quebec crisis.

The "high, hard road" that he foresaw during the election campaign has not proved to be secured, at least in part, by a rough and tortuous gauntlet lined on one side by opposing French and English extremists.

WON'T CANCEL VISIT

In February he won applause from all sides for his eloquent appeal for understanding of this issue, "highly emotional and particularly sensitive to gusts of passion and prejudice."

He exhorted all politicians "to overcome rather than create misunderstandings in this field, to avoid rather than engender resentments, and to repair rather than widen."

Every move he makes is beginning to attract interest.

Refusing to cancel the Queen's visit to Quebec in October in the face of threats from her life by the Quebec Liberation Army, Mr. Pearson has won high praise for his courage—and surrender to this kind of minority and devious propaganda."

Yet the test is real. It is in such that the prime minister himself is frequently under surveillance by armed and unidentified policemen, despite his own protestations. He was shadowed by a bodyguard on the recent Social Credit federal - provincial conference, a sight that may be commonplace in the United States but is completely foreign to Canadian experience.

CHARGE APPEASEMENT

Meanwhile, the Opposition have already charged the Liberals with appeasement of Quebec and disruption of national unity.

The charge is based on three developments:

1. Quebec drew more than half the total $87,500,000 in revised equalization payments distributed among seven provinces as a result of the federal-provincial conference last November.

2. To meet pressures that came only from Quebec, the government has agreed to permit the provinces to "contract out" of jointly - financed health and welfare schemes—and to give them more taxing power in lieu of federal grants if they take over responsibility for such programs, all of them in the provincial bailiwick of the constitution.

3. Despite wholesale revisions to its proposed all-Canada system of contributory retirement pensions, the government was unable to persuade Quebec and Ontario—with 70 per cent of the population—to join. It accordingly agreed to Quebec's wish to operate its own plan, but was reported to have applied strong if unsuccessful pressure on Ontario.

PLAN ATTACKED

Said John Diefenbaker: "Is this one Canada, or is it not?"

He has accused the Pearson government of opening "divisions, cleavages and fissures" in Confederation.

He has said the contracting-out proposal could mean in time "the piecemeal dismemberment of the basic principles of Confederation."

Social Leader T. C. Douglas has warned of "balkanization"—the replacement of one standard of national services by varying provincial programs.

Most observers believe that Mr. Pearson is handicapped in this issue by the lack—so far —of anyone in his cabinet who can preach Canadian nationalism with a strong voice in Quebec.

Indeed, some consider that Mr. Pearson has gained most of his help in the federal-provincial council from the more erratic stand of some of the premiers, notably Conservatives John Roberts of Ontario, Duff Robin of Manitoba and Robert Stanfield of Nova Scotia.

It also has been reported reliably that Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec has been more patient, more moderate, in these conferences than his political colleagues during public statements would indicate.

RETREAT ON BUDGET

What of Mr. Pearson's stand in other affairs?

While in opposition he described what he called one-man government by John Diefenbaker.

Mr. Pearson has assumed no such posture. But he is taking more and more into himself—and his cabinet seems to circumstance than intent.

One circumstance was the ill-fated "90 days of decision." Even Liberal stalwarts now blanch at the thought of ever again trying to live with such haste.

That hectic period, from April 22 to June 20, spawned Finance Minister Gordon's highly precedent-setting budget, written with the help of the now-famous "white kids" — three Toronto businessmen who had been the country's biggest annual secret.

It led to painful retreats on the three key points in the budget—the 30-per-cent tax on foreign take-overs of Canadian business, the decision to impose the sales tax in stages, and ultimately partial elimination of the withholding-tax penalty on foreign firms.

"Even Napoleon in his retreat from Moscow never retrieved quite so far or quite so fast," said the former Conservative finance minister, George Nowlan.

KEY IN KEY MAN

Another factor in the take-charge tendency of Mr. Pearson may be the existence of Tom Kent, the $25,000-a-year "policy secretary," or "co-ordinator of programming" as he has been variously billed.

Everything in the field of government policy must flow through Mr. Kent to the prime minister.

This does not imply that the cabinet is weak. Rather, it is regarded by most as generally strong—a potent mixture of intellectuals and career politicians. Its basic structure was unaffected by the Jan. 30 reorganization.

Large at 26, the cabinet is reported to be separated — or becoming so—into "inner" and "outer" wings, after the British system. It also is operating with a system of nine standing committees, with Mr. Pearson presiding on all of them and the chairman of seven.

It is in these and other behind-the-scenes moves that Mr. Pearson has asserted leadership.

Witness these other examples:

The Commons floundered without him during Easter week and the week preceding, when he was first laid up with a heavy cold, then occupied at the Quebec City conference.

The bold move toward unification of the three armed forces, but a nuclear role in NATO, the emphasis on peacekeeping, the earlier scrapping of the Bomarc, the NATO and peacekeeping concepts were his.

Judy LaMarsh as health and welfare minister ushered in the Canada Pension Plan last July, in its original version. But she soon antagonized Premier Robarts by using the plea as a speaking-board to intervene in Ontario's September elections.

While Miss LaMarsh was the self-styled "public mother" of the pension plan, father soon identified himself. It is long since obvious that this is Mr. Pearson's project.

Ostensibly, it was External Affairs Minister Paul Martin who negotiated Canadian participation in the Cyprus peacekeeping force of the United Nations. He has answered for it, most of the time, in the Commons.

OFFSTAGE CONTROL

But there are strong suspicions here that it was Mr. Pearson who, though remaining offstage, not only cleared the way for Canadian participation but even had an influence on the makeup of the force.

The move to protect Canadian periodicals might have been the minister's responsibility for it is, after all, a tax measure.

Mr. Pearson has taken personal charge of this move, a delicate one that strikes close to the heart of the electorate. He will pilot the legislation.

Move — much more — appears to be in the prime minister's private top drawer.

He has become personally associated with the new issue of a distinctive national flag. He now has a year to produce one, if he is to keep his election pledge.

Medicare looms ahead, reserved for that day of judgment when—the Liberals say — the government can support it. It will almost certainly come under Mr. Pearson's wing unless some strong personality takes command of the welfare portfolio.

Delayed, but unrecanted, the Canada Development Corporation — the multi - billion - dollar public investment pool—awaits action. So far Mr. Pearson has answered for it personally.

FOCUS OF HOPES

All of this indicates a Liberal effort to pin party hopes on the prime minister, not on the team.

Mr. Pearson is apparently going along with this, without attempting in any way to strip his ministers of effective authority.

Mr. Gordon still is one of the prime minister's closest friends and most influential advisers. After weathering last year's budget storm, Mr. Pearson has apparently cemented him in the finance portfolio.

Allan MacEachen, the bachelor labor minister, has emerged as one of the bright young lights. His methodical, unhurried handling of the SIU affair won him the plaudits of even political opponents.

Mitchell Sharp in trade is regarded by the Opposition as possibly the most formidable opponent of the treasury bench. He has a potent influence on trade and economic policy, and possibly even more important—the respect of the business community.

Guy Favreau, first in immigration and now justice, is the leading candidate to become Mr. Pearson's Quebec lieutenant. He quietly built a reputation as a legislative troubleshooter, whose image was enhanced by the tribulations of House leadership. A job to which he brought little parliamentary experience.

ECONOMY STRONG

J. W. Pickersgill, once labelled by Mr. Diefenbaker as the government's "resident cretin," has been left almost entirely with the arduous subject of redistribution and parliamentary reform, plus his new duties as transport minister.

Paul Martin, in external affairs, was regarded at the time of his appointment as a change the impression—as the man largely responsible for winning British Columbia's consent to the Columbia River protocol with the United States.

The government's biggest ally in the last year has been the economy.

It still is on a prolonged, record - smashing rise. Business confidence measured by 1964 capital spending is at the highest high. Credit is relatively easy. Prices have been generally steady.

Unemployment in mid-March was at a seasonally adjusted rate of 4.6 per cent of the labor force—lowest since 1957. Now aiming for "high level" rather than "full" employment, the government has chosen to allow the problem an area-by-area instead of national basis.

Meanwhile, the $500,000,000 wheat sale to Russia was the salvation of the country's international accounts, threatened by the steep fall-off in American tourist spending as a result of the U.S. tax on foreign investments.

The balance-of-payments deficit was trimmed to $521,000,000 last year from $948,000,000 in 1962. Big factor was a tripling to $464,00. in the trade surplus—a product mainly of dollar devaluation imposed by the Conservatives in mid-1962.

All this has bought the government breathing room, valuable time to seek longer-range solutions to both domestic and international affairs.

they were building the post because Turkish-Cypriots recently built a gun post about 200 yards down the road inside the Turkish quarter.

Gunfire reverberated over the area, a UN spokesman could confirm only that there had been shooting.

A government spokesman said meanwhile there is no substance whatever in any reports that Greek Cypriots are planning an imminent all-out attack on the Turkish quarter.

The UN peace force reported that since it took over on March 27 there casualties have been confirmed: Four Greek-Cypriots killed and 12 wounded, and six Turkish-Cypriots killed and nine wounded.

HAS STRONG SUPPORT

The government's parliamentary majority passed the law last December. It was to have become effective Jan. 1, but a three-month delay was ordered because of strong opposition from the doctors.

When the truce period ended April 1, about 10,000 doctors and 2,000 dentists went on strike.

At the start of the walkout, the doctors agreed to provide two emergency hospital service. The government later called up doctors in the army reserves and took over the service.

The service provided the patients with a high standard level of medical care but as the doctors ended the strike the emergency service was ordered to collapse. Hospitals were jammed with patients and most nurses near exhaustion.

The Golden Years

$269 Per Month Gives Couple 'Happiest Time of Our Lives'

By THOMAS COLLINS

"How can people fear retirement, and complain? It can be so precious . . ."

And so it has been for a remarkable retired couple with a yen to live a rural life and the nerve to do it — on $269 a month.

When my husband and I retired six years ago," the wife says, "we had $100 in pensions. We had savings from which we figured we could draw $100 a month, to give us a budget of $200.

"We had been living in a rented house. My husband was sick well. He suggested that we have a sale of our household belongings. We did just that.

"Then began the happiest years of our lives. We were free."

She says they bought a new car with the money they got from the furniture, and then hit the road.

"I had always wanted to see more of Canada, so we left from one end to the other, staying for six weeks on the ocean. We visited. We had picnics. We inspected a cheese factory. We went through a lumber mill. We gathered driftwood. It was marvelous. . ."

SERVED AS TEST

Oregon served as a test of their budget. By careful spending they made it work. So they decided to see the United States. They wound up in Florida for a winter, drove to the keys, and went to Washington, D.C. for six weeks. Always they searched out inexpensive places to stay, and always held to the budget.

"We lived for a year; then settled down to a routine, commuting between Northern Minnesota and Mass, Ariz." the wife says. "We bought a lake cabin in Minnesota from May 1 to October 1. One summer we paid $100 a month for a cabin near Virginia, Minn., and for the next two summers were at Big Sandy Lake at McGregor, Minn. On one of these summers we had a new cabin, with utilities, for $60 a month. On the other summer we paid $85, and that included...I cooked and baked. My husband caught all the fish we could eat. The rest people We played bridge. We had friends in for dinner. We took hikes. We were so happy. . ."

During the winter months at Mesa, they also sought out inexpensive quarters, and one year rented a furnished trailer for $100 a month, utilities included. Another year they rented a furnished house for $100 a month, utilities included. "We wore only cotton clothes," the wife says. "It was cooled in Arizona or in the Minnesota summers."

In Arizona they took up oil painting, went to art classes, and continued their fishing.

"Going back and forth from Arizona to Minnesota," according to the wife, "we would stop at Caldwell, Idaho, see a dentist, see our doctor, visit friends, then stop off in Boise to see one of our old friends. . ."

Eventually came their last October farewell to Minnesota. "We drove to Huron S.D., where we saw relatives for three days, did the Black Hills for the ninth time, saw our friends in Boise, had a checkup in Caldwell, and left for Arizona in a snow storm. . ."

During all this time, which the wife thinks of as the dream years of her life, her husband was able to fight off increasing bouts of illness. Once there was long surgery. Three times severe cases of pneumonia. Then back surgery. And heart trouble. He died in Mesa.

The wife is now living in Mesa with her memories.

What this couple did on $269 a month can be done by almost any retired couple, provided they aren't fussy about how they live, and are content with simple living. And if they have better than average courage. The $100 a month from savings would eat up $13,000 in ten years but most retired people wouldn't want this kind of life beyond age 75.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

In office, plant, shop, store, factory, in fact almost anywhere people loll, they've dropped the early day salutation of "Good Morning."

Instead the greeting is "What number did you draw?

The village has gone "pool crazy." Net billiards, or swimming, but those pesky pieces of paper drawn from receptacles ranging from a secretary's chapeau to a discarded chips container.

"Yer pays yer money and takes yer choice."

This hockey numbers racket has got me down mentally and financially. As matters stand now I must win at least three of the "dips" to break even.

Oh, I've drawn the right numbers and the right clubs. But danged if they get together.

The pools range in value from the executive type of $100 to the working man's "nickel a throw."

They're all on the level but some are on the "square." Others are based on the second the winning goal is scored. Most are "aggregate scores."

I've won one thru far. I arranged my own pool of two tickets, tossed in a couple of bucks and collected.

Some guys are born lucky, some acquire good fortune and a few have it thrust upon them.

Like the bloke at the next desk, who traded his ticket because he didn't like the club, then saw his barter buddy run off with the loot.

And I know a nonchalant type who doesn't know a puck from an ostrich egg, who casually tossed in his donations, won three pools in a row and wanted to know how he did it.

I'm firmly convinced that once Ole Lady Luck gives you the icy stare and the frigid shoulder—you've had it. There's nothing fickle about the old hag as far as I'm concerned.

I've tried whistling in dressing rooms; opening umbrellas in the house; tossed my hat on the bed; stroked black cats when they crossed my path; deliberately knocked over salt shakers without tossing a pinch over a shoulder and purposely broke a mirror.

I figured my luck couldn't be any worse and perhaps I could woo Dame Fortune over to my side. Time will tell. Or will it? It will be just my luck to draw the Yankees when they battle the Dodgers in the world series.

SOUTH HASTINGS BASEBALL LEAGUE

The oldest baseball league in rural Ontario is holding the annual meeting tomorrow afternoon at the CPR freight offices on South George Street. President Wally Storey says it gets under way at 1.30 sharp.

He expects the regular "five," Foxboro, Shannonville, Latta, Read and Cannifton to enter but would like another entry to make a six-team circuit.

"In fact," says Wally, "we'll accept three more entries to make it an eight-team loop."

There you are m'boys. Be on hand and let's get the league going. It may be the only adult baseball in these parts this year.

COME, COME, MRS. TRUMAN

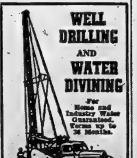
Then there's the story of former U.S. President Harry Truman, who always called a spade a spade. He was addressing a meeting of farmers in the mid-west.

Mr. Truman was speaking of the advantages of fertilizer and repeatedly used the word "manure". In fact his whole speech was freckled with the word.

A lady sitting with Mrs. Truman in the audience leaned over and whispered, "Why don't you make Harry use the word 'fertilizer' instead of what he is using? It doesn't sound right."

Mrs. Truman never blinked an eye. "My dear," she said, "it took me twenty years to make him use the word 'manure'."

Nicklaus Creeping Up



Four Share Houston Lead

HOUSTON (AP) — A Spaniard and three United States stars shared the lead and big Jack Nicklaus, after a 10-stroke comeback, was back in contention in today's third round of the $50,000 Houston golf classic. Ramon Sola of Spain was deadlocked at 139 with Don January, Billy Maxwell and Buster Cupit after 36 holes but Nicklaus was only three strokes off the pace after placing a five-under-par 66 beside his first-round 76.

The wind blew Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg out of the leading group as he added a 76 to his promising first-round 70 for 146. Al Johnston of Montreal was farther back with a 76-73—149.

Red Wings Can Armlock Cup Tonight

By DAVE BETTS

DETROIT (CP)—The National Hockey League has dragged out that old joker again, the ghost who wrote the script for the 1951 Stanley Cup final.

That was the year everyone could have skipped the games and just showed up at the rinks at the end of the third period—all five games were decided in overtime.

The unseen script-writer with the macabre sense of humor seems to be at work again this spring, setting up heart-thumping situations in the Detroit Red Wing-Toronto Maple Leaf series.

Up to now, the teams have provided one overtime game and two last-minute thrillers.

Bob Pulford decided the first game for Toronto with two seconds remaining. Gerry Ehman forced the Wings to win in overtime by scoring for the Leafs with 61 seconds left in the second match, and a change of scene for the third game failed to leave the clock-watching poltergeist behind.

Allen Stanley of the Wings made it 4-3 Thursday night with only 17 seconds left. This followed by only 36 seconds Toronto's tying shot by Don McKenney.

I hope this doesn't keep up," said Detroit coach Sid Abel Friday. "It's too hard on every one."

"I can't take much more of that kind of action," said Gordie Howe, all-star right winger who has set Detroit's two winning goals.

RUNNING OUT OF LUCK

"We've got to start moving in the first period," agreed Toronto coach Punch Imlach. "We seem to be running out of last-minute luck."

In the 1951 series Toronto defenceman Bill Barilko scored the winner—and the last goal of his life—to defeat Montival Canadiens 3-2 and give the Leafs four overtime wins to none for the Habs.

Later that year Barilko disappeared on a private aircraft flight in Northern Ontario.

NHL publicity director Ron Andrews said Friday no final series before or since 1951 has been as close as this year's.

Both coaches take an optimistic view about the last-minute efforts of their players. Abel says it proves there are no quitters among the Wings, and Imlach says it means the Leafs have plenty of power that merely needs to be unleashed earlier.

Thursday's late-game action stirred up Detroit Olympia fans to such a fever pitch that about 20 of them decided to release some pent-up energy around the Toronto dressing room.

Imlach and assistant coach Frank (King) Clancy had to elbow and shove their way to the street through a gaggle of shouting, jabbing and swearing Red Wing partisans.

CLANCY BATTLES FANS

Clancy exchanged a few fists left and right hooks with one overly-enthusiastic fan before Imlach dragged him away.

The two Leaf masterminds fled by introducing themselves to a motorist and accepting a quick invitation for a get-away ride.

Imlach and Abel and other team officials came to Detroit Friday to attend an NHL luncheon, but the players remained away from the bright lights.

After a workout at the Olympia, the Leafs were whisked back to the Dearborn Inn, described as so quiet that even loud ties are banned. The Wings stayed at Toledo, Ohio, and did not skate.

A win in tonight's fourth game would give the Red Wings a three-quarter armlock on Lord Stanley's coveted cup and force the defending champion Leafs to take three in succession.

Abel says his Wings, who defeated the Leafs only three times during the regular season, their worst record against any club, were given a big lift by Thursday's climactic victory.

"And I tell them they can play better," said Abel. "I think they know they didn't play a particularly good game Thursday, with the exception of a few players."

'CAN DO BETTER'

"We'll be going into Saturday's game with the knowledge we can do better—and, boy, I hope it doesn't go to the last minute again."

The Wings built up a 3-0 first-period lead, then sagged while the Leafs scored one in the second and two in the third. But after McKenney's goal they got up off the ice and tried to vulcanize Johnny Bower in the Leaf goal until captain Delvecchio connected.

Howe described the winning play as similar to the one that beat Toronto in overtime Tuesday night at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"Maybe I was a little deeper back Tuesday, but it was the same sort of move. The puck came to me at the side and Bower came over to the edge of the cage. I saw Pete (Delvecchio) cutting to the left and got it over to his stick. Bower just stuck out his leg, but it was too late."

In Tuesday's game, Larry Jeffrey shot the winner on Bower's right side after a similar across-the-goal pass from Howe.

The Wings last won the cup in 1955, their fourth in six years. But Detroit's current Abel and classy left-winger Ted Lindsay heralded the beginning of bad times.

The maturing of players like Norm Ullman and Andre Pronovost, plus the steady work of old pros like Howe, Bill Gadsby, Marcel Pronovost, Delvecchio and Bert Olmstead have lifted the club back into the finals for the last two seasons. Last year Toronto won six five games, a feat which now is impossible.

TV CONTRACT SET

NEW YORK (AP)—The National Football League solidated television and radio rights to its 1964 and 1965 championship games to the Columbia Broadcasting System Friday for $1,000,000, a game. It is the highest price ever paid for the rights to a one-day sports event and approximately double the $626,000 paid for the 1963 game rights.

Eastern Allan Cup Final

Woodstock Clobbers Ottawa 10-1

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Prior to Friday's Eastern Canada Allan Cup final, Johnny Wilson, coach of Ottawa Montagnards, complained bitterly about the Woodstock arena.

But if the first two games in the best-of-seven series are any indication Wilson may not have to worry about playing in Woodstock again this year.

Woodstock Athletics fired five goals within a span of four minutes and five seconds and went on to wallop Montagnards 10-1 for their 14th victory in 19 playoff games and their 27th home-ice win in 29 starts this year. The Athletics, who opened the series Wednesday with an impressive 7-2 triumph, will carry a 2-0 lead in games when the series switches to Ottawa for the third and fourth contests Monday and Wednesday respectively.

The arena came under heavy fire from Wilson, former National Hockey League star with Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers, following Wood s t o c k's Wednesday triumph.

"I am disappointed in the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in letting us play in a rink like this," said the one-time "iron man" of the NHL. "For an Eastern Canada Allan Cup final there should be something better around."

MOVE CONSIDERED

Several days prior to the opening of the set there was some talk that the site of the playoffs might be shifted to neutral ice in either Kitchener or London but the arena here was considered too small for the Eastern Canada final. However, it was decided to play the first two games in Woodstock.

Gerry Striegle and defenceman Jack McIntyre spearheaded the Woodstock attack, each scoring two goals and three assists. McIntyre is on loan to Woodstock from Guelph Regals of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A league.

Roy Lang[illegible]air, Bobby Robinson, Gus Sullivan, Joe Caron and Ron Hergott were the other Woodstock goal scorers. Herself, Sullivan was valuable player in the OHA senior circuit, w as picked up from Galt Hornets for the series.

Andre Despard scored for Ottawa in the second period.

Referee Vic Munn of Montreal assessed 20 penalties including two majors and a game misconduct. Woodstock picked up 11 of the 18 minors handed out.

Bill Watson of Ottawa was tossed out of the game late in the first period for hitting Woodstock's Tommy Wilson across the head with his stick after the latter had dropped his gloves and stick. Watson received a minor, a major and the game misconduct.

Weston Dumps Waterloo 6-2

TORONTO (CP) — Weston Dodgers Friday dumped Waterloo Siskins 6-2 in the opening game of their Ontario Hockey Association Junior B best-of-seven final.

Jim Jago showed the way for the winners with a two-goal effort. Derek Brockie, Dave Parham, Dave Cullimore and Paul Laceby shared the rest.

Waterloo marksmen were Rosarre Palement and Warren Ferguson.

Second game of the series is scheduled for Waterloo today.

There's Nothing Below Yankees, Mets

Both Winless

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Nope, they haven't mixed up th standings of the two leagues. That "New York 0-3 .000" is the lowest reaches of the American League standings refers to the Yankees.

You'll find the Mets in their accustomed place in their propei league with an 0-3 record.

But the Yankees seem to be putting in a serious bid for the allegiance of New York baseball fans who lean towards the underdog. In the brief life of the 1964 season, they're compiling a file of hard-luck stories that Casey Stengel's hirelings would be proud of.

First they lost two days at Yankee Stadium because of rain. Then a disappointing crowd turned up Thursday to watch Whitey Ford, of all people wild-pitch the winning run home in an 11-inning 4-3 loss to Boston Red Sox.

They took the show on the road Friday and lost by the same score in the same inning at Baltimore as pinch - hitter Jerry Lumpe grounded through the drawn-in infield with the bases loaded. A two-base error by Phil Linz scored the play.

ORIOLES ARE FIRST

The victory, the Orioles' third without a setback, put them in first place, a half-game ahead of the Red Sox who won their second by a pow'r downing Chicago White Sox 4-1. Don Zimmer's pinch double and Earl Battey's run drove Minnesota from the unbeaten ranks as the Twins fell to Washington Senators 3-2.

Los Angeles Angels hammered Detroit Tigers 8-3 and Cleveland Indians overwhelmed Kansas City Athletics 6-4 in the other games played.

Like Ford the day before, Jim Bouton gamely tried to go all the way for the Yankees and nearly made it. He gave up eight runs in the second, third and fourth innings but Tom Tresh eventually tied it up by singling, home Mickey Mantle in the eighth.

In the 11th, Bouton yielded a single to Johnny Orsino and Linz put runners at second and third with his misplay. Brooks Robinson was intentionally walked and rookie Pete Mikkelsen went to the mound.

The first pitch he threw got a force at the plate on Jerry Adair before Snyder broke it up.

Rookie Tony Conigliaro hit one out of the park in his first appearance at Fenway Park and Dalton Jones, another freshman, tripled home another run with a drive that outfielder Lloyd Robinson lost in the sun in Boston's home opener, dedicated to the late President Kennedy.

LAMABE WINNER

Jack Lamabe, making only his third start and completing his first game in the majors, scattered five hits to nail down the victory.

The Senators, evening their record at 2-2, gave up home runs to Bob Allison and Bernie Allen but got one of their own from Bill Skowron before Zimmer came up with his big hit in the ninth with two on and two out. Battey dropped Zollo's throw to the plate as Willie Tasby Dick Phillips to score the winning run.

John Romano's two-run homer the fifth inning off Diego Segui and his run-scoring single in the seventh off Ted Bowsfield gave the Indians their margin but Jim Fregosi and Jim Kralick staggered all the way despite giving up three unearned runs.

The Angels jumped on Frank Lary for five runs in the first three innings, including a two-run homer by Albie Pearson, to tame the Tigers although winner Dean Chance needed relief when he yielded three straight singles in the sixth inning.

Willie Clouts Another; Has 4 For Four

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Even with their bats on their shoulders San Francisco Giants can overpower you.

Without even taking a swing at the ball, Chuck Hiller drove in the winning run Friday night as he walked on four straight pitches in the 10th inning with the bases loaded to give the Giants a 5-4 victory over St. Louis Cardinals. Jim Davenport, who scored the decisive run, had also walked.

It was a bleak night for Ron Taylor, the Cardinals' youthful relief pitcher from Leaside, Ont. He inherited the bases-loaded situation from Bobby Shantz with one out, fanned Jay Alou and then lost sight of the plata entirely.

Up deck at the finish was Willie Mays, whose fourth homer in as many games with two men on base could be the only really damaging blow among four safeties given up by the St. Louis relief hurler.

OUTLAST THE CUBS

The victory left the Giants half a game behind Philadelphia Phillies, who outlasted Chicago Cubs 10-8 in a battle of homers by their relief hurlers. Philadelphia is undefeated without a loss. San Francisco's record is 3-1.

In the other games, Cincinnati Reds trounced Los Angeles Dodgers 7-3, Milwaukee Braves shaded Houston Colts 3-2 and Pittsburgh Pirates shaded New York Mets 4-3.

St. Louis starter Roger Craig had a 3-0 lead and a no-hitter after five innings, driving in two runs with a double and scoring the third himself on Julian Javier's single. Then Hiller singled home again run and Mays unloaded for three more.

Hiller's error and a pair of singles then let up in the seventh inning, setting the stage for the extra-inning climax.

The Phillies only hit three home runs to the Cubs' five, but they got them in a cluster in the fifth inning to put together six runs. The big one was a three - run blast by starting pitcher Art Mahaffey, followed by consecutive clouts from Richie Allen and Roy Sievers.

THE HOMER RECORD

Billy Williams had two for the Cubs with Ron Santo, Lou Brock and Billy Cowan getting the other three. Between them, the clubs tied a major league record by hitting five homers in the same inning fifth. Johnny Klippstein took over from Mahaffey to gain credit for the victory. Dick Ellsworth was the loser.

Deron Johnson was mainly instrumental in handing the Dodgers their third straight defeat as he homered, doubled, singled, scored three runs and drove in two for the Reds. Joey Jay, an Dagama loser last season, went the distance as he held the Dodgers to six hits, including homers by Ron Fairly and Tommy Davis.

Frank Bolling, who hit only five homers last season, slugged two and singled home a run in his first three times at bat to give the Braves their winning margin over Houston. The victory went to Henk Fischer on a seven-hitter.

A ninth-inning single by Bill Mazeroski scored Willie Stargell and spoiled the official opening of the Mets' new $26,000,000 Shea Stadium, attended by 50,312 fans. The losers had to be consolation of ending 52 2-3 innings of shutout pitching against them by Pittsburgh's Bob Friend when they scored their three runs in the fourth inning.

Win Finals Opener 6-4

Picton Ints Defeat Lucan

By JACK FAWKES

PICTON — The Picton Intermediates came from behind in a three goal deficit to take a one game lead in the best of three finals for the OHA Intermediate "B" championship as they defeated a determined team from Lucan 6-4 here last night before the largest crowd of the season.

The Lucan Langfords are a hard skating outfit, they play clean, yet very fast hockey and are very seldom out of position. Their fore and back checking was terrific. They outshot Picton by 28-18 in the first two periods and were leading 3-0 going into the last frame.

It might have been the fact that Lieut. Col. William Mulberin and Major Harvey L. McFarland brought "Rocket" Richard into the game just as the last period was under way, it might have been the fact that Picton got their skating legs back, and Lucan lost a little of their speed, but Picton came roaring back with no less than six goals in the last period to win going away.

Lucan opened the scoring at the 11.50 mark of the first period, with Barry Hearn banging in a rebound from Max O'Neill, for the only score of the period. There were only seven minor penalties equally split in the first stanza.

Lucan fired two more in the second, one by Ron Aldis and one by Jim Cousineau at 4.30 and 11.00 respectively and things looked dark for the locals as they were skated clean off their feet by this fleet outfit.

Picton came awake in the last period, with Shaker Baker firing one at 1.26 setting Picton back on the right track. Lucan had the odd man, Jim Gurnsey and Larry Pero helped. A bullet shot from the blue line by Lionel Bolty at 2.15 took care of Picton's second goal with Roland Berve and Claude Schrader assisting.

Lucan's Ron Ryan, a five goal man in their last game against Forest scored an unassisted goal at the 8.33 mark and that was the last time Tom O'Halloran let one through.

Playing coach Davy Jones batted in a pass from Jim Guernsey at the 10.07 mark to bring Picton a little closer, and at the 12.57 mark Ron Hull took a goal mouth pass from Pug Kellar to fire the tying marker, and the crowd went wild.

Pug Kellar came roaring back at the 13.34 mark and fired passed Lucan goalie Wesse Ron Hull to put Picton that all important one goal up and the crowd once again went wild.

It remained for Davy Jones to bring them to their feet once more when he picked up the puck at his own blue line, outskated the defence, and fired one that had Keith Scarborough in the Lucan nets beaten all the way.

The series resumes at the Picton ice-Palace at 7.30 tonight and to those who missed this one, make it a point to attend Saturday's game. It will be the last game Picton will see this season, as Picton lost the toss (as usual) and the balance of the games will be played at Lucan, next weekend.

The entire game was so well officiated that only two penalty officials were called on to issue only seven minor penalties in the 60 minutes. Picton took the odd one at 4-3.

Referee Jimmy Lyons was a busy man after the game as most of the fans crowded around asking for his autograph. His good natured sly grin all papers put to him, especially those from the kids.

Turn Back L.A. Blades
Seals Win Western Title

SAN FRANCISCO (CP)—San Francisco Seals made Western Hockey League history Friday night, winning the league title for the second year in a row with a tight 4-3 victory over Los Angeles Blades in the sixth game of the best-of-seven series at the Easter Patrick Cup.

The victory gave the Seals the league title by four-games-to-two before a roaring hometown crowd of 11,229 fans, one of the biggest hockey crowds drawn to the Cow Palace all season.

Last year Seals beat Seattle Totems for the title.

Ray Cyr was the hero of the night with two Seal goals. The others were scored by Gerry Brisson and Bill Singleton.

Leo LaBine scored two of the Los Angeles goals and Willie O'Ree got the other. LaBine's last goal came at 11:32 in the third period to pull the Blades within a goal of tying the game, but they could not find the target after that.

FINISH FOURTH

San Francisco finished fourth in regular season play in the six-team league.

Blades played without the services of two star defencemen, Frank Arnett and Howie Young, the "bad boy" who came down from the National Hockey League late in the season.

Arnett was under indefinite suspension for protesting too vigorously the officiating of Referee Willie Papp in Wednesday's game at Los Angeles which the Blades took 8-3.

Young was out with muscular spasms in his back.

Set Dates For Tournament

Plans have been completed for the 10th annual Kingston Area Curlers bowling tournament, scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, May 9 and 10.

The tournament will be held at the Plaza Bowling Lanes, located in the shopping centre, Princess Street, Kingston, with 20 lanes available for the expected large number of curlers. Some 370 bowlers took part last year.

Teams consist of three men and three women bowlers and entry forms are available from Garth Bradshaw, R.R. 4, Belleville Charles Dion, North Victoria St., Tweed; Miss Ann Collins, Marmora; Miss E. Leeder, Marysville and Miss M. Farrell, Read, in this district. Entries should be admitted not later than Saturday, May 3 to these same people.

A number of trophies and prizes will be awarded for the best individual and team showings. Total prize money of at least $230 is anticipated with last year prizes valued at $440 were awarded.

ART INTEREST RISES

WINNIPEG (CP)—An Ontario artist said Friday that interest in Canadian art by Canadians has increased substantially. "People are becoming more and more conscious of the work of Canadian artists," Hilton Hassel of Port Credit, Ont., said in an interview at the opening of a one-week exhibition of his paintings.

Takes Severe Beating

Giardello Wins Squeaker

CLEVELAND (AP)—Middleweight boxing champion Joey Giardello won a split-decision victory over Argentina's Juan (Rocky) Rivero Friday but took a severe beating in the process.

Giardello, 33, who had not fought since winning the title from Dick Tiger Dec. 7, was hurt in the ninth round when Rivero tagged him with an overhand right.

Rivero, 26, carried the nontitle, overweight match most of the way, but was an easy target for left jabs and left hooks in the fourth, fifth and sixth rounds.

There were no knockdowns.

Pernell Roberts Not Happy With Role in 'Bonanza'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—It may be a "bonanza" to NBC and all those connected with the Sunday night western, but Pernell Roberts doesn't feel that way.

Roberts said his discontent is a member of the co-starring team that includes Ottawa-born Lorne Green, Dan Blocker and Michael Landon. The company has just completed its fifth season. Roberts has one more year to go under his contract and it can't expire too soon for him.

Roberts said his discontent started early. He tried out for Bonanza when he heard it was to be filmed in color; he figured NBC would make it a class show.

"They told me the four characters would be sharply defined, and the scripts carefully prepared," said Roberts. "None of this was put on paper. None of it was followed.

"What I objected to most was the objective of the show. There has been an obvious effort to play it safe, to make Bonanza a good family show that would offend no one and hit a consistent level of mediocrity."

HAS HIT MARK

He thinks the show has hit that mark with regularity. Over the last five years he has voiced his feelings in strong terms to the producers and the network. Sometimes he has evoked changes, sometimes not. Said he:

"I know they think I'm a troublemaker — Pernell cocks the boat," they said. Well, maybe I do rock the boat when I don't like the way it's sailing."

Roberts admitted Bonanza has brought him fame and riches. His comment:

"People say, 'Why worry? You can laugh all the way to the bank.' If I'm doing something I don't believe in, I would cry all the way to the bank. Money isn't that important to me.

"My needs are primarily artistic. Mainly I'm interested in my own peace of mind, in knowing who I am and what I am."

Lloyd Bochner Likes Canada But U.S. TV Lure Strong

By DAVE PIKE

TORONTO (CP)—There was a time when Lloyd Bochner, once one of Canadian television's busiest actors, really meant it when he swore he wanted to stay in Canada.

But four years ago he headed for Hollywood, and the comfortable career he has carved out for himself in U.S. TV since gives no indication that he intends to return to Toronto for some time, despite the "enormous affection I have for this country."

"After all, isn't it possible that one can reach a point when one feels his professional life is diminishing rather than expanding?" he asked, explaining his decision to slip southward.

"You have to breathe new air once in a while. I reached the point where I felt I was doing the same thing over and over again here."

But, there to tape a CBC-TV drama, he admitted he was happy to be back acting in the type of play that the ratings-oriented U.S. networks would be hesitant to touch with a 10-foot antenna.

Bochner will be seen later this season in Max Frisch's The Furious Philipp Hotz, a theatre-of-the-absurd play which takes up 35 minutes of a 90-minute double-bill Festival offering. The cast includes a Canadian actor who has become a producer in British films and theatre.

Bochner has spent the current season as a regular member of CBC-TV's Richard Boone anthology drama series, one of a number of quality series that won't be seen by the U.S. networks for a while.

DEFENDS SERIES

Bochner feels the series, despite script problems, often achieved a high level of quality and, because of its anthology and repertory-style format, deserved at least one more season to catch on.

Although the Boone series is doomed, Bochner has hopes a series of his own resulting from it. He starred in The Arena, a two-episode play produced within the series as a "spin-off" — pilot integrated within a regular series. While here, he said the series, in which he would star as a community-conscious district attorney with a taste for politics, had been shelved to sponsors for the fall season.

A Toronto native who got his age at a self-conscious 30, Bochner has appeared in two other series.

He co-starred with Rod Taylor in the 26-episode Hong Kong series, filmed in Hollywood and on location in 1960. He makes a point of noting that "it's still spoken of in the industry as one of the finest action-adventure series ever made and I still get fan mail from around the world where it's still showing."

In 1956, he was one of the panellists on CBC-TV's One of a Kind game show.

Because of his mature voice, he found himself performing on CBC Radio at the age of 10. He joined the navy for a couple of years at the age of 19 and upon his return obtained a University of Toronto degree in sociology. Then he headed for New York where he acted in such fondly remembered early live TV drama series as Studio One and Kraft Theatre, as well as performing in theatre stock productions. As TV began developing in Canada, he began gravitating toward Toronto.

PLAYED STRATFORD

Bochner acted at Stratford, Ont., during the first five years of the Shakespearean festival, and he refers to the opportunities it offered Canadian actors as "stunning, heady, intoxicating—just what we had been waiting for. The whole thing was like a dream. I'll never forget that opening night as long as I live."

In 1953, Bochner won the Canadian Council of Authors and STILL LIKES CANADA — Actor Lloyd Bochner, 39, and once one of Canada's busiest television actors, moved to Hollywood four years ago but still has an "enormous affection" for Canada. He spent last season with Richard Boone's anthology drama series and returned to Toronto briefly to play in the CBC-TV's The Furious Philipp Hotz, a theatre-of-the-absurd play.

Artists TV award for his Hamlet in a two-hour CBC-TV production.

It wasn't until the end of the 1950s that he began seriously thinking of trying Hollywood. "I'd never worked there before and I'd heard all the horrendous stories—that it was a cesspool of humanity and so on. But I decided to get my feet wet and went and, besides learning a great deal about the film business, the friends I made remain my friends today."

He appeared in only one movie, Drums of Africa, but today is associated with "some people in Hollywood and we hope to produce some feature films." His personal ambition is to produce and direct.

California-tanned and as polished as ever, Bochner, married with three children, feels his four years in Hollywood, during which he has appeared in such series as Dr. Kildare and The Twilight Zone, have given him a strong sense of self-confidence he might not have been able to cultivate in Canada.

WATCHING EFFORTS

OTTAWA (CP)—Health Minister Judy LaMarsh said the health department is keeping a close eye on efforts aimed at reducing the noxious gases from internal combustion engines, and Canada expects to benefit from research done by United States authorities on this problem. She was replying to Percy Noble (PC—Rocky North), who said air pollution by vehicular traffic is becoming an increasing health hazard.

Will Inoculate Guards Against Yellow Fever

PICTON — Inoculations against Yellow Fever will be given April 22 to about 750 officers and men of the 1st Battalion, The Canadian Guards at Camp Picton, Ont.

This special immunization program is part of the preparations for the unit's new United Nations standby role.

All syringes and needles required for the immunization will be sterilized and prepared at the Canadian Forces Hospital, Kingston.

The inoculations will be given by two National Health and Welfare doctors, Dr. D. MacRae of Malton and Dr. E. W. Dow of Trenton.

On March 16 the 1st Battalion, The Canadian Guards was designated the main component of the Canadian Army standby Battalion group to be held ready in Canada for possible United Nations commitment.

They replaced 1e Batallion, Royal 22e Regiment, on standby duty after that unit was sent to Cyprus early in March on U.N. peace - keeping duty.

From April 20 to May 15 the 1st Battalion, The Canadian Guards will undergo aircraft familiarization training at RCAF Station, Trenton.

This will include loading troops, equipment, supplies, jeeps and other vehicles onto RCAF Yukon aircraft.

During the same period the unit will also train in internal security duties of the type likely to be required of a U.N. force.

Successful Living

Small Services of Equal Importance to Larger Ones

DEAR DORIS — I wanted to share this with your readers. It is most thought-provoking!

WHERE?

"Father, where shall I work today?"
And my love flowed warm and free.
Then He pointed me toward a tiny spot
And said, "Tend that for me."
I answered quickly, "Oh no, not that!
Why, no one would ever see,
No matter how well my work was done
In that little place for Thee."
And the word he spoke, it was not stern,
He answered me tenderly:
"Ah, little one, search that heart of thine;
Art thou working for them or Me?
Nazareth was a little place,
And so was Galilee!" — Anon.

DORIS CLARK

E.J.B.

DEAR E.J.B. — Thank you. It reminds me of Browning's "Pippa Passes", in which Pippa is made to sing a little song which in part says:

"All service ranks the same with God:
. . . there is no last nor first."

DEAR DORIS — What is psychotherapy? I read an article which prescribed this to help one's sense of values. Now if there's anyone with a poor sense of values, it's me.

I have four healthy children, a good husband, good friends. But — why is it I can't meet people in a public place, or sit in close contact conversation-wise, or playing cards, that I don't start to feel nervous and hot — then it shows — then I'm embarrassed that it shows!

I'd like to do something about my inability to "swing," mostly because my family is getting along now and it means a lot to young people to have parents who are really acceptable. — BACKWARD ABOUT COMING FORWARD.

DEAR BACKWARD — Psychotherapy is a technique used by psythiatrists and social workers in an effort to help people understand themselves.

Sometimes a timid or fearful person got like that away back when. Perhaps some devastating circumstance left its scar on personality. An adult look at what caused his fearfulness can help him to a more mature approach. Through discussion and encouragement a professional person tries to bring this about.

Even a little thinking and reading on your own can be helpful — and you are on your way to improvement when you take pen in hand to seek help. I am sending you reading on Overcoming Shyness, and on Blushing. (Both available to other readers, for ten cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

(Doris, who has a master's degree in social work, has helped thousands to more successful living. Write to her; and remember that stamped envelope!)

Using Blood From Dead Not Practical

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Transfusions using blood from dead persons are not practical in Canada although they have been made in Europe, delegates decided Friday at the annual meeting of the Ontario division of the Red Cross.

The meeting was told that one factor working against the practice is the fact that such transfusions are reprehensible to most people. Another is that by the time a skilled transfusion team could reach the source of blood, it would be useless for transfusion.

The blood donor service conducted by the Red Cross was one of the chief topics of discussion at the two-day annual meeting of the Ontario division, which ended Friday.

Delegates were told that drownings in Ontario have reached alarming proportions. Adult education could help cut the number of water fatalities.

BLAMES FATHERS

Warren F. Clayson, chairman of the water safety service committee, said fathers were responsible to a large extent for a number of water accidents because they considered themselves indestructible and not at the mercy of the elements.

For the first time since 1950, he said, drownings showed a marked increase in 1953 with about 95 more deaths than in previous years.

J. E. M. Wilson, national president of the Red Cross Society, told delegates that the charity dollar is a fickle dollar."

Urging members to co-operate with all other charitable organizations and not to be too quick to brag about the work of the society, he said "there are many who will seek out and adopt the lightest show of overlapping in our groups as an excuse for reducing their contributions . . .

"Even if we know we are the best people in the world and we do the best job, it would be better sometimes if we did not let other people know that we do it."

WEIGHTY COCONUT

The double coconut, a single-seeded fruit which may weigh 50 pounds, has the largest seed in the world.

Govt. Scoring Some Goals Says Pearson

Admits Mistakes Made In First Year of Office

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson candidly admitted Sunday night that his minority Liberal government started off by trying to do too much too quickly and has made mistakes in its first year of office.

However, he added in hockey language:

"If you play a defensive game . . . you are not likely to get too many penalties, but you are certainly not going to score any goals.

"We are not playing a defensive game in this government. I think we are scoring some goals."

In a fireside interview in his office, broadcast by the CBC's English- and French-language radio and television networks, he counted what he considered the scoring highlights, including an imminent agreement of a revised pension plan.

"We are on the point, I believe, of bringing into effect a nation - wide contributory pension scheme which will . . . result in every Canadian getting roughly one-quarter of his salary at retirement.

"I think this is putting Canada on a new course and it is a new course which I think is going to be helpful to the people of Canada."

MAY MARK RETURN

Mr. Pearson, who suggested the recent pension developments may be a turning point in the federal government's relations with the provinces, also indicated Ottawa will be giving them greater access to the personal income tax.

In social security, he said he

Will Unveil Third Draft On Pensions

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson, hopeful of a turning point in federal-provincial relations in pensions and fiscal matters, planned to unveil today the third version of the Canada Pension Plan in nine months.

He is also expected to announce in the Commons (at its 2:30 p.m. EST opening) a basic tax deal for the province next year.

Mr. Pearson said Sunday night the question of how to devise a pension scheme whose provisions would be applicable to all Canadians and how Ottawa could give the provinces greater access to the personal income tax and other hared revenues has been under discussion in the last week.

Informants have indicated the pension plan settlement, reached after intensive behind-the-scenes negotiations, involves a compromise between Premier Lesage's Quebec pension plan and the revised Canada pension bill now before the Commons.

Sources suggested the maximum pension benefit after 10 years is likely to be about $100 a month, mid-way between the federal plan's $75 and the Quebec plan's $125.

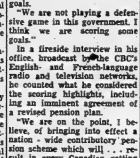
New Millionaire in Mine Boom Expects Biggest Deal Today

TIMMINS (CP)—A 33-year-old real estate man, who is reported to have parlayed $7,000 investment into a $2,000,000 fortune, says today is the day he will make his "biggest deal."

Ned Bragagnolo, the son of poor Italian immigrants, took the first step toward his spectacular fortune last November when he purchased 200 claims around property here where the New York-based Texas Gulf Sulphur Company recently hit one of Canada's biggest copper-all-ver-zinc strikes.

News of the strike began filtering out early in last week, turning the Timmins area into a circus of prospectors and investors, and rocking brokerage houses and stock exchanges across the country.



Mr. Bragagnolo was besieged by mining companies offering to buy his claims and various deals have netted him cash and blocks of stock in the companies he dealt with.

"I expect to make my biggest deal on Monday," he said.

Mr. Bragagnolo said he still doesn't know how much money he has made in the deals. "It's ironic that the mines killed my father and made me a fortune."

His father died from silicosis, a respiratory desease common among miners, when Ned was 12.

After the death of his father, his mother was left with three sons to support on a small pension.

NED BRAGAGNOLO

"I came from a poor family. We never starved or anything, but after dad died we had to hustle to make ends meet."

His mother died 10 years later.

Mr. Bragagnolo, who has sold 50 of his 220 claims so far, said he staked his claims after seeing Texas Gulf helicopters passing his house "all the time." His original investment was estimated at $7,000.

The new millionaire, who said Saturday that the new wealth won't change his life, could not be reached for comment Sunday.

The Bragagnolos and their three children are planning a trip when the current excitement settles down. One stop will probably be his parents' native northern Italy.

He says he'll still wash his own car and cut his own grass, but his wife, Sylvia, will have everything she needs.

Hope To Break Log Jam

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Major moves in the Commons today could break a legislative log jam which has prevented adoption of any new government-sponsored statutes since the session's start Feb. 18.

Chief items on the agenda are, in order, a statement by Prime Minister Pearson on revisions in the Canada Pension Plan and adoption of proposed income changes on a six-week trial basis.

In the day's main debating period the government will call for the first of the session's six supply motions. Open for debate for two days, it gives opposition groups an opportunity to move non-confidence motions on specific subjects, and to raise grievances.

Parliamentary observers say that if the government secures full agreement among all provinces—including Quebec and Ontario—on pensions and other matters, it might well mean an end to extended bickering in the House.

The suggested rule changes are designed to make the daily question period more efficient, to expedite adoption of routine but frequently time-consuming motions calling for publication of reports, and to provide a new vehicle for debating urgent problems.

DEBATE POSTPONED

The first debate was to have been Friday but was postponed, apparently on the request of Opposition Leader Diefenbaker who was in Western Canada.

The urgency debates would come at the end of the regular night sittings on Monday, Tuesdays and Thursday. Three 10-minute periods would be added to discuss urgent matters which MPs feel they have not been given an opportunity sufficiently in the question periods.

There appeared to be general agreement to adopt the new rules on a trial basis until the end of May. In the meantime the procedure and organization committee headed by Speaker Alan Macnaughton will continue working on other parliamentary reforms.

The proposed urgency debates follow practice in the British House of Commons where a motion is given each evening is debatable. In Ottawa, except in extraordinary circumstances, the speaker adjourns the House nightly at 10 p.m.—and at 6 o'clock on Wednesday's and Fridays—without debate.

Puzzle Begins To Take Shape

By ROBERT RICE

MONTREAL (CP) — Like a massive jigsaw puzzle, the bits and pieces are beginning to fall in place in a new blueprint for labor peace in the turbulent Great Lakes shipping industry. Labor sources see an over-all plan taking shape to clean up lawlessness and corruption exposed by the Senate committee in the Seafarers' International Union of Canada.

But the plan has so many interlocking pieces it could be knocked for a loop—upsetting labor peace on both sides of the United States and straining the unity of North America labor.

The marine union trustees, appointed by the federal government, have the power to wield a new broom in the SIU, say they need time and the co-operation of organized labor to put their long-range program into effect.

Labor Congress officials expect strong criticism in Parliament and within labor ranks, the Canadian Labor Congress will stand behind the trustees at its major convention this week, sources say.

Behind-the-scenes attempts to mobilize convention opposition to the trustees because of their

Sell 22 Million Shares in 2 Hours On Mad Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO (CP) — Speculators continued to ignore warnings from the experts today and sent the Toronto stock market flying toward another day's record trading.

Despite a warning from Lt.-Gen. Howard Graham, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, that enthusiasm for speculative mining stocks could be turning to hysteria, a total of more than 22,500,000 shares changed hands by noon EST, after only two hours trading.

By comparison, trading at the same time Friday, when the record for total day's business was set, was 16,722,000 shares.

The mad pace of trading started with the 10 a.m. opening and continued unabated.

"The public's got the gambling fever and what will happen is anyone's guess," said one trader on the floor of the exchange. Some traders were hardly able to speak, with their voices hoarse from shouting orders.

"This is worse than Friday was ever thought to be," another said.

"The volume is fantastic, but eventually the cool light of reason will win out," said one veteran analyst. "Only one speculator in 10 will win."

Brokerage houses and the Exchange were straining to the limit of their resources to try to meet the unprecedented rush.

"I have been wondering whether the Exchange can handle this sort of thing," said one harried broker.

The rush for shares of speculative mining companies was sparked by a major zinc-copper and silver strike by Texas Gulf Sulphur Company near Timmins.

One rumor swept Toronto's financial district that the company had made another big find within a few miles of its first success, but the report was quickly discounted by an official of Texas Gulf's head office in New York.

A broker said, however, the rumor undoubtedly was a factor in the frantic excitement being felt by speculators.

CLC Head Calls on Unions To Fight for United Canada

MONTREAL (CP)—The Canadian trade union movement was urged today to rally behind a fight to preserve Canada as a united country against the separatist ideas of "petty politicians and narrow-minded fanatics."

The call came from Claude Jodoin, Montreal-born president of the 1,100,000-member Canadian Labor Congress, in the keynote speech at the opening session of the CLC's week-long policy convention here.

"It is time for those of us who believe in a strong and united Canada to speak out. It is typical of some destructive elements that they talk with loud voices. We must not let ourselves be fooled by this.

"It is time to put these narrow-minded purveyors of selfish objectives in their place. It is time to speak and act as citizens of a vast and beautiful country and to show each other the deepest respect."

Mr. Jodoin also dealt with the present economic situation, the challenge of industrial change, social and labor legislation and international affairs.

His address was made available to the press in advance of delivery.

About 1,600 delegates from some 91 international and 13 national unions in Canada are attending the so-called "Parliament of Labor" at which trade unionists hammer out policy for the next two years on the economic, legislative and social scene.

Mr. Jodoin said a sense of national unity can never be achieved until the "great disparities" between regions are reduced.

He criticized the federal government for implying that unemployment was not as bad as it used to be—that current levels could be considered almost normal.

He fired a blast at criticism at industry for not providing more in-plant training to prepare workers for the changing needs of modern technology.

Phouma Asked To Return

By REUTERS NEWS AGENCY

Laotian Army leaders who seized power in a dawn coup Sunday in Vientiane were reported today to have asked deposed neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma to head a new government.

Laotion sources in Bangkok, Thailand, said the new government would consist of rightists and neutralists. The pro-Communist faction of the former Souvanna coalition would be excluded.

Diplomatic sources in Saigon, South Viet Nam, confirmed Souvanna had been released. The sources also said Souvanna had been requested to resume leadership of the nation and was considering the matter.

Meanwhile, Laos was reported calm in the wake of the right wing coup by Gen. Kouprasith Abhay. But the situation in the war-torn southeast Asian kingdom remained confused.

Vientiane radio said the reasons for the coup were that Souvanna had failed to solve the economic, political and military problems of the country.

TURNS OVER POWER

Radio Vientiane Monday said Prince Souvanna turned over power to "The Revolutionary Committee of the National Army" headed by Kouprasith.

Representatives of the International Control Commission, set up to supervise a cease-fire agreement between the neutralists, right-wing, and pro-Communists factions in the country, were to meet today with Kouprasith, according to diplomatic sources.

In 1962 the Geneva conference, under the co-chairmanship of Britain and Russia, agreed to guarantee the neutrality of Laos. A commission composed of India, Canada and Poland was sent to Laos to supervise the peace.

Will Use Force 'If Needed' In Neutral Region

Makarios Has Greeks Remove Fortified Post

By CLARE McDERMOTT

CP from AP-Reuters

NICOSIA (Reuters) — United Nations Mediator Sakari Tuomioja of Finland today prepared to renew talks with Cypriot leaders here following an agreement giving UN troops sole responsibility for keeping the peace around Nicosia's Ledra Palace Hotel.

The hotel was the scene of skirmishes between Britons and Cypriots last week.

The agreement, which goes into effect Tuesday, was reached Sunday night by UN Commander Lt.-Gen. Prem Singh Gyani in talks with President Archbishop Makarios and contacts with Turkish - Cypriot leaders.

A Turkish-Cypriot spokesman declined immediate comment on the agreement which would mean the removal of strangly fortified posts manned by Turks and Greeks and give the UN troops the right to use "armed force if needed" to maintain peace in the one square mile area.

The area takes in what now is the "green line" neutral area running between the hotel and Irish Bridge near the British high commission where shooting incidents have been frequent.

The UN and Cyprus government announcement said all Greek and Turkish posts would be removed with the exception of two officials at police stations.

UN MAY TAKE OVER

The UN would be free to take over any evacuated posts or put up new ones.

The UN statement on its right to use armed force apparently differed from the government statement by providing for force in the event of "firing from either side across the cease-fire line."

Meanwhile, Finnish diplomat Tuomioja said he planned talks with leaders of the Greek and Turkish - Cypriot communities and would "digest my impressions from Ankara" before paying his first official visit to Athens next Sunday.

Some 200 Irish troops arrived here Sunday in three planes to join the UN peace force as scat-

To Cut Nuclear Output

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson announced today a new reduction in the production of nuclear explosive materials and said Soviet Premier Khrushchev has indicated that he too "intends to make a move in this same direction."

Johnson said that the substantial reduction in the output of enriched uranium will be carried out over a four - year period.

'Secret' Plans to Tie up Traffic At World's Fair Opening Bared

NEW YORK (AP)—Plans for civil rights demonstrations on opening day of the World's Fair Wednesday now are reported to include a scheme to tie up most of the city's transportation system—subways, commuter trains and highway travel.

The "secret" plans, reported by newspapers today, could play havoc with travel in a city of 000,000 swelled by thousands of fair visitors.

President Johnson is scheduled to be one of those opening day visitors and may get caught in the transportation snarl, one civil rights leader said.

The tactics being considered include pulling emergency cords on fair - bound trains, jamming ticket lines — without buying tickets — at fair entrances, or picketing the gates to dissuade fair visitors from entering.

Queens District Attorney Frank O'Connor prepared to seek a temporary restraining order today against any traffic snarl at the fairgrounds. He also invited demonstration leaders to meet with him today to discuss their highway-jam threat.

As the reported demonstration plans grew — from an auto "stall-in" on access roads to fair to sit-ins, lie-ins and alike on other major highways, bridges and in tunnels through out the city — reverberations sounded in Congress. And former president Truman said the "stall-in" would be "damn foolish."

"They'll make a damn sight more enemies than friends by doing a thing like this," said Truman, who arrived in New York Sunday to make a television film about his administration.

Supporters and opponents of the civil rights bill in the Senate agreed that the public harrassment have a maximum adverse effect on chances of passing the legislation.

Said Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (Dem. Minn.), floor manager for the House-passed bill: "We'll be hearing from people who will be disgusted and outraged."

"I don't think civil wrongs help the cause of civil rights," Humphrey added.

Senator Richard B. Russell, Georgia Democrat who is quarterbacking forces opposed to the bill, said in a separate interview that its passage under threat of violence and disobedience "would put us in the category of a banana republic."

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., Negro Democrat from Harlem, said in a taped television interview broadcast Sunday that he did not think the New York demonstrations would alienate civil rights supporters.

Equipment Built in City Being Tested for Vessel To Be Launched Saturday

Stephens-Adamson erection crews from Belleville are testing today the 8-A bulk self unloading equipment of the largest ocean-going self-unloading ship ever built on the great lakes. The ship, to be christened the "Cape Breton Miner" next Saturday by Mrs. John Roberts, wife of the premier of Ontario, is being built in Port Weller Dry-Docks, a subsidiary of Upper Lakes Shipping Ltd. for Upper Lakes shipping. Overall length of the ship is 680 feet, displacement is 22,000 tons and the ship will carry 19,000 tons cargo.

The S-A self - unloading equipment now being tested is designed to unload heavy materials, such as stone or pelletized iron ore, at the rate of about 3,000 tons per hour. When the ship is carrying coal, however, maximum unloading rate drops to about 2,100 tons per hour, because the coal is lighter and volume, rather than power, limits the capacity of the equipment.

The self unloading equipment, worth about a million dollars, consists of two conveyor belts running under the hold and through the engine room, to the stern of the ship. These two conveyors empty onto a central elevating conveyor, which carries through the upper section of the engine room and forward to a 350-foot boom-carried conveyor, which can dump the load to either side of the ship. The boom can be elevated 15 degrees, lifting the outer end of the conveyor about 80 feet above the unloading site. The equipment was designed in Belleville in cooperation with marine architects in Montreal and Cleveland and built in Belleville.

Stephens Adamson is also making self-unloading equipment for an Upper Lakes ship, including a sister ship to the Cape Breton Miner which will be 20 feet longer than the original.

During the christening and commissioning ceremony next Saturday, Premier Robarts of Ontario will be the guest speaker. Gordon Lewis, vice-president of Stephen-Adamson and Hugh Young, the firm's sales manager, will also be present during the ceremonies.

Crew Member Dead, 11 Ill From Typhoid

NEW YORK (AP)—One man died and 11 others were reported ill with a typhoid infection that swept the crew of a Norwegian freighter in the Atlantic Ocean Sunday, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

The liner France went to the assistance of the freighter and the crew's doctor went aboard. The master of the freighter, the Margarita, based in Grimstad, Norway, was reported among the ill.

The France radioed to a coast guard cutter: "Furnished information. Have given supplies and . . . instructions."

Paratyphoid engrosses a number of typhoid - like infections that are often caused by eating contaminated food.

The dead member of the crew was the ship's 60-year-old carpenter. His name was not given.

The France, eastbound from New York, and the 516 - foot Margarita, headed for the St. Lawrence River ports, continued on their voyages. Freighters the size of the Margarita generally carry a crew of about 40, the coast guard said.

Guerrillas Strike Boldly Near Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — Communist guerrillas struck boldly within 16 miles of Saigon Sunday while U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk conferred with officials on the course of the war in South Viet Nam.

Two companies of Viet Cong attacked an outpost on the capital's outskirts with mortars and heavy machine guns in one of a series of attacks launched apparently to throw the U.S.-supported government forces off balance in four provinces south of here.

The first hint of big trouble came when five outposts around Ba Tri in the Mekong River delta's Kien Hoa province reported they were under heavy Viet Cong attack.

Later, a Communist company slipped to within 800 yards of a U.S. military compound at My Tho city, 50 miles southwest of Saigon. Another company then launched attacks against Can Tho Hoa post on the main highway between Saigon and Can Tho. Can Tho is about 100 miles southwest of Saigon. The attack nearest to Saigon followed these.

Extensive Program of New Street Lighting Scheduled

The city again this year will carry out an extensive program of new street light installation with a total of 28 streets or street sections scheduled to get new lights.

Many of the streets to get new lights are in the so-called "older" section of the city, but several streets in the Hillcrest area — West Street, Byron Street and Centre Seventh — are now high on the priority list for light installation.

Other streets with high priority include Foster Ave. from St. Paul Street north to East Bridge Street, Burnham Street from Dundas to Bridge, Chatham from Bridge to Pine; Lingham from Victoria to Emily and McDonald from Pine to Emily.

FOUR NEW ONES

Victoria Street is also on the list for new lights as is Dundas Street East, from Front St. eastward, Pinnacle from Street from Wellington Street to Highland Avenue and on Hillcrest from Bleecker St. to Moira.

Also scheduled for this year although fairly well down on the priority list are lights for North Park St., Pringle Ave., Prince of Wales Drive, Parkdale Ave. and Shamrock Road.

Two new lights have been approved for Turnbull Street, once ov two lights are okayed for South Bellleu Terrace and one for Southview and also new lights on Cameron Street.

WILL CONTINUE PROGRAM

This year's new light installation program is a continuation of that commenced several years ago which saw newly-opened residential streets get the outskirts of the city get lights.

With this work now nearly completed the new lights' program for the past couple of years is swinging back to the central part of the city.

The intention of council is for the street lighting program to continue until all sections of the city have been brought up to modern standards.

General Rate For Thurlow Up .88 Mill

The Thurlow township general rate for 1964 is up very slightly from the rate which applied in 1963. This year's rate was set at a council meeting last week.

Total general rates for the year including rates for township and county purposes and high school, but not for elementary school, are residential and farm: 49.46 mills and commercial and industrial 55.96 mills. These rates are increased from the 1963 rates by .86 mills for residential and farm and 90 mills for commercial and industrial.

The rate for County purposes is 14.23 mills, an increase of .25 mills from 1963.

Township purposes rates for 1964 are 13.96 mills residential and farm and 18.43 mills commercial and industrial — an increase of 1.04 mills and 2.02 mills respectively. The high school rates are reduced to residential and farm 15.89 mills and commercial and industrial 17.23 mills from the 1963 rates of 18.00 mills and 20.00 mills respectively.

Elementary school rates are residential and farm U.S.S. 12.76 Foxboro, U.S.S. 22/8 Sidney-Thurlow, S.S. No. 2 Point Anne and the South Thurlow School area. Either slight increases were required for the other sections or the rates remained the same as in 1963.

The total tax levy for 1964 will be about $413,787.14 up about $2,750, from the $411,036.15 last year.

Boy Carried 3,000 Feet in Air by Balloon

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—A 12 - year - old boy, dangling from a rope, was carried to a height of 3,000 feet by a balloon Saturday before the pilot realized the youngster was in flight.

The pilot, William Berry, 36, of Corte Madera, then put the hot-air balloon into a rapid descent and landed the boy safely.

The lad, Danny Nowell, of Tennessee Valley, had volunteered with others to hang onto restraining ropes while the pilot was ready for his ascent.

Berry gave the signal. All cast the lines away except young Nowell. He had wrapped his rope around his left wrist.

Berry, sitting in the balloon basket, could not see Nowell dangling below him.

At a height of 3,000 feet Berry sensed that something was amiss.

He saw the boy and at once descended gently, landing in a back yard two miles from the launching.

ing white scarves for identification were keeping a tight guard on Vientiane.

Troops and armed police Sunday turned away correspondents attempting to reach Souvanna's home. Some shooting was reported in Vientiane but the extent of casualties was unknown.

LAOTIAN 'DISTURBED'

The British foreign office in London said Britain was "disturbed" by the coup because it regarded as "contrary to the spirit" of the 1962 Geneva conference agreements which neutralized Laos.

The right-wing coup, which came after skirmishing with neutralist forces, followed by a day Prince Souvanna's announced intention to resign because the country's political factions had failed to resolve differences.

The Associated Press gave this version of the coup:

It took place shortly after Souvanna attended a meeting attended by him and the two other leaders of the coalition, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan and Prince Souphanouvong, leader of the pro - Communist Pathet Lao.

Souvanna announced that the talks had failed to bring accord and that he would ask King Savang Vatthana to name a new premier.

About 4 a.m., right-wing soldiers surrounded the residence of Souvanna.

ANNOUNCES PLAN

Kouprasith at first announced that he was forming a 13-man "military executive committee" to rule Laos with himself as committee president.

In a brief speech to a few people clustered outside the defence ministry, Kouprasith said the military had seized power because Souvanna's regime had failed in its mission to establish peace in Laos. He received lukewarm applause.

When the three ICC commissioners approached Souvanna's residence, he shouted from the balcony: "You cannot enter here unless you get an authorization from Gen. Kouprasith or Gen. Siho, who are the two leaders of the new government."

The commissioners said they had tried to see Kouprasith but were told he had gone to Luang Prabang to report to the king.

Negro Stoning Rhodesian Bus Fatally Wounded

By BRIAN CHARLESWORTH

SALISBURY (Reuters) — A Negro died in hospital during the night after being hit by a missile as he stoned a bus at Bulawayo about 270 miles from this Southern Rhodesian capital, police reported today.

A police spokesman said another man who was shot ran away.

Police opened fire when Negroes started to stop throwing stones at the bus, which was travelling through a Negro township outside the city.

The spokesman said there were more incidents of intimidation in Salisbury's Negro township this morning as African groups tried to force people to stay away from work.

Sunday was the fourth day of disturbances since the all-white government ordered the restriction of Negro leader Joshua Nkomo and three leading members of his people's caretaker council to a remote camp near the Mozambique border.

Story of 1877 Riot in City Told Members

The story of the Belleville Riot of 1877 was one of the topics featured at the April meeting of the Hastings County Historical Society.

About 70 members attended the meeting held in the Corby Library Auditorium, Belleville.

According to Gerald Boyce, the Strike of 1877 began on the Grand Trunk Railway when that company tried to reduce the number of engineers and firemen. The production was felt especially at Belleville, where the dismissed workers, along with workers in other key points such as Brockville, Kingston, Stratford.

Two snowplows were derailed, one at each end of the yard, and for almost a week no train passed through Belleville.

Mayor W. A. Foster and the City Magistrates were very concerned and on the 20th and 18th battalions were called out. They proved unable to open the main line and so almost all the members of the Queen's Own Rifles from Toronto were sent to quell the riot and "keep the Grand Trunk's main line.

The Grand Trunk station (the present C.N.R. station on Front) was the scene of violence, but finally the riot was ended and the troops returned to Toronto.

The strike showed the incompetence of the Belleville Police Department at that time. Fear prior to the strike the chief and senior sergeants were dismissed, two men claimed to be chief at the same time, and finally the police force was disbanded when books were stolen from the police chief's desk.

Both the 15th and 49th battalions fared better in Mr. Boyce's summary, and the city fathers were complimented by Belleville people for their conduct in the unfortunate mode by John J. Wood, for many years of the union licensed, or ship engineer division.

Mr. Wood testified at the four-hour hearing that he quit as head of the engineers in 1961 following differences with the then president of the union, Hal Banks. He intended to sail as an engineer, following up opposition to the SIU boss.

However, Mr. Wood never sailed again as he was promptly expelled from the SIU at a union trial board.

Canadian Arbitration named by the SIU to the position following publication of the inquiry report in Ottawa that the trial board was justified in expelling Mr. Wood on the ground that his actions were anti-union and eventually to destroy the union.

SIU MADE MISTAKE

However, he said the SIU board made a mistake in finding Mr. Wood guilty of a charge of violating the constitution by acting as a spy for shipping companies.

He criticized Mr. Wood for not appearing at his union trial and said the 49-year-old second engineer did not substantiate his excuses that he would not receive a fair trial or might be subject to personal violence if he appeared at the SIU hall.

Mr. Banks was fired by the Board of Arbitration Trustees in March. The Norris' report on labor violence in the Great Lakes said Mr. Banks ran rigged union trials and was responsible for other union failings.

Mr. Wood, a former National Association of Marine Engineers official, who was a key figure in persuading Great Lakes engineers to switch to the SIU in 1958, had applied for reinstatement not only as a union member but as vice-president of the licensed division.

Appeal Board Rules Against Reinstatement

By STRAUN MATHESON

MONTREAL (CP) — Commodore O. C. S. Robertson, head of the Canadian Arbitration Board of Canada (Inad.) appeal board, ruled Saturday against a bid for reinstatement in the union made by John J. Wood, former chief engineer of the union's licensed, or ship engineer division.

Mr. Wood testified at the four-hour hearing that he quit as head of the engineers in 1961 following differences with the then president of the union, Hal Banks. He intended to sail as an engineer, following up opposition to the SIU boss.

BELLEVILLE FIREFIGHTERS BOnfire evening, Tonight, at 8 p.m., New Moose Hall, 346 Front Street. O7-er-m-tf

Firemen Busy Controlling Grass Fires

City firemen had a knockdown dragged-out weekend trying to keep up with grass fires which were starting all over the city and rural areas.

From Saturday afternoon until Sunday evening firemen put out 15 grass and rubbish fires.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said this morning "If people were held responsible for setting these fires, the department would receive less calls and there would be less damage."

The department answered four alarms on Saturday, the first one to the home of J. Cole at R. R. 5, Belleville, to attend an overheated stove and stove pipes.

Children playing with fire crackers set fire to a roof at 120 George Street causing a small amount of damage. A grass fire which started along a CNR right-of-way on the second of Tyendinaga set fire to property owned by J. Kirk. High winds fanned the fire out of control and threatened to set fire to a barn. Belleville firemen were able to bring the fire under control a few feet from the building.

Saturday evening the department was called to the residence of F. Armstrong on East Moira Street, where a grass fire was raging out of control. A short time after firemen left the scene, the blaze flared again and the department had to return to the scene.

On Sunday firemen were called three times to Carrying Place where a brush fire was threatening to set fire to a nearby woods.

Firemen were also called to grass and rubbish fires at Bay Drive, Belleville Auto Electric, Edgehill Road, R. R. 4 Belleville, Humewood Drive, East Moira Street, Herchimer and Pine streets and York Road.

FOG? — NO, SMOKE, AND LOTS OF IT as fire rages in brush along roadway at Carrying Place threatening a nearby woods. Firemen from Belleville and Trenton battled the fire Saturday night and again Sunday morning. Cause is unknown as yet.

Expects Russia To Seek Accord With Free Lands

NEW YORK (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Richard A. Butler predicted that while the next decade will be laden with cold war tension, the Soviet-Chinese dispute will impel the Russians "to take more interest in as understanding with the West."

Butler presented his views on world affairs in an interview with AP correspondent Eddy Gilmore, filmed in London for showing today at the annual meeting of The Associated Press.

The 61-year-old foreign secretary said he is convinced the myth of Communist world solidarity has been destroyed by the Moscow - Peking squabble. He predicted the Soviet Union and the West would find common ground in some areas, notably disarmament.

Butler said that for the next 'O' years the main areas of tension in the world would be in South Asia, South Africa and Latin America.

Butler dwelt at length on disruption of the Communist world in the wake of the Soviet-Chinese dispute which he said "in simple English means Chinese-Soviet rivalry." The quarrel, he said, is occupying much of Moscow's time "and that in itself probably quite a good thing."

Car Hits Ditch

TRENTON — Trenton has been accident free since April 16. At Brighton, the Provincial Police reported on Saturday, James Booth of 52 Reid Street, rolled his car into the ditch near Stockdale, escaping injury; damage to the car was set at $300. At 11 p.m., Saturday, a car owned and driven by George Desrosiers of RCAF Station Trenton, rolled over in the ditch on Highway 401, near Brighton. The small, English-made car was damaged to the extent of $400. Mr. Desrosiers was streated in the emergency ward at Trenton hospital for minor injuries.

Equalization Formula Not Satisfactory

— Manning

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Manning of Alberta advanced Saturday night a four-step proposal designed to replace the federal government's present equalization formula which he said "has proven very unsatisfactory."

Mr. Manning suggested that equalization be based on what it actually costs to provide basic services in the fields of public health, public welfare and probably education.

The present formula for equaling provincial revenues is based on personal income tax, corporation tax and succession duties. If a province's revenue is below the average of the two highest provinces (Ontario and British Columbia) in these fields, a grant is paid by the federal government to make up the difference.

Mr. Manning outlined his four-step plan in a paid political radio-TV program.

It would create a joint federal - provincial fund to meet costs of basic services and establish a joint federal-provincial income tax, joint corporation tax and joint provincial sales tax.

Missing the Point

The American Society of Newspaper Editors is meeting in Washington.

Its committee on freedom of information says there is "cause for great concern" at a rising demand for tighter curbs on news reporting of the courts.

Nonsense!

This demand, as the committee notes, is "aimed primarily at television."

No television coverage is permitted in Canadian courts. That does not mean, though, that Canadians are worse served than are residents of the United States in the matter of free access to information.

Access to information, in any event, is not the first criterion by which reporting of court cases has to be judged.

The prime reason why the courts must be open to the public, why it is imperative that there be a right to report proceedings, is that this provides an indispensable safeguard to accused persons against prosecution being turned into persecution.

As long as the results of court cases can be reported, and commented upon, the court of public opinion can prevent tyranny from disguising itself in the trappings of law.

In the light of this public right to information can go hand in hand with this protection for the accused, so much the better. But the former right must not be allowed to overrule the latter.

Recently in Canada some changes have been made in permissible coverage of court cases, in order to protect the accused. It is no longer permissible in newspaper reports to report the presentation of a confession by the accused to a preliminary hearing. With some possible minor exceptions, Canadian newspapers have accepted this change without protest, because they realize the overruling importance of the accused receiving a fair trial. This could be jeopardized if everybody read, before the actual trial of the accused, that he had confessed. Generally the defence presents no evidence at preliminary hearings, although it is entitled to do so if it desires.

Canadian newspapers, we suggest, show as much greater appreciation of the true reason why certain trials are essential. U.S. newspapers, worrying about television being curtailed, are really worrying about the possible establishment of a precedent which would limit their own coverage. It would be evident that no such valid precedent could be set by regulation of television, if only the U.S. papers would concentrate on the right of the accused to a fair trial, rather than on the right of the public to access to information.

One Third of the Truth

The other day Sidney J. Harris, columnist on this page, gave one third of the most important truth about today's world.

He said: "The great revolution of our times is not political, or social, or ideological, but technological, in that for the first time in history it is now possible to provide a more abundant life for the many without taking away from the few, to augment rather than transfer wealth."

Why just a third of the truth?

Firstly because this statement is true today only of some of the countries in the world. While theoretically it might be possible to aid the poor without taking from the rich in the have-not nations, in practice in such areas as the Middle East and Latin America the rapid eradication of poverty still demands curtailment of the privileges of the tremendously wealthy upper classes.

Secondly, because, while what is true today of the advanced nations may one day be true of the whole world, there is no guarantee that it will remain true. If all peoples were to consume goods at the same rate as do those of Canada and the United States, critical shortages of essential materials would soon develop and a new crisis of scarcity would be created, unless scientists could invent satisfactory synthetic substitutes.

The economic problem today can thus be divided into three parts:

1—The problem of the developed nations using to the full the productive powers they at present possess.

2—The problem of extending these productive powers to all the countries.

3—The problem of finding substitutes for basic materials for which there would be an excessive demand in a world in which poverty had been eliminated.

So far, we have not solved even the first, not easiest, of these.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 20th, 1944.

It is stated that cold weather is retarding the annual smelt run as far as the waters leading into Lake Ontario are concerned. Commercial fishermen working in Lake Ontario report the run has been very light thus far.

So they are thinking of installing a bronze bust in the House of Commons to commemorate Agnes Macphail.

Perhaps that idea should be reconsidered. How can anything as conventional as a bronze bust be considered a fitting memorial for so unconventional a woman?

She was of course the first woman elected to the Canadian House of Commons. She may, also, have been one of the last true individualists. We do not know what Aggie would have said about that bust, but it probably would have been caustic enough to dissolve it. Or then again she might have approved. One never knew how she would react except on a question of principle. Then she never wavered.

It just so happened that her views on many subjects did not coincide with the views of the majority of Parliament, but in election after election she was returned to the House. It took a combination of redistribution, a World War and the rising star of the man who is now Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, Hon. Walter E. Harris, to oust her from her seat in the Commons. What best he was not her socialist views, but her dislike of school cadet instruction. If she had been ready to revise her opinions to coincide with various governments, she might still have held her seat, despite Harris and redistribution, but she refused to do so.

30 YEARS AGO

A pair of loons, that have been an attraction for employees and visitors at the Belleville pumping station for several years, have returned to their old haunts and have again taken up residence in the Bay of Quinte just south of the plant. Last year the wild birds became so tame that they ventured to come in search of perch and other small fish.

Members of the Y's Men's Club recently visited the filtration plant and were shown by manager E. T. Austin how the plant is operated.

Mr. and Mrs. Ouinette of Montreal spent Easter here their son, Mr. George Ouinette, of Bridge St. East.

It is expected that the local tax rate for this year will be 25 mills, the same as last year.

At a meeting recently of the Catholic Women's League here the following officers were elected: president — Miss Hazel Lynch; 1st vice-president — Miss Anna Hurley; 2nd vice-president — Miss E. Deanard; 3rd vice-president — Mrs. P. Flagler; recording secretary — Mrs. A. B. Colling; corresponding secretary — Miss K. Dolan; treasurer — treasurer — Mrs. Frank Fitzpatrick.

Miss Eztell Manley is spending the Easter vacation here with her parents.

Mr. J. Walter Evans, C.E., was appointed city engineer by the city council last evening at a salary of $150 per month. There were thirty applicants for the position.

The congregation of the Baptist Church here has accepted with sincere thanks the offer of Mr. Andrew Carnegie to donate the sum of $1,000 towards the purchase of a pipe organ installed during the summer. Many subscriptions have been received from members of the congregation and friends. The committee in charge of the matter is composed of Messrs. Albert Blackburn, W. B. Riggs, F. C. MacLaurin and C. SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

Vanier Sets an Example

Ottawa Journal

A fortnight ago in this space we looked down our noses at the length and sobriety of speeches in Parliament, wondering why hon. gentlemen used humor so sparingly yet so heavily and why an MP addressing Parliament or public seemed to suffer from the assumption that his audience were morons.

Within a week the Governor General demonstrated that the blight has not struck all Canadians in high places. His Excellency went out to dinner to speak to the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada. He left them in a happy frame of mind and happy at their work: a remarkable accomplishment too rarely by Canadian orators.

As one civil servant to another he recalled some of the remarks given them a year earlier by Lord Amory: "If you have a job as tax, that is a pity, but you are paid by your political masters on behalf of the public to administer it as it stands, but with humanity and good sense."

The link with the audience was thus immediately intimate and knowing.

General Vanier did, of course, have several resounding things to say about the public service, but by and large he preferred that among friends one's perils should be left to the ear they'd rather hear of their aches and pains.

For instance — about the possibilities of official jargon. The Governor of Missouri in a news letter listed words causes of death as reported to the State Vital Statistics Bureau. They included: "Don't know," died without the aid of a physician;" and "Deceased got from blood poison, caused by a broken ankle, which is remarkable as unfavorable accident when between the lamp and the radiator."

General Vanier had a gay way, too, of suggesting to today's public servants that their predecessors were not all fossils. "In the distant past a politician called Canadians Monthly, published in Montreal, 1876, defined the requirements for entering government employment as: "the front of brass, the gift of gab, tongue, deftness in political canvassing, and unscrupulousness in everything." And even an official report of the Commission on the Public Service, 1880, felt constrained to say that the service was: 'a refuge for people who, by reason of their indolence or lack of intelligence could not succeed in other employment.'

General Vanier, always the gentleman, did not omit to assure his audience that things had been changed. An historian named Collins, he said, wrote that during the 1830's all this came to an end because:

"About this time the permanent corrections forced itself upon the party members that there was not room for the entire male population of the country in the civil service. . . . Almost overnight the settlers and men had swarmed from their agricultural pursuits, and other honest employments, entering government for situations, like unto the shoals of sharks. . . that used to bewilder the early Pacific waters, wafting through days and weeks for someone to throw them a bone."

But a General, in general, however much clan there is in his blood, must finish on a serious note. So he gave them this set of precepts:

"Be courteous and tactful as well as loyal and devoted. If your doings are publicly known, and must therefore be beyond reproach, remember, be absolutely impartial. Always give a reason for refusing a plea; complainants like a knowledge even more than a successful plea. Preserve dignity but avoid inspiring awe. Be an artist in words, that you may be strong for the tongue is a sword. . . ."

They were good precepts, he thought, and should be heeded at all time. In fact they were translated from a parchment prepared some thousands of years ago for the Egyptian Civil Service.

Bible Part of Heritage

By Prof. Thayer S. Warshaw in The English Journal

"The Bible is indeed a religious book, but it also a part of our secular cultural heritage.

A knowledge of the Bible is essential for the student's understanding of allusions in literature, in music, and in the fine arts, in the theatre, in entertainment, and in cultured conversation.

Time to study mythology and Shakespeare, but not the Bible! Is it important for him to learn who Cain was or why he was called an Adonis or a Romeo, yet unimportant for him to be told to tell a Jonah from a Judas?

• • •

Pity the English teacher who begins the study of Nobel prize winner John Steinbeck's The Pearly. How is he to explain the book's second paragraph, which begins, "His friends, if he had any," to the student who does not know what a parable is, much less that in one parable a man "sold all that he had" for "one pearl of great price." Yet both understandings are necessary if the student is to appreciate John Steinbeck's work intelligently.

Perhaps the teacher will next introduce Hemingway's Nobel prize-winning The Old Man and the Sea, a story of which the old man staggers up a hill carrying a heavy mast across his shoulders, stumbles and falls, rises, and finally collapses on his bed with his arms outstretched and his hands and feet nailed, showing his recent injuries. Will students ignorant of the Bible catch the allusion?

Or let a class in social studies get in English and discuss Alan Paton's great novel of South African apartheid, Cry, the Beloved Country. It is rich in the main character, a religious leader, has a son named Absalom who rebels against him and dies by hanging. Again the pupils need a knowledge of the Bible to understand the allusions in the book.

Should they be denied this part of our cultural background simply because the Bible is controversial or because of the fear that some teachers and students might lack judgment in using the Bible as a textbook in the humanities?

The faculty of Newton High School decided that its pupils should not be so denied.

We had evidence to support our belief that students were not informed on Biblical background.

I administered a test consisting of 48 questions to five classes of our college bound eleventh and twelfth-graders in Newton — a community that is regarded as above average culturally.

The test's purpose: to discover whether the pupils were familiar with at least the most commonly known Biblical stories, names and quotations.

The results: 79 percent could not supply the last word of the quotation "Many are called but few are chosen"; 84 percent could not furnish the last word of "Pride goeth before ——"; 93 percent could not make you free"; 85 percent did not know that the last word in Isaiah "They shall beat their swords into plowshares"; 84 percent were unable to say that "A soft answer turneth away wrath"; 88 percent did not know that Job was baptized by Moses; Jezebel was Ahab's dowager; and the stories by which these names are associated "died."

In other words, the overpublicized Johnny may be following the trail of Odysseus by reading Ivanhoe in high school; he may be introduced to the noble Brutus by reading a play by Caesar in junior high school he will not find out about King David or Joseph's coat or Saul of Tarsus.

Chickens Fed Dried Scotch

Aims of Industry
London Letter

Here's something to make hens crow with delight — chickenfeed made from whisky. Canada has been imbibing whisky in the form of a waste product for some years, but now it's the turn of the hens.

Determined not to waste anything, Tweeddale Distillers, Ltd., of Scotland have a ($182,350) plant which converts the residue of barley into a powder known as "Distillers Dried Solubles". Basically, the plant first boils the spent mash — about 74,000 gallons a week — into a syrup, then dries it. Every week lorries deliver about 14 tons of the powder — which forms a valuable part of the diet of a chicken — from the distillery at Kennethmont.

More People Die From Bee Stings Than Snake Bites

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Three years ago I was stung by a bee and nearly died. I was given adrenalin and antihistamine injections.

There are some new vaccines to desensitize a person who is allergic to bees, but they have not been used here.

It has been suggested that I take the treatment, which is a long drawn out affair of about two years.

I don't want to be used as a guinea pig, and will appreciate your advice.

I have been told there is a kit that one can carry, and it is not complicated and the injections can be given by oneself or by others, in case of being stung. What's your opinion? — G. A. D.

It seems to me, my unfortunate friend that you are mixing up things a bit — confusing abstractions with realities.

Some people are highly sensitive to bee or other insect stings. Enough so that more people die from bee stings than from snake bites. For people like you, a sting can be very dangerous.

The adrenalin and antihistamine (these are the usual drugs used in such cases) were employed just to give you some temporary help over the danger period. I'm glad they were given in time.

The "Vaccine" you mention

Strictly Personal
Extremist Movements Psychological

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A major problem — and perhaps an insoluble one — that will present definitions of "insanity" is that neither on legal nor on medical grounds can we commit the most dangerous persons in society.

The person who can be certified as "insane", on medico-legal grounds is no threat to the social order, as Voltaire said, or may be to those around him. He is so wild, on examination, that no one could ever take him for anything but a madman.

This is not true of those paranoid characters who create the greatest mischief, who attract followers or who themselves become the most ardent followers of lunatic ideologies. No objective test would show these people as insane; they are not divorced from reality, merely exaggerated from it.

I have in mind some fairly prominent men whose names appear in the news with disconcerting regularity. Reading their distorted words, and observing their erratic actions, there is no doubt in my mind that they suffer from a real paranoia — that is, they violently project their own inadequacies, resentments, fears, guilts and hallucinations upon the external world, or some part of it called "the enemy."

Yet, the difference between them and the rest of us is only a quantitative one. Their projections and projections are more extreme than ours. It is precisely for this reason that such personalities appeal so irresistably to repressed characters, to failures in either their private or public lives, to embittered and frustrated men and women.

Extremist movements are only on the surface political; their goals and programs are politically slanted, but their deepest motivations are psychological — a form of revenge upon society, a way of finding (and eventually exterminating) some scapegoat upon whom they have transferred their burden of secret guilt.

And the man who lead such movements, unless they are mere charlatans and opportunists, are trembling on the brink of insanity, if not already over the edge. But their form of insanity cannot be clinically verified, does not fit into the narrow and rigid categories of present knowledge-limits us to.

We have no right to commit them, for all of us possess some potentiality. But we do have an obligation to understand them, to recognize them as sociopathic cases, to inoculate ourselves against the toxin of their hate. Only when they are seen in the perspective of mental illness, and not as representatives of political positions, can their power for evil be evaporated by the germicide of our sanity.

Dear Dr. Molner: I had a five-pound pork roast in the deep freeze. When I took it out I noticed it had a dried-up look, so instead of eating it, I cut it in two and made barbecue. It was delicious and nobody got sick, so I cured the other half later.

Since then I have had so many people say, "I wonder you didn't poison the family," or "I wouldn't have used it because it had been frozen."

Should I have used it or not? — Mrs. B. R. W.

I don't see any danger. True, in time foods can dry out in the deep freeze unless suitably wrapped, but you can see when it's not mean that the food is spoiled.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: I am going to a formal and am heartbroken because my nails are very brittle. I have shaved the tips off would I be making a big mistake? — Debbie.

No. It's a good a way as any. Shaving doesn't make hair grow back faster or heavier.

• • •

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple. Write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 666, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of the leaflet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains," enclosing a long stamped addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover the cost of printing and handling.

Bud Watching Is Advocated

Boston Herald

It is good to read that more citizens are watching native birds. It is a rewarding and rewarding hobby, and not all bird watchers are as peculiar as humorists have occasionally portray them. However, the countryman is beginning a crusade to induce his peers to also watch the buds on trees.

There are definite advantages to bud watching. One need not need to rise in the pre-dawn hours for a safari with other dedicated citizens. One does not need to flounder through woodland, brush, or swamp. Bud watching is a quiet, contemplative hobby that one can follow some pleasant afternoon.

No, expensive glasses are needed. All that is required is a small hand lens. Few appreciate the glowing colors in buds; few know that buds are formed in the summer, wrapped in waterproof capsules and remain dormant until the following spring.

A bud watcher knows that each tree and shrub species has its distinctive shape; each species has its special colors. Toward the end of February, a bud begins to watch the buds on the lilacs by the kitchen door, then investigates buds in March, he goes to the woodlands and fields' edges to see how he can see the start of the swelling.

A bud is a promise. A bud is part of the miracle of life. This is an era of the supercolossal, the blatant and the spectacular. Study the buds in spring and if you are in tune with the fundamentals of life, the bud's promise of the bough will confirm the faith of the beholder.

Nixon Most Likely Winner Of Nomination

NEW YORK (AP)—Former vice - president Richard Nixon has topped a country-wide poll of Republican county chairmen and other party leaders the most likely winner of the party's nomination for president in 1964.

However, Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona ran far ahead, among 1,806 Republicans participating in the poll, as their personal preference for the nomination.

The survey was conducted by The Associated Press.

Correspondents in 50 states and the District of Columbia questioned more than 3,000 county chairmen, vice-chairmen, town leaders and other party officials. The survey began April 1.

The questionnaire contained two parts: "Who is you personal preference to be the nominee?" and "Whom do you think the convention will nominate?"

Nixon was chosen by 326 as the most likely to be nominated, with Goldwater getting 427 votes in this category. Henry Cabot Lodge, with 188, Governor William Scranton of Pennsylvania, 155, and Governor Nelson Rockefeller of New York, 50, led the other candidates.

In personal preference, 722 chose Goldwater, 301 Nixon, 193 Lodge, 191 Scranton, 84 Rockefeller.

This was the third such survey.

Last October, Goldwater was a runaway winner. In December after the assassination of President Kennedy, Goldwater continued to lead but his political stock had dropped sharply.

The Republican party nominating convention is scheduled to open in San Francisco July 13 with 1,308 voting delegates and 655 votes needed for the nomination.

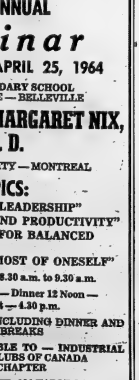
Leaders Foresee Increase in Demonstrations

NEW YORK (AP) — Civil rights leaders foresee an increase in anti - segregationist demonstrations this summer—with potentially greater violence —and a trend toward "extremism" among both Negroes and whites, an Associated Press survey shows.

"It's going to be a long, hot summer," said Velma Overton, Texas official of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

A number of those interviewed used the same phrase.



Others said the civil rights bill now before the U.S. Senate is the determining factor in the outlook for the coming months. If it passes, these leaders feel, much of the heat will go out of the situation.

More than 70 persons involved with civil rights activity in all parts of the U.S. were interviewed.

The consensus:

Demonstrations will increase, in number and intensity, north and south. Employment practices affecting Negroes are the sore point in the North. In the South, the problem pivots on voting rights and the slow pace of desegregating the schools.

Cleveland, Pittsburgh, New York and Los Angeles were cited as the cities most likely to see disturbances in the North. In the South, Alabama and Mississippi were named most frequently.

How you can tailor London Life insurance to keep pace with your changing needs

Life is full of surprises—so who can say how much insurance you will need 15 years from now. Don't fret; London Life insurance is flexible. You can adapt it to fit your goals and changing needs. Here are eight examples:

ASSUME, for the moment, that you are a young married man who has just bought a Jubilee whole life profit-sharing policy. Consider the choices open to you:

(1) Your Jubilee policy earns dividends each year. Take these dividends in cash or leave them with the Company to grow. (They currently earn interest at the handsome rate of 4.75%.)

(2) You can arrange for the London Life Insurance Company to pay double the amount of your policy if you die in an accident. (The technical term is "double indemnity".)

(3) You can add on income disability benefits that will provide a monthly income and pay your premiums if you should become totally disabled for more than six months.

(4) When children come along, you will want more protection for your family. London Life recommends more Jubilee whole life insurance because, while it gives protection, it also builds surprising savings.

If you cannot afford the premium for Jubilee, a convertible term policy is a good temporary solution. It gives low-cost protection now. Later, as your income climbs, you can convert it to Jubilee profit-sharing insurance. London Life lets you make this change without a medical examination.

(5) If you buy a house, think about term insurance. This can be added onto a Jubilee policy or purchased separately. If you should die, your family would have money to pay off the mortgage.

(6) At any time, you can add a monthly income feature to your Jubilee policy. If you should die, your wife would receive a cheque each month up to a pre-arranged date (usually when your children have completed their education).

(7) Many family men wish they could buy more life insurance. A poor medical report holds them back. If you buy young, you can reserve the right to purchase more insurance up to age 40—without a medical exam. Comforting.

(8) Have you given any thought to your retirement income? If you buy a London Life Jubilee policy at a young age and leave your dividends to accumulate, you can have a sizeable nest egg waiting for you at age 65. In fact, you can get double your money back.

Example: At age 25, the premium for a $10,000 Jubilee whole life policy is $13.09 a month. To age 65, you will pay in $6,283. But at age 65 you will have built up savings of about $13,170—more than double the amount you have paid in.

(This figure of $13,170 is made up of $5,580 in guaranteed cash value and $7,590 in accumulated dividends. These dividends are based on London Life's current dividend rate. While they are not guaranteed the Company has had an outstanding record of dividend growth for over 90 years. For example: since 1951 the dividend rate has been increased seven times.)

At age 65, London Life will give you three choices:

(a) Carry on with your protection and build higher savings. You can do this by continuing to pay premiums regularly or by using some of your accumulated dividends to pay all future premiums.

(b) Stop paying premiums and take a fully paid-up policy for a smaller amount plus some or all of your accumulated dividends in cash.

(c) Terminate your insurance and withdraw all your savings. Take them as a lump sum, as a guaranteed income for so many years or as a guaranteed income for life.

No two men have the same insurance needs. That is why London Life representatives have been schooled to tailor insurance to fit the individual. Only after a representative has analyzed your current situation, your group insurance, your pension plan, and your present policies, can he recommend a flexible plan to fit your needs.

Miss Jewett Says Members Need Help

TORONTO (CP) — Pauline Jewett, Liberal member of Parliament for Northumberland, says MPs should have paid assistants to help handle the "enormous load" of problems from constituents.

She told a convention of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs of Ontario Sunday that handling local requests takes up 50 per cent of her time. She described it as "one of the shortcomings of our system."

Dr. Jewett, a university teacher before she entered politics two years ago, said parliamentarians in the Commons don't have time to think in depth, which lowers the politicians' potential.

She suggested each Canadian MP should have at least one permanent person in his constituency and two or three in Ottawa. She said members of the House of Representatives in Washington each have six assistants paid for by the government.

The House of Commons should not be a forum for a multitude of problems about such things as bridges and canals, she added.

Good Cooks Badly Needed Says Chef

HALIFAX (CP) — Canada is seriously short of well-trained cooks, says Christian Hitz, chef de cuisine at the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec City.

"It is not a bit of use donning a tall hat and calling yourself a chef," says Mr. Hitz, here recently to attend a conference.

"First you have to be able to cook, and you can only do that with training."

He would like to see Canada introduce a national apprenticeship scheme for cooks similar to the three-year course which started his own career at a Swiss resort.

He believes cooking has many opportunities to offer young Canadians.

"A good cook is worth his weight in gold."

With the Montreal Worlds' Fair only tree years away, Mr. Hitz believes it is vitally necessary to get a training program started immediately.

Canada will be host to thousands of visitors from all over the world and, he says, although our catering standards have improved in recent years, there is still plenty of scope for well-trained men to do even better."

Mr. Hitz says many of Canada's leading hotels are facing up to the responsibility of training good chefs, but as quickly as they are trained, they leave to obtain jobs elsewhere.

"It should not be left to just a few establishments to provide his kind of training.

"The government, either federally or provincially, should show a lead by backing a properly organized apprenticeship scheme.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Green, Dunbar Street, celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary last Friday evening. A son Allan Green, now of Galt and his wife were present to mark the occasion, another son Dr. Ross Green of Thorndale was unable to attend. The brothers and sisters of the bride, with their wives and husbands were also present for this special event.

Says Schools No Place to Teach Sex

VICTORIA (CP) — A woman lawyer says marriage is more than a sexual affair and sex education courses should not be given in public schools.

Instead of offering these courses, educationists should ...element a crash program for adults aimed at preserving "the kind of family life that we cherish," says Mrs. Mamey Stevenson.

"There is an epidemic abroad of broken homes, children born out of wedlock and juvenile delinquency that is even more serious than the measlpox, typhus and scarlet fever epidemics of the last century.

"We now search for family life the same kind of program that developed through the 19th century in public health and sanitation."

Dr. W. Gerald Wallis, a psychiatrist, and Frances Elford, a mother and councillor in suburban Oak Bay, both favor sex education in schools.

Dr. Wallis says that in an age of anxieties, tensions and faulty attitudes on sex and behavior sex education in schools "would contribute to better emotional health."

Mrs. Elford says few parents teach their children about sex and too frequently children develop wrong impressions through "whispering campaigns and half-truths."

She believes every child should be given some well-planned and well-presented formal education on sex between the ages of 12 and 15.

John Portenus, vice-chairman of the Greater Victoria School Board, which is considering a sex education program in schools, says the program is intended to supplement the instruction children receive at home.

"Unfortunate as it might be, I think we must face the fact that many parents tell their children nothing about sex," he says.

"And of course, tell them as much as they can, but are limited in their basic knowledge."

Aftermath to Thalidomide Tragedy Has "Practical" Research Result

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP) — Two-year-old Linda has no arms.

One of her tiny ears is slightly deformed.

She is one of 115 Canadian infants—74 of whom survived—born with congenital malformations in 1961 and 1962 after their mothers took the drug thalidomide as a sedative or as a preventive against nausea during pregnancy.

Where is Linda now and what is being done to help her?

What can be said today to put the thalidomide episode in perspective, now that the sensational publicity it prompted has died down?

Dr. Jean Webb, head of the federal health department's child and maternal health division, provided some answers in an interview.

"Probably the most encouraging practical result of the tragedy is that our knowledge of how to help child amputees will be greatly increased due to special research on artificial arms and legs being developed to aid the babies."

STUDIED BY EXPERTS

Using the results of this research, quiet but effective rehabilitation work now goes on in Canadian research and training centres—especially in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg — aimed at helping severely malformed children like Linda who need special equipment and treatment.

These rehabilitation programs, which vary slightly from city to city, are the result of a thorough investigation of the most complex methods of helping child amputees, carried out by an expert committee in 1962.

The committee, set up by the federal health department, visited centres in the United States and Europe to study the special needs of the thalidomide babies.

The Canadian children, most of whom are nearly two years old, have been fitted with intricately designed artificial limbs in the rehabilitation centres, and are being taught how to use them.

The families of the malformed children, who often suffered emotional stress and guilt as a result of their children's disabilities, receive counsel and advice at the centres.

HELP PARENTS TOO

"Having a severely malformed child in the family is always difficult to adjust to and workers at the rehabilitation centres are always concerned with the parents—their understanding and acceptance of the child's disability—as they are with the special care of the child."

Along with the improvement of artificial limbs for child amputees, there were several other important positive results from the thalidomide experience, Dr. Webb said.

1. "It emphasized our lack of knowledge about congenital malformations in general."

2. "The constant need to collect data on the incidence of congenital malformations was shown forcibly." When Canadian doctors tried to make comparisons with rare malformations of the limbs among children in other years, they found they had no reliable figures to fall back on.

3. "Women were brought to a new realization that the unborn child is extremely vulnerable during the early stages of pregnancy, as it was during this period that most of the harm was done. Mothers must realize that many things — not just drugs which they might take—may influence their unborn babies, such as improper diet, too much smoking, or certain infections to name only a few."

4. "A re-examination of drug testing and control methods resulted, not just in Canada but in several other countries as well."

GO EASY ON DRUGS

Dr. Webb, who has made a detailed study of the Canadian thalidomide experience, said she hoped Canadian mothers had learned from it that drugs should be taken during pregnancy "only when there is a vital need."

Asked whether she thought many mothers had cut down their drug intake during pregnancy, she stopped taking sedatives and anti-nauseants altogether after the thalidomide scare, Dr. Webb replied:

"I don't know, but I sincerely hope so."

The Ottawa doctor's research into the thalidomide experience was collected in a six-page article in the November, 1962, issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

In it she set forth the facts of what happened:

In 1961 and 1962, 115 children were born in Canada with congenital malformations associated with the use of the drug thalidomide by their mothers in early pregnancy, according to the survey conducted by Dr. Webb in 1962.

Of the 115 children, 74 were alive at the time of the survey, 41 of these being severely handicapped. Eight had been stillborn. Thirty-three had died.

Dr. Webb's article deals with the history of the drug's use in Europe and the chronological events leading up to the eventual withdrawal of thalidomide from the Canadian market in March, 1962. (It was first put on the Canadian market in April, 1961.)

"But the many details are not so important now," she said.

"What is important is that we take advantage of the knowledge gained from the tragedy."

"Tragic as the thalidomide experience was, I think we must see it today in the larger perspective of the total number of congenital malformations occurring in Canada every year.

"For example, in 1962—when 32 infants died of malformations associated with thalidomide—2,230 infants died of other congenital malformations of which the causes were largely unknown.

"This illustrates vividly the need for more research into the causes of congenital malformations, especially when we know that many more children than 2,230 are born with some type of congenital disease every year in Canada."

Tomorrow: Thalidomide babies have normal life expectancy.

STUDIED THALIDOMIDE — Dr. Jean Webb of Ottawa, head of the federal health department's child and maternal health division, has made a detailed study of the Canadian thalidomide experience. In an article in the Canadian Medical Association Journal, she set forth the facts on the history of the drug's use in Europe and the events leading up to the eventual withdrawal of thalidomide from the Canadian market in March, 1962. Red Cross Homemakers Hold Meeting

A well attended monthly meeting of the Red Cross Homemakers was held April 10th at the home of Mrs. Pearl Drury, 30 Geddes Street.

A timely and interesting talk was given by Mrs. B. C. Brown, physio-therapist of the Belleville Arthritic Society, entitled: "Care and Treatment of the Arthritic Patient," after which refreshments were served.

Belleville Woman Director

TORONTO (CP)—The chairman of the United States citizen's advisory council on the status of women warned during the weekend that women on this continent are not doing their share to "push back the frontiers of knowledge."

Margaret Hickey, a lawyer and public affairs editor of the Ladies Home Journal, told a convention of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs of Ontario that there is a declining number of U.S. women entering careers in high level areas.

B. F. Goodfellow, advanced marketing development manager for International Business Machines, told delegates that computers will soon enable busy executives to read documents from a filing system without leaving their desk.

The office computer involves a television screen whereby an executive may "key in" a file and get a picture of the particular document he wishes to see. He can also make corrections with a pencil on the surface of the screen.

Joan Wilson of Guelph was elected president.

Vice - presidents elected include Dorothy Brown, Belleville; Florence Murphy, North Bay and Elsie Badland, Welland.

Girl Training For Berth on Chute Team

HAMILTON (CP) — Wendy Gill, a 22-year-old Hamilton girl who has suffered more injuries skiing than parachute jumping, will take part in the Canadian parachuting eliminations at Petawawa, Ont., May 18-20 weekend.

She's aiming at a berth on the girls' team that may compete in the world championships in West Germany in September.

Wendy has been jumping about 13 months and has made more than 100 jumps. The first time she jumped was also her first time in an airplane.

She is convinced the sport is safe when done properly and the jumper is trained, obeys the jump master in the plane and is properly equipped.

Her only accident was in Montreal last year when she landed in a tree and tore the red jump suit her mother made her.

Miss Gill, fire-foot-three and 128 pounds, has added judo to her training to keep in trim.

The latest member of the Parachute Club of Canada says she German trip depends on whether enough money can be raised from donations by parachute clubs and perhaps a government grant. There are 20 clubs in Canada, each of which may donate $250 toward sponsoring a national team.

Mrs. Horace Wright was the gracious hostess for the April meeting of Christ Church Parish Guild when they met in her home on Tuesday afternoon. The occasion was a sewing "Bee" and members busied themselves cutting out aprons and children's garments, sewing on buttons and crocheted edgings, finishing pajamas, pillow slips and tea towels. All this was in preparation for the Blossom Tea which will be held at the end of May.

The business portion of the meeting was in charge of president, Mrs. A. Jordan, and reports were heard from all conveners. A number of wedding receptions are scheduled for the next few months and members were urged to help wherever possible. A letter will be sent to all organizations asking their support in replenishing dishes and utensils in the church kitchen. The rectory kitchen will be painted during the summer and other renovations will be undertaken.

Mrs. M. Boyd reported nearly $30, collected this month for the cent-a-meal project and Mrs. Noakes had sent six "get-well" cards to parish members.

Refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by her daughter, Mrs. G. Livingston and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. J. Wright.

Maple Syrup Time At Pollock's

by Mary Moore

It is a delusion that I help, but somehow I manage to be present at any collecting time at the Pollocks' farm.

I would like to help but the maple trees are all connected up with plastic tubing by the time I arrive and my chief pleasure is to taste the cool, clear, slightly sweet nectar from a big pail held by George.

Helen stays at home in the kitchen concocting delicious dishes made with maple syrup for me to taste and approve and pass on to you.

My first offering from Helen's busy kitchen is

EMERGENCY CAKE WITH MAPLE SYRUP SAUCE (frees- ee well - courtesy Helen P.)

1¾ cups sifted pastry flour,
½ teaspoon salt,
½ cup soft butter,
1 unbeaten egg,
1 cup sugar,
2½ teaspoons baking powder,
½ cup milk,
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Sift dry ingredients into bowl. Make a well in the centre of them and put in butter, unbeaten egg, milk and vanilla. Beat hard for 2 minutes. Pour into greased 8" square cake pan, and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes. Make 9 squares when cut. Serve warm or cold with

MAPLE SYRUP SAUCE (courtesy Helen P.)

1 cup granulated sugar,
½ cup corn syrup,
1½ cups table cream,
6 tablespoons butter,
1 cup maple syrup.

Combine sugar, corn syrup and cream and heat to boiling, stirring constantly. Cook to 228 deg. Fahr. or until syrup forms a very soft mass when a little is dropped into cold water. Remove from heat and add butter and maple syrup, stirring well. Use hot or cold as a pudding sauce or ice cream topping. Makes about 3 cups.

You will notice that the above stream-lined method of making cake can be adapted for ever so many purposes. Obviously it may be used for two thin layers of cakes or for a square cake which could be simply frosted. If you wanted to bake it in one square pan, you could do that and when cool split it into two square layers and put a filling between and icing on top. When you are desperate for an accompaniment for a fruit dessert, quickly stir up and bake this batter and serve it war cut into squares. This way I licious.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

CONCERNING THE SOCIAL KISS

Looks like everyone has been bitten by the kissing bug.

Nowadays, when you walk into a party, you never know whether to offer your hand or your cheek.

Last week, I innocently entered a room and was roundly hussed by the host, the hostess, all their kissin' cousins, and a few people I had never met before. I think one was the caterer who was discovering he could put his heart into his work.

But if you think it stopped there, then you've got another kiss coming. Saying good-night was just as smorous. Only, this time, it was directed to the host, hostess, various acquaintances and, I presume, the caterer, (he was still working), departing guests had to be soundly bussed by other guests they had just met, even if they had just had a rousing argument about politics and were on opposite sides of any issue. The parting kiss seemed the way to mend political fences.

But it or not, the social kiss is definitely "in." But I do think it should be kept within bounds. I frankly favor the pseudo-kiss, where only cheeks are touched and there's no smearing of lipstick — off the mouth and on someone's ear. It's much tidier and saves a great deal of laundry, what with having to wipe off tell-tale signs with hankies.

WHO KISSES FIRST?

Then there should be some sort of discrimination about who kisses first. When one enters a room, for instance, should one now kiss the host and hostess? That, for heaven's sake, is the kissing protocol?

Well, since the host and hostess are in charge and set the pace, I say they should set the standard. If they want to kiss their arriving guests, it's up to them. My advice is to see whether they lead with a hand or cheek before you say hello.

Even though the ones who are giving the party are prone to greet with a kiss, it shouldn't give guests carte blanche to do their arrival a polite smile, and, possibly, a sedate nod are still good style. Good friends, of course, may feel differently.

But on the cheek will further cement good relations, but I'm against mere acquaintances, holy old and new, taking advantage of what is still an experimental custom.

Happily, a way out of the whole imbroglio is in sight. Once everyone takes up a fad, it's already half on its way to becoming "out." As soon as the style-setters see that the kiss on the cheek has become common practice, they'll want to be original and might try something "different" like shaking hands. Maybe curtsying and bowing from the waist will be all the rage in the near future.

Guiding Not Changed Much Over Years

MONTREAL (CP) — More crippled and handicapped girls should be included in Girl Guide packs, says Mrs. R. E. Stavert, retiring chief commissioner of the guides in Quebec.

"The handicapped child is often isolated and lonely," she says. "I think guiding is a good experience for both the handicapped and the other children."

Mrs. Stavert became interested in guiding more than 40 years ago in Almonte, Ont., when she was Brown Owl of a pack of 18 youngsters.

"It hasn't changed as much over the years as you might think," she says. "The hat used to be turned up on the side and we now wear berets. In between we had the stroller but the general effect hasn't changed much.

"The skirt lengths, of course, have gone up and down with the fashions."

The most radical change is the new two-piece uniform with the culotte skirt being introduced now.

U.C.W. Meeting

SCOTT'S U.C.W.

SYDNEY — Under the convenorship of Mrs. Earl Defoe, Community Friendship and Visiting, thirteen members were taken on a tour of the Belleville Bell Telephone Company's building on Thursday evening. The ladies met at the home of Mrs. Cameron Sine, drove to Belleville, made the tour and came back for the balance of the meeting. This tour was unusual and enjoyed by all.

Mrs. M. Dafoe was in the chair for the meeting. The training school at Eastminster United Church on April 20 was discussed and several plan to attend.

The supply — a Christmas gift to parents or boy or girl up to 16 years of age is to be sent to Deer Lake Mission in September. Also it was decided to send a donation for blankets and soap for our overseas work. In June we will bring in donations for bale for Scott Mission.

Mrs. C. Frost read the Bible study passage which told of Christ's commission to his disciples and all christians.

Mr. Cameron Sine served coffee and a delicious lunch.

will announce today in the Commons a "very important and very satisfactory" conclusion of talks with the provinces leading to a pension plan "the provision of which will be applicable . . . to all Canadians," and meeting the increasing demands of the provinces for additional revenue "by giving them greater access to the personal income tax and other shared revenues."

"If it means a change in our pension plan . . . I am quite willing to make that change if it will bring about contributory pensions which will be applicable to all Canadians from coast to coast—the same kind of pension scheme, even if a province wishes to administer it within its own province.

"I think this is very important, and the results have been very important discussions. They have been, I think, successful."

QUESTIONED IN FRENCH

The prime minister was questioned almost entirely in French, by Gerard Pelletier, editor - in - chief of the Montreal French - language daily, La Presse, and, in English, by Norman DePoe, CBC Ottawa correspondent. He replied in English.

Simultaneous translation of the English was provided for the French-language audience, and of the French portions for the English-speaking audience during the 30-minute program recorded Saturday.

Dealing with federal-provincial relations and the claims of Quebec, Mr. Pearson said every province was equal in its rights to participate in or stand aloof from cost-shared programs. If a province wanted to opt out, it should not be hurt financially.

But Quebec has a special position in another sense, he said, "as the homeland of a people, the French-speaking people of Canada, and we must recognize that Quebec . . . has a special position in protecting and guarding the rights of French-speaking Canadians, as guaranteed in our constitution."

The prime minister, whose government will have been in office one year on Wednesday said he did not deny for one minute that it has made mistakes.

TRIED TOO MUCH

"Of course we have; we tried to do too much too quickly.

"We called Parliament together at once when perhaps we should have taken a little more time to work things out before we had a platform to submit to the first session of Parliament.

"We made mistakes, but looking over the record . . . I am satisfied that we have made some very important achievements."

Among these, he listed:

—Nine pieces of legislation which he said have helped to reduce unemployment "by a very considerable amount, although there is nothing to be smug about."

—Trade figures reaching unparalleled levels, with efforts now being made to encourage European and other non-U.S. sources of investment to turn to Canada.

—A new defence policy aimed at reducing costs and integrating the forces. Meanwhile, negotiations have opened with NATO authorities to move away from the air force's nuclear strike attack role in Europe.

Mr. Pearson also said he hopes to encourage six to 10 other countries to earmark and train special contingents to serve in United Nations peace-keeping forces.

LEARNS DIFFICULTY

The prime minister said his government had learned that it is not easy to carry out its objective of encouraging more Canadian control of the Canadian economy. It may take many years to work it out, he added.

"But one way of modifying the danger of too much foreign control of our industry—without in any way discouraging the investment we need—is to diversify that investment. In simple terms, that means to get more non-American capital."

He said there is a good deal of investment money available in Europe and to attract it Canada has to create the impression that it is a good, solid, steady, well-governed country with a good economic future with stability—"a country that is not going to break up, a country that is not going to separate, a country that has a great future as a nation."

"If we can do that we will get more capital from Europe."

Mr. Pelletier asked how the prime minister explained the fact that the government could not do more in the 44 days the current parliamentary session has lasted, but pass one bill changing the name of Trans-Canada Air Lines to Air Canada.

LISTS JOBS

Mr. Pearson said eight days were spent on the throne speech, six on the budget, and 16 on 1963-64 year-end appropriations. In the other 14 days the government introduced legislation and moved to set up parliamentary committees.

"We spent an hour to an hour and a half on questions every day; we wrangle, we waste time on questions or procedure and order, (but) we have not done badly in 44 days in terms of work.

"We should be able to accomplish more in terms of concrete legislation and I hope, if we can change our rules—and change not only the rule but change our attitude towards the rules and toward Parliament—we will be able to do more in the future than we have in the past."

of the Exchange was a furious scramble of brokerage employees trying to get their buy and sell orders processed.

The ticker tape which carries all transactions of the exchange was running 30 minutes behind the actual deals, compared with a delay of only seconds on a normal day's activity.

Public galleries at the exchange were jammed by spectators since before 9:30 a.m. EST, 30 minutes before the exchange opened.

J. S. Rattray, a partner in the firm of Jenkin, Evans and Company, said the heavy volume could be maintained "for quite a while."

"If any of these companies get favorable results the market will go crazy."

Today's trading started off with a bang, with dealers on the floor of the exchange 30 minutes before it opened to try to handle thousands of orders received during the weekend, in a continuation of Friday's record-breaking speculative spree.

Friday's final volume was 28,704,000 shares, by far the busiest day on any North American stock exchange.

REFUSE CALLS

In Timmins the offices of two stock brokers were so busy they were refusing telephone calls during the early rush of business.

I'm sorry but due to heavy calling we cannot process your call at this time," a harried voice at the T. A. Richardson and Company office said. Whoever answered hung up quickly. A similar response was received from the office of Doherty, Roadhouse and McCuaig Brothers.

Section of Rail Found "Cut And Removed"

MONTREAL (CP) — A CNR spokesman said a section of rail was "cut and removed" Sunday near Ste. Modeleine, Que., 30 miles northeast of Montreal.

The cut was discovered by the crew of a freight train en route to Sherbrooke, Que., from Montreal.

The spokesman said the train stopped when it encountered a red signal indicating something wrong on the line. A check showed a section missing. It apparently had been cut with a saw and removed. The cut broke an electric circuit and automatically changed the signal from green to red.

The break was repaired in a short time.

A year ago, a dynamite explosion wrecked a 25-inch section of CNR track at Lemieux, Que., 85 miles northeast of Montreal, just before a train carrying then prime minister Diefenbaker to an election rally passed the point.

Meanwhile the special anti-terrorist squad formed by the RCMP and Montreal and provincial police found a home-made bomb and two walkie-talkies early Saturday in a raid on a cottage at Mont Laurier, 110 miles north of Montreal.

No one was inside but authorities believe the cottage was formerly occupied by two suspected members of L'Armee de Liberation du Quebec sought for questioning in an April 19 robbery at Mont Rolland, Que.

How much of a sportscar should a family car be?
About as much as the Volkswagen 1500 TS, if you want your driving to be enjoyable.
Some cars look like sportscars, but they don't act like sportscars. The VW 1500 TS does. Independent torsion bar suspension on all four wheels and low centre of gravity help it hold firmly to any kind of road.
Like a sportscar should.
It has a floor-mounted stick with 4 synchromesh gears to shift. Which gives you the satisfying feeling of being in complete control in all driving conditions.
Like you should in a sportscar.
And this year we added more horsepower and a second carburetor.
Now you can accelerate to 50 mph in just 12 seconds.
Yet, this more powerful engine is so efficient you can expect around 35 miles to a gallon of gas. So it saves you money.
Like a family car should.
In front: adjustable bucket seats for you and your wife. In back: room for 3 more adults for the equivalent in children. So it's comfortable for long trips.
As a family car should be. That's one reason we called it Touring Sport (TS).
Track and Traffic Magazine recognized the TS for "its engineering superiority, quality of construction, aesthetics, total comfort, safety and performance". They've just given it their Golden Wheel Award.
You might say the Volkswagen 1500 TS got what's coming to it, because it's got so much going for it.

peace plan with Paul Hall, SIU boss in the United States; are reported to be hitting a brick wall.

HOUSECLEANING STARTED

A source close to the trustees says the SIU housecleaning program is well under way.

It includes an overhaul of the union constitution, provision of machinery for guaranteeing free and unfettered elections for union officers and for democratic control of union policy by the members.

But it extends beyond this to cover government action in the legislative field. Changes are in the works involving Federal shipping and labor laws to provide government supervision in areas where the rights of marine workers had been abused in the past by the SIU.

At the same time, the trustees hope that they will be able to set the stage for eventual reconciliation between the SIU and the CLC, which booted the Seafarers' Union out of its ranks in 1960.

The final goal is integration of unions in the shipping industry—one union for seamen and another separate union for officers and engineers.

The success of this plan depends ultimately on whether the seamen's union—likely to be the SIU—is accepted by organized labor as a democratic, honest and free organization.

WON'T MAKE FORECAST

Claude Jodoin, president of the CLC, said Sunday he is unable to predict whether the outcast SIU will be allowed back into the CLC in the next two years.

He told a press conference on the eve of the opening of the CLC convention that it would take a crystal ball to say whether the SIU will apply for affiliation in the next 24 months.

The top leaders of the Congress warned today that democracy cannot be achieved in the SIU until the present officers are ousted.

The unequivocal statement is contained in the report of the 21-member CLC executive council, prepared for submission to the CLC convention.

Mr. Jodoin said in an interview that the statement stands as Congress policy—although it was written before the government's marine inquiry, which resulted in the deposed SIU president Hal C. Banks.

OTHERS MUST GO

He made it clear the CLC feels other SIU officials — all aides of Mr. Banks—must also be removed from the union leadership before democratic control is guaranteed for SIU members.

But he left the precise timing of their departure undetermined, apparently leaving the decision on when and how it happens to the three-man board of marine trustees or even to the SIU membership in some future elections.

A further report, covering recent developments on the waterfront, including the pact with Mr Hall, is being prepared for the delegates.

The position is that the full powers of the trustees should be invoked to restore democratic self-government to the membership of the SIU.

ASK SHIFT SYSTEM

MASSEY, Ont (CP)—The Ontario department of education will be asked to put secondary schools to greater use by instituting a two-shift system instead of building new schools or more classrooms. The proposal was put forward Saturday by the semi-annual meeting of the Federation of Northern Ontario Municipalities being held in this town 60 miles west of Sudbury.

Saskatchewan Election

Socreds See Chance To Build for Future

REGINA (CP) — Martin Kelln, Saskatchewan Social Credit leader, sees the April 22 provincial election campaign as a chance to build a base for a future attempt to win the reins of government.

The 42-year-old leader, candidate in Last Mountain constituency, and Isaac Elias, candidate in Rosthern, are the only two Social Creditors running in the election.

"We'd like to get a couple of men in the legislature in this election," Mr. Kelln says. "Then after people have seen them in action we think we would have a chance of forming a government in a future campaign."

The party had no members in the last legislature. Mr. Kelln had been acting as his party's first full - time Saskatchewan leader for only five months before the last election June 8, 1960, in which Social Credit ran a full slate of candidates.

Mr. Kelln says his party is conducting an "educational" campaign this year, informing voters of broad Social Credit principles.

The party is the only one in the province to advocate scrapping the compulsory medical care insurance scheme in favor of a voluntary one.

Mr. Kelln is national president of the Social Credit Association. He succeeded Robert Thompson July 7, 1961, when Mr. Thompson became national party leader.

A provincial party executive member from 1947 to 1956 and Saskatchewan Social Credit president from 1956 to 1960, Mr. Kelln was handed the provincial leadership after a party faction declared it would be a disadvantage in the 1960 election campaign to be without a leader.

Mr. Kelln is a husky, cheerful man who has been unsuccessful in eight tries for political office.

He ran provincially in 1948 in Watrous, in 1952 in Last Mountain, in 1953 in a by-election in Rosthern, and in 1956 and 1960 in Last Mountain. In 1953 he ran federally in Meadow Lake constituency, in 1957 in Moose Jaw-Lake Centre federal constituency and in 1962 in Yorkton federal constituency.

He farms at Duval, Sask., on his father's homestead where he was born. He and his wife Audrey have a son and a daughter.

The Social Credit party had two members in the legislature from 1938 to 1944, the year the CCF swept to power, and three from 1956 to 1960. In the 1956 election the party polled 21½ per cent of the popular vote.

be provided for Canadians in all provinces under the plan which would be administered by Ottawa or by any provinces wishing handle it itself. However, it's understood pension fund reserves would be available for investment in provincial securities even when administration is left to Ottawa.

Next procedural stage for the pensions legislation in the Commons has not yet been indicated. Although the government hopes to avoid further dispute, sources say there's no legal obstacle to a federal - provincial argument when the pension plan goes before a parliamentary committee.

The related tax deal is understood to involve giving the provinces next year a larger share of personal income tax, plus an immediate adjustment that will give Quebec some $14,000,000 a year instead of planned new family allowances payments by Ottawa to Quebec students aged 16 and 17.

It is also believed that the provinces will be given the right to administer their own student loan funds.

Mr. Pearson said: "And I hope that this will be a turning point in our relations with the provinces in regard to these matters, and that we will be able to work together even more closely in these matters with less division of opinion and friction than we have in the past; "And that it will help to get us and to all this talk that because Quebec, for instance, may wish to conduct a program on its own that this means Quebec is contracting out of Confederation or that we are encroaching deadlock.

"We have had an awful lot of loose pessimistic talk lately and will be glad to see some action which will help, I believe, to remove that kind of talk."

Win 8-4; Lead Series 2-0

Picton Ints. Whip Lucan

PICTON — The Picton Intermediates are within one game of winning the OHA Intermediate "B" Championship.

Picton, playing back to their mid season form, walloped the Lucan Langfords by a lopsided 8-4 score here Saturday night. Picton leads the best of five series, two games to nothing.

On Friday night, the locals had to come back from a third period goal deficit to win the game 5-3, but on Saturday night, they spotted the visitors a one goal lead, and came back with some terrific hockey to score three in the last half of the first period, three more in the second and three more in the last period, while the best Lucan could do was one in the middle and two in the last frame.

Playing Coach Davy Jones has to be the big wheel in Monday's game, he not only led his team all night, but took time out to fire the three goal hat trick, and pick up an assist on one other. He was terrific.

Jones scored the picture goal of the night in the second period. He picked up the puck from Lionel Boily behind his own net, scooted up centre ice, around the defence and lit the light with a bullet shot that caught the upper right hand corner behind Keith Scarborough. Picton was a man short at the time.

Lucan opened the scoring at the 10.31 mark of the first period on a nice effort by their high scoring Ron Ryan.

Picton came roaring back with Jones firing one at the 14.00 mark after taking passes from Shaker Baker and Jim Guernsey.

Jones added another with a rifle-like shot from the blue line after he took a pass from Larry Pero to break away with a man short at the 17.54 mark. Picton took the long end of the 3/1 penalties in the first period.

Keith MacDonald, who played a standout game for Picton, opened the scoring in the second period when he blasted Carl Stacey's pass into the short side at 2.37. Ronnie Ryan came back to make it 3-1 with Jones getting credit for the assist, at 5.08.

With a two-man advantage Lucan got one back with Ken Davy potting a pass from Ryan at 5.46. Jones scored his picture goal at 7.41, to give Picton a 6-2 lead.

Larry Pero capped a big game when the diminutive centre fired Stacey's pass out into the short side at 1.47 of the last period, to give Picton a 7-2 advantage.

Lucan fought back against the heavy odds and were rewarded for their tenacity when Barry Hearn slapped a shot behind O'Halloran at 12.01, with Terry Hodgins getting an assist.

Larry Pero got his second of the period when he combined with Stacey and MacDonald to flip the disc over the prone body of the netminder. This was at 14.38, to end the scoring for Picton.

Mac and Steve O'Neill showed they were still in the game when they carried the puck into the Picton end, Steve passing the rubber to brother Mac who was parked right at the crease. He made no mistake and it was 8-4 for Picton.

Driver Suffers Broken Jaw In Accident

PICTON — A 31-year-old Montreal man, Joseph Candid Cote, is in Kingston General Hospital suffering a broken jaw, abrasions to both knees and possible head and internal injuries, following a one-car accident on Highway 33, just west of Hillier between 3.00 and 4.00 a.m. Sunday.

Police say Cote was proceeding west on Highway 33 when his vehicle left the road on the south side, careened into a private yard and struck a vehicle which was parked 15 feet from the roadway.

The man was first noticed by a farmer about 4.30 a.m., sitting in the front seat in a dazed condition and his left hand caught in the door.

Province Police Constable A. Besteman removed Cote from the vehicle to Prince Edward Memorial Hospital where after examination, he was transferred to Kingston hospital.

Mr. Cote is a Bell Telephone employee and was working on the new change-over in the Bloomfield-Wellington area. He apparently did not finish work until about 4.00 a.m.

Police believe the man was enroute to the home of his brother in Toronto and are of the opinion that he became weary and fell asleep at the wheel.

The accident caused an estimated $2,000 damage to the two late model cars.

Tea for 2

OAKVILLE, Ont. (CP)—French over a cup of tea—that's the solution two mothers came up with last summer for teaching their children French.

After the school holidays, nine other mothers got wind of the afternoon tea - and - French project and decided that not only was it a good thing for their children but for themselves.

Now Mrs. John Taylor and Mrs. I. A. Grieve, neighbors in this community about 20 miles southwest of Toronto, are inviting the mothers and about 30 children.

While the mothers are required to pick up the French taught their children, they must also learn the manners and social graces that accompany the language.

"The emphasis is on social conduct," explained Mrs. Taylor over a cup of tea. "One week it may be serving a French breakfast to their families at home and the next week, a French party lunch."

They also must hand in each week a summary of French-radio news broadcasts.

The project has become so successful that two mothers whose children do not attend the tea classes have become so accomplished that they take lessons home to the children.

As well, Mrs. Grieve has been hired by mothers of separate school children to handle four French lessons weekly at St. James Separate School.

For the summer, Mrs. Taylor has made arrangements with L'Institute Pedagogique of Montreal to have 10 graduates come and stay with local families.

Last Large Group of Soviet Troops in Cuba May Be Moved Out in Two Weeks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Johnson administration officials expect the last large group of Soviet troops in Cuba to be withdrawn within the next two or three weeks. The number due to leave is authoritatively estimated at about 3,000 officers and men.

The withdrawal, officials here understand, will leave in Cuba only a Soviet military mission, with advisory and training duties. This would number several hundred officers and men —perhaps 600 to 800.

The Soviet forces have been whittled down slowly over 18 months from an estimated top strength of 22,000 at the time of the nuclear missile crisis in October, 1962.

While cutting back their own forces the Russians have steadily built up Premier Castro's military forces. One of the final acts of the Soviet troop commander in Cuba, U.S. officials understand, will be to turn over to Castro's forces the operation of 24 anti-aircraft missile bases.

The surface-to-air missiles are capable of destroying even the high-altitude U.S. U-2 reconnaissance jets which regularly fly over Cuba to keep check on military installations.

Top Washington officials doubt, however, that Soviet Premier Khrushchev will give the Cuban Communists control of the weapons, since Soviet policy currently favors easing East-West tensions.

Making sure the weapons are not used by the Cubans contrary to Soviet purposes may be one of the tasks of the military mission remaining in Cuba.

DIRT AMERICANDER

President Johnson discussed the Cuban situation along with other Western Hemisphere problems in a meeting at the White House Friday with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

The United States is reported also to be ready to inform the Organization of American States that it will not tolerate any communist interference through the shipment of arms into a Latin-American country in an effort to promote revolution. The OAS is considering what to do about the case of some 3,000 tons of Soviet arms discovered in Venezuela a few months ago and declared by an OAS committee to be of Cuban origin.

The U.S. policy paper on Cuba, recently completed by the state department for use in talks with allied governments, says that Castro's military establishment is "by all odds the most powerful . . . in Latin America," but that its capacity is predominantly defensive.

The paper says Castro and the United States is trying to curb Castro's "will and ability to export subversion and violence to the other American states" by maintaining a "program of economic pressure."

It argues for allied support of this program on the ground that communist expansion can offer no only practicable alternative to military action which under present circumstances the United States has ruled out.

Editor Says R. C. Church 'Handmaid' of Nationalism In French-Speaking Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Walter O'Hearn, managing editor of the Montreal Star, says some Quebec clergy have used the Roman Catholic Church as the handmaiden of nationalism.

"For two generations, among the ultras at least, religion has been the handmaiden of racism," Mr. O'Hearn said Saturday. He participated in a panel discussion on bilingualism and biculturalism at a one-day seminar of the Montreal chapter of the National Secretaries' Association.

Speaking as a Roman Catholic, Mr. O'Hearn said: "I am enraged when my church is used as the handmaiden of any nationalism — Polish, Irish or French-Canadian."

Mr. O'Hearn said he fears the poisonous effects such use of religion could have on what he described as the "new elan" among Quebec youth. He warned that Roman Catholicism is not for the use of national ism."

"Many of the new elite are anti-clerical, or seem agnostic, although their cultural choice is clearly French," he said.

In the past some of the leaders and inspirers of French-Canadian nationalism in Quebec's history were "able to generate behind clerical immunity," men who were often "more nationalist than clerical."

SEES DANGER

The danger of the "confessional school system," he continued, "is that they (the clergy) wrap themselves in a mystique."

Mr. O'Hearn said the current dissension between the French- English-speaking Canadians had historical and philosophical roots.

He said Catholics, although "no less greedy than other people," are traditionally suspicious that an economic imbalance has been created in a Protestant - dominated West, founded on what he called a Calvinist - Protestant philosophy.

Also on the panel were Mrs. Solange-Chaput Rolland, an author and journalist, and Frank David, an editor of the Montreal French-language daily La Presse.

The three journalists agreed that French-speaking minorities in other provinces do not have the same rights as the English-speaking minority in Quebec.

Mr. David said French-speaking minorities in English-speaking provinces were robbed of their educational and language rights because Section 93 of the British North America Act leaves education in the hands of the provinces.

He said that in Ontario between 1912 and 1917 there was a provincial law forbidding the teaching of French "in any school whatsoever" in the province.

Mr. David also said English-speaking Canadians were "badly misinformed" about Quebec because of interpretations by the English-language press of articles published in Toronto newspapers.

Mr. Chaput-Rolland, a co-author with Cynthalyn Graham of the book Dear Enemies said she wanted "liberty, equality and fraternity" for French-speaking Canadians in other provinces. "This was not the case now, she said. The book deals with biculturalism in Quebec.

STRIKE SPARKS BOOM — Discovery of a huge deposit of copper, zinc and silver on near Timmins sparked a wave of wild trading in speculative mining stocks on the Toronto and Montreal stock exchanges. Dr. M. Nix To Be Speaker At Seminar

The 4th annual seminar of Region 3 Industrial Management Clubs of Canada will be held in Belleville on Saturday, April 25th, at Moira Secondary School.

Attendance from as far as Pembroke and Ottawa as well as from local areas is expected. Arrangements for the seminar are by the Quinte Chapter executive under the direction of Bill Gander and Frank Grandame.

The main seminar speaker will be Dr. Margaret Nix, Ph.D., of McGill University, noted speaker and leader in the field of health and social medicine and the first professional health educator in Canada. She is noted especially for her research in "Qualities of Leadership," "Motivation and Productivity," "The Criteria for Balanced Living" and "Making the Most of Oneself," subjects she will present at Saturday's seminar.

Dr. Nix has presented the above topics to other Industrial Management sponsored groups and almost without exception her dynamic presentation has received standing ovations. The Quinte Chapter feels the visit of Dr. Nix to the city will be the chapter highlight since its formation in the district.

Registration for Saturday's seminar at Moira school will take place between 8.30 a.m. and 9.30 a.m. Belleville Mayor H. R. Ellis will give a civic welcome, while Robert Temple, MP for Hastings South, will be a luncheon guest and will speak briefly.

26 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Traffic accounted for 20 of the 26 accidental deaths in Canada during the weekend.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local times showed Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick with fatality-free records.

Quebec led the other provinces with 11 deaths — eight on the highways, two drownings and one accidental shooting.

Ontario registered six deaths —three in traffic and three by fire.

Nova Scotia recorded three traffic deaths.

British Columbia also had three deaths, all on the highways. Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba had one traffic death each.

The survey does not include natural or industrial deaths, slayings or known suicides.

Kingston Man Fatally Shot While in Car

KINGSTON (CP)—A Kingston man died in hospital early today about two hours after he was wounded in the abdomen by a shotgun blast.

Police said the victim was James L. Sherman, about 27. An autopsy and an inquest will be held.

The shotgun discharged while the victim, a passenger in the back seat of a car, was being driven through downtown Kingston, police said.

Police would not disclose details of the shooting.

Unit Formed Confident Of Closing in on Strangler Of 11 Women in Two Years

BOSTON (AP) — A new-fashioned army is moving with assurance these days, confident that it is closing in on the enemy. Much of it was mobilized—the strangler of 11 women in less than two years.

The free-wheeling unit was organized in January by Attorney-General Edward W. Brooke after local police came up emptyhanded in independent investigations in four cities.

Assistant Attorney - General John S. Bottomly, 45, who heads the special "strangle division" in Brooke's office, said:

"I think we know who killed nine, possibly 10, of the 11 victims.

"We have six prime suspects. Three are confined in state institutions for other crimes. The other three are free, under surveillance.

"Of those six, one stands out as a better bet to be the strangler than the others—but like the other five he still falls just short of judicial proof of complicity."

Bottomly said there are divergent views among the investigators as to whether one man is responsible for all 11 crimes.

ONE RESPONSIBLE

He said his own theory is that six strangulings definitely were committed by the same person, and possibly as many as 10.

Bottomly's army is made up of hundreds.

There are specialists from the Boston police department. Eight of the stranglings took place in Boston.

There are experts from the police departments in Lynn, Salem and Lawrence. Those suburban cities had one strangling each.

State and metropolitan district police have been assigned to the strangle division.

On the theory that the killer is deranged, Bottomly recruited a special investigative team of doctors, psychiatrists and psychologists.

Forty-four lawyers are members of the team.

And for a back-up weapon, Bottomly borrowed from a private concern an electronic computer to record up to 1,000 pieces of information on the 10,000 persons who have figured in the investigation.

The computer has confirmed many suspicions, Bottomly said. It has come up with new angles and pointed out various threads of similarity in all the crimes.

Nine of the women lived alone. Two others had roommates who were absent at the time of the crimes.

In no case was there forced entry into the apartments.

The principal murder weapon was the woman's own nylon stockings. In some cases a scarf, a pillow case or a housecord cord was used.

Sexual aberrations were evident in all cases.

Just about all 11 women had had recent connections with a hospital, either as patients or as employees.

All 11 women lived in what Bottomly described as "marginal" apartments. That is, they were not expensive enough to have permanent service personnel.

"This leads us to an interesting conclusion," Bottomly said. "We have a pretty good idea how entry was gained and how each crime was committed."

He continued:

"A man would rap on the door of a woman he knew was alone and pose as a service man sent by the landlord.

"Once inside, he's pretend to look for a leaky pipe or some other malfunction — until the woman turned her back. She's only have to turn for no more than 10 seconds and the man would strike her, on the head or throat, thus disabling her."

FIRST IN 1962

The first strangling was June 14, 1962, and the most recent last Jan. 4. The victims' ages ranged from 19 to 75. Seven were past 50.

Bottomly said it is not unlikely that the killer hated his mother and in his own mind was killing her when he was strangling the other women.

To explore this possibility, Bottomly enlisted the aid of an anthropologist, to study the physical proportions of the victims.

Dr. Donald P. Kenefick, who heads the medical phase of the strangle division, said this work is like trying to reconstruct a distant star.

"We know the killer has to be taller than five feet three inches because no one shorter than that could have killed the women. It's none or taller than usual, he'd attract attention.

"We know he's fairly young because he's strong."

Said Bottomly: "The strangler has not struck anew since last Jan. 4. Every 24 hours that it ticked off by the clock reinforces our conclusions that we have the killer in custody."

And the commonwealth of Massachusetts has doubled to $10,000 its reward for apprehension of the strangler, or stranglers.

Two Prisoners Escape From Joyceville

KINGSTON (CP)—Police today were seeking two prisoners who escaped from Joyceville medium security prison 15 miles north of here.

Adolphe Karchesky, 44, of Montreal and Sil Galiape, Que., and Marcel Avelieno, 50, of Montreal and St. Jerome, Que., were discovered missing in cell counts Saturday night.

Prison officials believe the men crawled under a 15 - foot fence.

Both were sentenced for armed robbery, Karchesky to life imprisonment. Avelieno to an indeterminate term.

Galt Youth Arrested on Murder Charge

GALT (CP) — A 17-year-old Galt youth was arrested and charged early today with capital murder in the shooting death of a Galt watchmaker.

Beverly Dobson was arrested following a concentrated police search in a swamp near the scene of the shooting.

Shot to death Saturday night was Gordon Bryden, 53, when he, his wife and their two children, Paul, 14, and David, 11, returned to their home about a quie south of here after a visit with Galt and found a burglar in their home.

The intruder brandished a 22-calibre rifle and ordered the family to raise their hands. Instead, they attempted to flee and Mr. Bryden was shot in the back of the neck.

Seventy-five provincial police officers cordoned off and searched the swampy, wooded area around the house.

"I yelled to the children to get out of the house," said Mrs. Bryden. "Paul ran out of the door first, I followed and Gordon followed us.

"I heard a shot and saw Gordon stumble. David was still in the house when the shot was fired We ran to a neighbor to rail police."

CUT OFF PHONE

Mrs. Bryden tried to telephone police from the house, but the killer had ripped out telephone wires, ran from the front door of the house and into a field at the back.

H. F. Willmot, a neighbor, told police he saw a man carrying a rifle running across back lots on his property.

A man carry a 22-calibre rifle was picked up by police Saturday night but was released after he convinced police he was returning home, from hunting.

Mr. Bryden repaired watches and clocks in his home on consignment from jewelery stores in the district. There were several valuable items in the home, but police said none was taken. They believe the family surprised the prowler before he was able to locate them.

The free trade area between the two neighbors, gradually reducing cross - border tariffs while maintaining independent external economic policies, would be beneficial, he suggested, though he believed the initiative for such a move must come from Canada.

"Otherwise, Canadians might believe we are trying to swallow them up."

Herter said he believed big Canadian industrial interests would welcome a gradual free trade arrangement because this would give them unlimited access to a market of 185,000,000 people. The U.S., would benefit, he argued, by getting advance notice of access to Canada's huge supply of raw resources.

Other countries have problems as well. Herter noted that Canada's anti - dumping laws were criticized in the U.S. as well as in Britain as being too stringent.

Canada's automobile production incentive program, to provide tariff rebates as a means of encouraging exports, also has been sharply criticized in the U.S., especially by small independent parts manufacturers. One of these companies now has made a specific request that the U.S. apply countervailing duties against imports of Canadian automobiles and parts.

Herter said this is a question which is being handled strictly on its legal merits by the treasury department. A commerce department official said that if the treasury department finds there is a case for applying the countervailing duty, the effect would be to neutralize the Canadian program.

Free Trade Between U. S., Canada Highly Desirable Says Christian A. Herter

WASHINGTON (CP)—By nature and philosophy, Christian A. Herter is a free trader. And nothing would please him more as tariff negotiator more satisfaction, he suggests, than to see free trade area between Canada and the United States.

"This would be highly desirable," said the 59-year-old former U.S. state secretary as he prepared for talks in Ottawa where the Kennedy round of world tariff bargaining opens May 4.

Seeking relaxation of trade barriers everywhere, the eyes of the tall, lean, white-haired diplomat are especially on the European Common Market and on Canada—for different reasons.

Without a sincere willingness within the Common Market to trade tariff concessions in good faith, the Kennedy round of bargaining can collapse, he said.

"The going will be tough," he added in an interview. "I am hopeful, but there are some very difficult problems to work out.

MUST APPLY TO ALL

"Under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, you cannot provide tariff benefits for one country without giving the same benefits to the other countries. The Common Market is a discriminatory market area. If the Common Market says it has no intention of providing reciprocal concessions, we would not be willing to trade concessions with other GATT countries because the Common Market would get the benefit of these concessions without providing anything in return.

"This is a very difficult position and we intend to play the cutting out as far as we can with the Common Market."

As for Canada, Herter said he is aware there is a "feeling of malaise" in Canada-U.S. economic relations, particularly in automobile production policy, but he believes the two countries will get through it.

Bell Boys at Ledra Palace Become Guerrilla Fighters

NICOSIA (CP)—The bell boys of the Ledra Palace Hotel look as peaceful as could be in their sky blue uniforms with red epaulettes.

While they are doing their hotel duties, it' difficult to realize that in a flash they become guerrilla fighters in the battle between Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

Last Friday afternoon the youths carried automatic rifles and terrified hotel residents as they kept guard at bay while a Greek - Cypriot barricade was being established on the street in front of the hotel, built in 1949.

The barricade was torn down Saturday on orders of Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios, and Gen. P. S. Gyani, Indian Army commander of United Nations forces in Cyprus.

Clement Arens, manager of the Ledra Palace, said Sunday the hotel has been "in the fore of Cypriot activity since its opening" The hotel is near the "green line" separating the opposed Greek- and Turkish-Cypriots.

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Arens said, "the palace actually is one of the strategic points for the Greek-Cypriots.

"For a whole week in December there were only 12 residents and 10 employees in the hotel. We ate sandwiches for Christmas.

"Snipers' posts were established on the hotel roof and they had enormous quantities of ammunition in that week, enough to kill the island's entire population.

The Ledra Palace now is filled to capacity and employs 110 persons.

The small number of victims in proportion to the amount of ammunition fired is one of the oddities of the battle among opposed Cypriots.

Mr. Arens pointed out that the sustained firing from the hotel roof in December resulted in no more than about 60 deaths.

FEW VICTIMS

Last week when firing was virtually continuous, with the rattling of machine - guns frequently heard through long periods, the victims could be counted on the fingers of one hand.

A Canadian soldier on United Nations duty at a post near the green line described Sunday how the Greek-Cypriots in the Ledra Palace battle station use their weapons.

"They keep their heads low behind sand bags, raise their weapons above their heads and —as the trigger," the Canadian said.

Canadian soldiers say that firing in this manner "doesn't mean ace human life to any extent but certainly involves shameless risk.

Mr. Arens said hotel employees "feel that it is a national duty for them to get their weapons out after working hours and become sentries in Nicosia streets or to go out to the mountains and spend weekends on guard duty.

"They are good boys who don't want to kill anyone."

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

A new breeze which may blow itself into a revival of the ancient and honorable game of lacrosse is rippling the sports corriders of the city.

Recreation Commission's Norm Carter tells me that not a few inquiries have been made regarding digging the game out of the mothballs and reviving it on a minor basis.

"If sufficient interest is forthcoming, we will attempt to get the game going," he said. "A lot of the younger fellows seem interested."

However, a big hurdle faces those interested in the game's revival. That is the matter of coaches. Surely there are some men in the city who have or had a working knowledge of the game and could teach it to the youngers.

So anybody who has coaching knowledge and ability and would help to get the sport started are asked to get in touch with Norm Carter at the Recreation Commission.

Lacrosse was fairly popular here in the early thirties. This city had a good team in those days. I recall seeing a game played in Wellington that was featured by one of the players continually dropping his dentures. Six or seven times his "uppers" were jolted out of his mouth. He'd wipe them off on his shorts, stuff them back in his mouth and resume play.

Long before the palefaces invaded his territories, the Indian played lacrosse. They had a name for it — "baggataway."

The novel shape of the sticks used by the Indians reminded the first whites of a bishop's crozier. Hence the name "lacrosse."

The redskins had no set number of players for their teams. All the braves got into the act and the preliminaries were clobbering one another on the noggin until only a few were left. Then they got down to the business of scoring goals.

History says that baggataway was used by the wily Indians to perpetrate one of the worst massacres on record.

Stories differ as to who inspired it. One authority states that Pontiac, famous Ottawa's chief who liked the French and hated the English was the evil genius. He ordered a game to be played between the visiting Ojibways and Chippewas.

The game was played near Fort Mackinac. Soldiers and white civilians of the fort were invited to attend, but a suspicious commanding officer would have none of it.

However, as the game progressed the fort population trickled slowly from behind the palisades to get a closer view.

Indian squaws were seated in groups along the sidelines, covered with heavy blankets. When practically all the fort residents were outside and the main gate left open, a chief gave a signal.

The players dropped their sticks, rushed to the squaws who passed them tomahawks from underneath their blankets and dashed for the fort. The slaughter was on.

Mr. Carter seems to be quite enthusiastic about the revival of the game for the youngsters. "The Recreation Commission," he says, "will do all in its power if the response to the idea is sufficient to warrant it."

"Games could be played in the arena," he suggests, "or on outdoor patches. Lacrosse hasn't been played here in a number of years and the very novelty of it, I believe, would attract spectator attention.

"But," he added, "the primary necessity is coaches. So anyone who is willing to help start this line is asked to contact the commission. With three or four coaches we could get away to an early start."

Marlies Thump Trappers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It looks as if Toronto Marlboros have little to fear in the way of serious competition in their march toward the Memorial Cup finals.

They had no trouble with North Bay Trappers Sunday, shellacking the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A champs 13-3 at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The Marlies outclassed their opposition in size and speed, and only outstanding work by goalie Gary Cooley, who stopped 40 shots, kept the score as close as it was.

The Trappers may have been tired after their 60 trimming over Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., but they will have little chance for a rest with the second game scheduled for tonight in Toronto.

The best-of-seven series moves to North Bay Wednesday.

MONTREAL NEXT

Winner of the series will meet Montreal NDG Monarchs in a best-of-five series to decide the eastern Memorial Cup finalist. NDG walloped Ottawa Montagnards 11-3 Saturday to move into the eastern final.

Bathgate's 'Spectacular' Was Feature Keon's Two Paces Leafs To 4-2 Win

By DAVE BETTS

DETROIT (CP) — Sid Abel's team lost Saturday night, but one of his wishes was fulfilled.

Before the fourth game in the Stanley Cup finals the manager-coach of Detroit Red Wings expressed the hope that the winner would be decided before the last minute.

"This isn't exactly what I had in mind," Abel mused after Toronto Maple Leafs scored at 18:00 of the third period to wrap up a 4-2 win and even the series at two games apiece.

The 46-year-old coach, who was captain of three Red Wing Stanley Cup winners, had voted for an early decision in Saturday's game because the last three were decided or altered in the final minutes.

As he watched his cosmos-behind contingent clinch their sweaty uniforms and prepare to return to their Toledo, Ohio, hideout, Abel looked relaxed and confident as he discussed the rest of the series.

"Don't forget we were in this same situation with Chicago Black Hawks in the semi-finals," and we went out and dropped the next one too." But here we are in the final because our fellows refused to quit. We won the last two and licked them on their own ice."

LEAFS STRIKE QUICKLY

The Leafs hit fast Saturday, in contrast to their earlier efforts, and Dave Keon opened the first of his two goals in the first period, it was the opportunities blunted Toronto's attack while the Wings ran up a 2-1 lead on a short shot by Bruce MacGregor and a power-play slider by Gordie Howe.

Keon, who joined linemates Don McKenney and George Armstrong in harassing goalie Terry Sawchuk from the opening bang in the tying shot late in the second period while two Detroit defencemen were serving penalties.

This set the stage for the most spectacular goal of the series, the 45-foot winner by Andy Bathgate in the middle of the third.

Frank Mahovlich, who later scored the fourth Toronto goal on a rebound, fed the puck out of the Leaf zone past defenceman Marcel Pronovost. Bathgate gathered the puck on his curved stick - blade for about four seconds while he glided into Red Wing territory and sized up Sawchuk's quarters.

As Pronovost showed split-second indecision, Bathgate made a motion to cut away toward Red Kelly coming in from the opposite wing. Then he snapped his wrists and the puck rose like a frightened quail. Before Sawchuk could move, the screwed his curved stick - blade for about four seconds while he glided into Red Wing territory and sized up Sawchuk's quarters.

As Pronovost showed split-second indecision, Bathgate made a motion to cut away toward Red Kelly coming in from the opposite wing. Then he snapped his wrists and the puck rose like a frightened quail. Before Sawchuk could move, the slender blue puck cut through the air and the disc clipped the upper part of the post and plunked into the net.

"I saw it on his stick and the next thing I knew it was in," Sawchuk said.

"That..has to be my biggest goal for the Leafs," said Bathgate, who was a New York Ranger for 12 seasons before being traded this spring along with McKenney. "You know, they stayed with me, and I was worried coming from New York and then not being wanted."

ANDY WAS WORRIED

One fact lying thought he had won it early in the third period.

Larry Jeffrey, who scored in overtime in the second game in Toronto, was cruising past the open side of the Toronto net when Norm Ullman shot the puck across the goalmouth.

"I stuck out my stick and deflected it — I thought — past (Johnny) Bower," Jeffrey said. "I was sure it went in that way. I raised my stick and turned around to celebrate. The crowd was roaring, but when I looked back someone had the puck behind the net.

"I'll probably never know how I missed."

The Detroit Olympia crowd of 13,035—largest of the season—did an unusual thing when Bathgate scored. Many cheered.

Usually a gloomy silence prevails when the opposition makes good in the 12,500-seat arena, but hundreds of partisans recognized Bathgate's goal as a masterpiece.

Manager-coach Punch Imlach of Toronto said on the train home after the game: "Those two, Bathgate and Mahovlich, have the hardest shots in the league, but don't use them often enough. Tonight they shot, and look what happened."

Bathgate described the shot as "a sinker shot, like a baseball pitch."

SHOT ALMOST MISSED

"I went for the high part of the net on Sawchuk," he explained, "because he has a habit of crouching. When I slap the puck off my curved blade it seems to rise and then dip suddenly. That's what happened. I went over the net but dropped just enough to get under the bar."

The Wings flew to Toronto today for Tuesday's fifth game. The Leafs practised Monday Saturday at Maple Leaf Gardens and planned a longer workout for today.

Both goalies continued to give all-star efforts Saturday night. Sawchuk robbed Gaffney several times and stopped Armstrong, Mahovlich and Gerry Ehman on breakaways. Bower outgeneased captain Alex Delvecchio on a breakaway and made sharp saves on Howe, MacGregor and John MacMillan, an ex-Leaf called up for penalty-killing duty.

Toronto's final goal was a third try. Bob Pulford and Ron Stewart carried the puck in on a clean breakaway, but on the second shot Sawchuk fell and the puck went back to Mahovlich. Sawchuk was down but still lighting when Mahovlich flicked in his fourth goal of the playoffs.

Rosaire Palemont scored two goals for Waterloo while Jacques Kilne, Jim Lorenzi, Bobby Bauer, Gary Phillips, Larry Dietrich, Ron Speers and Warren Ferguson scored one each.

Jim Japp with two, Alex Osborne and Bob Collins were the Weston marksmen.

Senator Star Pulls Boner

Yankees Break Three-Loss Egg

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Rookie manager Yogi Berra finally tasted the fruits of victory as his last-place New York Yankees won their first game of the American League season Sunday after three straight extra-inning defeats.

A fallow with an entirely different taste in his mouth today must be Chuck Hinton, brilliant but erratic Washington outfielder and the goat of the Senators' 5-1 defeat by Kansas City Athletics.

After catching Jim Gentile's fly with one out and the bases full in the fifth inning, Chuck headed for the dugout, thinking it was the third out. Nelson Mathews scored from third and Ed Charles from second as Hinton trotted towards the dugout, ball in hand.

The Yankees handed Baltimore its first defeat in five games, 5-3, but Baltimore retained their hold on first place, as the second-place Minnesota Twins split a doubleheader with Detroit Tigers. The Twins won the opener 12-3 and Detroit took the second 3-1.

Chicago White Sox blasted Boston Red Sox 10-0, as Twinclad doubleheader between Los Angeles Angels and the Indians at Cleveland was postponed because of rain.

In Saturday's games the Orioles edged the Yankees 2-1 in 12 innings ,the Twins outlasted Washington 8-6 in 10 innings, Detroit shaded Boston 4-3 and Chicago whipped Boston 10-5, and Kansas City and Cleveland were rained out.

Sunday's defeat was the fourth in six games for the Senators but it is doubtful any of the previous losses rankled Hodges more. He had vowed the Senators would cut down their mental mistakes.

"We made too many fundamental mistakes last year," he said in spring training. "Too many times we gave the opposition another run. It's my job to see that we don't make the same mistakes this year."

And he singled out Hinton as one of the guilty ones.

"Hinton has the good as he wants to be," he said. "I don't believe he has extended himself as he might have last season. He has it in him to be a terrific player but he must realize that baseball demands all-out performance at all times."

Mantle for Kansas contributed only two hits, triples by Don Blasingame and Ed Bressan, in the rain-shortened finale of a scheduled double-header. Kansas City's first victory of the season.

Joe Pepitone drove in two runs with his first hits of the season as Detroit won the opener on four hits in Detroit's nightcap triumph.

Rookie Jim Bunning of Detroit pitched his first complete game of the season in the nightcap. He scattered six hits, struck out seven and walked two.

Bunning's one-strike decision with a 71-68-56-70—275 — six under par—broke a victory drought that extended back to the Greensboro Open in 1955.

Nicklaus, in his third near miss at Houston in as many years, went over the 18th hole of the final round to miss a tie, but second-place earnings for his 68-66-71—270 boosted his 1956 tournament income to $34,150, compared to Palmer's $33,485.50.

Chi Chi Rodriguez finished third with a 280 worth $3,300. Both Casper and Rodriguez finished out of the money. At Johnston of Montreal finished with a 75 for 290, as Wilt Homenuik of Winnipeg shot his second straight 76 Saturday to miss the cutoff for the final round at 222.

Plan Hoop Team For Olympics

VANCOUVER (CP)—A drive has begun to put life back into Canadian basketball at the international level and get a Canadian all-star team to the 1964 Olympic Games at Tokyo.

An "emergency Olympic basketball project" plan was submitted to the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association executive Saturday by CABA president F. D. (Luke) Moyls.

Moyls' proposal is a carbon copy of the Olympic hockey training program established by the University of British Columbia by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and coach Father David Bauer.

It is designed to counter the move by the Canadian Olympic Association to drop basketball from the Canadian Olympic team because of the losing performance by an unprepared Tillsonburg, Ont., team in the 1960 Games at Rome.

If the CABA approves the plan, a national coach will be named who will be completely responsible for selection and training of a team.

Both suspensions were for attacks on officials during the past season.

Wins By Stroke At Houston

Souchak Nips Nicklaus

HOUSTON (AP) — The PGA golf tour has its 18th champion in as many tournaments and a new leading money winner for 1956.

Big Mike Souchak won $7,500 and his second Houston Classic championship Sunday and Jack Nicklaus, with $4,000 as runner-up, took over first place in the 1956 money race from the idle Arnold Palmer.

Souchak's one-stroke decision with a 71-68-70-273 — six under par—broke a victory drought that extended back to the Greensboro Open in 1955.

Nicklaus, in his third near miss at Houston in as many years, went over the 18th hole of the final round to miss a tie, but second-place earnings for his 68-66-71—270 boosted his 1956 tournament income to $34,150, compared to Palmer's $33,485.50.

Mays Hits Six For Six

Batting .391

By MURRAY CHASS
Associated Press Sports Writer

Willie Mays never sizzled so much even in his stickball days on the steaming streets of New York.

The San Francisco slugger socked his sixth home run in six games Sunday and drove in three runs for a total of 12 in the Giants' 13-6 romp over Cincinnati Reds. His three hits increased his batting average to .391.

The skyrocketing start is the best for the 22-year-old centre fielder since he joined the Giants in 1951, the year he also started playing stickball with the kids in Harlem.

"I've had higher batting averages early in the season, but nothing all around like this," Mays said after the game. "I can't explain it. I'm not even going to try. I'm just happy I'm playing the way I'm playing."

Mays' slugging percentage shows how phenomenal his performance in the first week of the season has been. With 27 total bases—he has three singles to go with his home runs—in 23 times at bat, his slugging mark is 1.174. Compare this with Mays' career percentage of .586, the all-time high in the National League.

OUTHITS THE DODGERS

Mays, in fact, has a better record than Los Angeles Dodgers as a team. The world champions have hit four homers and have scored 13 runs in compiling their worst start since arriving in Los Angeles in 1958.

The Dodgers dropped their fifth straight game Sunday, losing 3-2 to Milwaukee Braves in 13 innings. Elsewhere in the league, New York Mets stopped Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0 for their first victory after four defeats, Philadelphia Phillies trounced Chicago Cubs 9-1 behind the hitting of rookie Richie Allen and St. Louis cardinals whipped Houston Colts 8-1 as Bob Gibson hurled a four-hitter.

On Saturday Jim Maloney and John Tsitouris combined on a one-hitter as the Reds blanked the Dodgers 3-0, the Cardinals shaded the Giants 2-1, the Cubs belted the Phillies 7-0, the Pirates downed the Mets 9-3 and Houston whipped the Braves 4-2.

Mays smashed his latest homer in the eighth inning against the Reds. His two-run single in the Giants' nine-run sixth helped put the game beyond Cincinnati's reach. He led off the inning with a walk.

Jesus Alou also contributed a two-run single in the inning and drove in a later run with an infield out.

IGNITES A RALLY

The Dodgers, who haven't won since Sandy Koufax beat St. Louis in the opener, lost when Felipe Alou singled and Ed Mathews doubled him home in the 12th. Don Drysdale pitched perfect ball until the sixth and kept the Braves hitless through 6 1-3 innings. At that point Hank Aaron ignited a two-run rally with a double.

Los Angeles, now in the cellar, has scored only two runs in the last 23 innings.

Even the Mets are ahead of the Dodgers. They got them mainly through the pitching of Al Jackson, who scattered six hits against the Pirates. Ron Hunt and Rod Kanehl each drove across two runs as the Mets enjoyed their lustiest hitting of the young season.

Allen blasted two solo home runs against the Cubs, bringing his total to three. He also batted in a run with a single as he raised his average to .429. Phillies' starter Dennis Bennett allowed 12 hits but got tight each time Chicago threatened. The victory was the fourth in five games for the Phils.

Gibson allowed the Colts only one hit after the second inning as he won his second game. The right-hander walked seven and struck out eight. Julian Javier backed Gibson's mound performance with a two-run homer and a run-scoring bunt.

Belleville District Softball

League Still 'Up in Air'

There are four teams prepared to play ball in the Belleville and District Softball League this summer but it's not that simple a matter it was learned at the league's entry deadline meeting yesterday.

Trenton Motors, Belleville Juniors and Tweed Lombanks turned out to the meeting, apparently prepared to file entry. And word was also forwarded from Trenton that the town also had a definite entry.

President Harold Bawden, chairing the meeting, announced that Joyce Realty had now apparently had a change of heart and was in the "double-fist" class as a league entry.

Bawden had been informed of this by Joyce manager Bill Shaw shortly before the meeting. Shaw said that sponsor Gerry Joyce was out of town for several more days "and as things stand now I cannot enter the club on my own.

Earlier Shaw had indicated the loss of several key players plus help on the club's executive level was making it difficult for him to line up the Joyce squad as a definite entry.

The unsettled status of the Joyce club, plus the fact that Trenton did not have a team representative at the meeting, caused Tweed's representatives to hold fire with the filing of their entry.

League vice-president Frank Trenton told the meeting: "I was talking to Howard Cole yesterday and he said that Trenton will definitely be in the league. They have secured Commercial Printing as a team sponsor and have Charlie Drake lined up as coach and Wayne Drake as team manager. Cole said there was no doubt whatsoever that the team would enter."

Jack Fisher, of Tweed, inquired as to why the Trenton team was not represented at the meeting and was told that arrangements had just been completed there and they had asked Insley to speak for the team.

Dick Ellis submitted the entry fee for the junior team and also offered to put it up for the Trenton club "if it will make the Tweed boys feel more secure". Ron Fralick was also prepared to pay the Trudeau fee with cash but Tweed stuck to it's guns in "we'll see if Trenton and/or Joyces do come in".

The Tweed team will also be represented at a meeting of the Trent Valley Softball League being held early this week and th. thought was voiced that Lombanks wanted to wait and see which league looked best. Fisher said that the team preferred the Belleville loop but "if our own Belleville teams do not have their entry fees in now, why should we commit ourselves?"

At any rate, another meeting has been called for Thursday night of this week, at Club Casino at seven o'clock sharp.

"I would have folded it up right here today if some of these other team representatives had not offered to give Joyces and Trenton some lee way," said President Bawden, "but Thursday is it. If we do not have the money for at least four entries in our hands, it's all over", he concluded.

It had been decided earlier to allow the Joyce team until next Sunday to file entry since Mr Joyce would be out of town until the middle of the week.

This still holds good but unless at least four of the five possible entries are a matter of record by Thursday night, there will be no league in enter by next Sunday.

South Hastings Baseball

Six Teams Form League

The South Hastings Baseball League got away to a flying start at the annual meeting held on Sunday.

Six teams officially entered the league while the circuit will be governed by an executive consisting of two members of each club.

Deseronto applied for entry and was accepted, completing the six-club circuit.

Other teams are the "old rebiabled" Latta, Tyendinaga, Canifton, Read and Shannonville.

Secretary - treasurer Wally Dever who chaired the Sunday meeting states that the league will play triple-headers with official opening slated for May 20th.

The opening date sees Latta at Tyendinaga, Canifton at Read and Deseronto at Shannonville.

The complete schedule will be drawn up in the near future.

The league will play on Wednesdays and Saturdays with some games scheduled for Sundays.

Weekday games will get under way at 6:30 p.m. and Sunday games at two o'clock.

Peterboro Championships

Apollo Lifters Set Marks

The Belleville Apollo Bar-Bell Club won all events but one in the Peterborough District and Canadian intermediate weightlifting championships at Peterborough Saturday.

All Apollo lifters broke their own records and won first place in the bantam, feather, light, and middle-heavy classes. Peterborough won the light-heavy title.

Coach Ken Carr-Braint thinks Price Mirris stands a good chance to win the Canadian intermediate title although results will not be known for three weeks. The competition is a telegraph affair.

Canadian middle-heavy champion John Lewis was a guest lifter and broke the Canadian heavyweight Snatch record with a lift of 306 pounds.

Doug Hepburn set the former mark of 220 pounds in 1951 when he weighed 285 pounds. Lewis was nearly four pounds over the middle-heavyweight class weight.

Space does not permit the individual marks in all phases of lifting but here are the Apollo winners and totals.

Heavy (guest) John Lewis, 975; Price Morris (heavy) 870; M. Bly (181) pounds 505; D. DiPrucsio (165) 525; D. Hay (148), 555; Bob Wait (132), 455; Carr-Braint (90) 235.

Peterborough scores were — G. Bennett and C. Nicholas (181) 660 and 715; R. Webb and A. Garavagio (148) 400 and 495; L. Cohoen (132), 400.

Wins Big One At Aqueduct

'Quadrangle' Derby Threat

NEW YORK (AP)—Quadrangle served notice Saturday that the Kentucky Derby is far from two-horse race as he withstood a long drive for a one-half length victory over Mr. Brick in the 40th running of the $80,250 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct.

Running as if to show Bold Hill Rise and Northern Dancer, owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto, will not have the May 2 derby to themselves, Quadrangle went the 1¼ miles in 1:49 1-5.

Mr. Brick, who set practically all of the early pace, was 1¾ lengths in front of Roman Brother, who had 4½ lengths on traffic.

To time compared with Bold Ruler's stake record of 1:48 4-5 and the track mark of 1:48 1-5.

In earning $58,972 to boost his total earnings to $199,069, the Rockaby Stable colt paid $14.40, $5.80 and $4.20.

Mr. Brick, choice in the field of nine three-year-olds, returned $4.10 and $3. Roman Brother paid $3.50.

A crowd of 58,132, largest of the New York season, saw the race in sweltering 85 - degree temperatures on a fast track.

LONGDEN HITS AGAIN

In Albany, Calif., Real Good Deal, ridden by 37 - year - old Johnny Longden, won the $59,900 California Derby at Golden Gate Fields, standing off the challenge of Wil Rad with Willie Shoemaker aboard.

Or El Argent finished third in the 1¼-mile test for three-year-olds as the favored Nearco Blue finished fifth, six lengths behind the victor.

Longden, the world's winningest jockey, sent the son of the Pia King to the force in the back stretch and held on to win by three-fourths of a length before a crowd of 30,000.

Although Real Good Deal remains eligible for the Kentucky Derby, his owner, Elwood R. Johnston of Pasadena, Calif., said he did not plan to send the winner to Churchill Downs.

Real Good Deal earned $37,400 and boosted his over-all earnings to $95,252.

The owner of, Wil Rad said he will make the trip for the Kentucky Derby and he ridden by Ismael Valenzula.

Longden called Real Good Deal "a great runner" as the veteran jockey won race No. 5,810.

Real Good Deal paid $10.20, $4.20 and $3.60.

Wil Rad returned $4 and $3.40 while Or El Argent paid $6.20 to show.

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR

WHEN THE FAIR: The Fair will run daily (including Sundays and holidays) for two seasons: April 22 — Oct. 18, and April 21 — Oct. 17, 1965 — a total of 360 days. Gates to the fair grounds no longer open at 9:30 a.m. The exhibits will open at 10 a.m. and close between 10 p.m. and midnight. Many amusements, concessions, restaurants and shows will remain open until 2 a.m.

THE PLACE: Flushing Meadow Park, the Fair site, is in New York City's Borough of Queen's, less than ten miles from Times Square. This is the same site that housed the New York World's Fair of 1939-1940. The 646 acres of fair-grounds are laid out in five areas: Industrial, international, federal and states, transportation and lake amusement. There will be some 150 exhibit pavilions, plus other structures. The space not taken up by pavilions will include parks, woods, a lake, walkways, fountains and miscellaneous buildings.

GETTING THERE: New York City is a hub for every form of transportation. Fair goers can reach it by any plane arriving on the continent by modern highway or railroad from any place in the world by air or ship. Once in New York the ways to the Fair will be many — by car, via the Queen's Midtown Tunnel or over the Triborough, Bronx — Whitestone, Queensboro or Throgs Neck Bridges.

—By subway via any one of the city's three subway lines — IRT, BMT and IND. There are 236.7 miles of subway in New York, and the Fair can be reached from any point in the system for 15 cents. Directions will be marked with blue arrows.

— By helicopter from the Port of New York Authority's heliport in Manhattan, or from Newark, LaGuardia or John F. Kennedy Airports.

— By boat, private or public to the new Flushing Bay Marina. (At least a half million visitors are expected to journey to the Fair this way.)

—By bus or taxicab. Bus fares within New York City is 15 cents; cabs charge 25 cents for the first 1/4 of a mile and 5 cents for each additional fifth. Cab drivers, briefed by the Fair, will aid you in planning your visit.

WHAT IT COSTS: An admission ticket is required for each visit to the Fair. At the gate tickets will cost $2 per adult and $1 per child (ages 3-12). But before February 29, 1964, tickets that will be good for any day at the Fair will be purchased at considerable discount through bulk orders and other special offers. For information consult your CAA Club or write to:

World's Fair Tickets,
Suite 4020, Time and Life Building,
New York, New York 10020

The Fair estimates that the average adult visitor will spend $7.50 per day at the Fair (most of the attractions are free, but restaurants rides and some shows will charge), while $5.45 will be spent by each child. The Fair's statisticians have also estimated the average number of times visitors are expected to attend. Residents of New York's metropolitan area will come to the Fair an average of 5.11 times, Americans from more than a thousand miles distant will see the Fair an average of 2.56 times, and foreign visitors 1.2 times.

WHERE TO STAY: Over 350 hotels and motels in the New York area have signed an agreement not to raise rates during the Fair season. For general or specific aid in picking a place to stay and in making reservations, consult your local CAA Club.

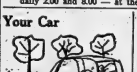
WHERE TO PARK: There will be four huge parking areas bordering the fair grounds, with a combined capacity of 29,000 cars. In addition, when Shea Stadium is not in use for other attractions, its 9,000-car parking lot will be available to Fairgoers. The charge for parking is $1.50 per day in any of these locations. Flushing Airport, a short bus ride away, will also provide parking space at $1.50 per day.

HOW TO GET ABOUT: On the fair grounds, the footsore can see the sights from any of 300 vehicles operated by the Ford-bound corporation. These include:

— Full sized, air-conditioned, glass-topped sightseeing buses, which will tour the grounds.

— Glide-a-ride Tractor - trains that will take 60 people on an open-air tour all around the Fair.

— Four-passenger "Escorters" each with a bench-like seat plus a backseat driver who answers questions.



WHERE TO EAT: Some 75 restaurants, including 11 operated by the Brass Rail Corporation, will be spotted through the Fair, to cater to all budgets and appetites. Food will range from foot-long hot dogs to epicurean delights.

WHILE IN NEW YORK: A visit to the Fair is a visit to New York — and New York likes to call itself "A Summer Festival." Visitors may take in a play in the drama capital of the U.S., dine in one of the more than 16,000 eating places that make New York a kind of international exposition in its own right, see sights in any of the city's 35 museums and art galleries. They can enjoy the great new Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, where special programs are scheduled for the World's Fair season, sit in at the United Nations, watch the Yankees or the Mets, walk through Times Square, Rockefeller Center, past the famed shops on Fifth Avenue. All these attractions are but a few minutes from the Fair.

AT THE BELLE — Elizabeth Taylor as "Cleopatra" on her triumphant entrance into Rome. The 20th Century-Fox DeLuxe Color spectacle, winner of 4 Academy awards, also starring Richard Burton and Rex Harrison, "Cleopatra", is showing Today, Tuesday and Wednesday, daily 2.00 and 8.00 — at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

Air Leakage Can Smother Car Engine

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Air is important to proper combustion, but too much is as bad as too little. It is generally how leaking into the intake manifold, the engine will idle roughly, tend to stall and in general will act as if all of its former pep and power have been exhausted. The reason is that the air excess is upsetting carburetion.

Air leakage can be due to cracks or looseness at the carburetor mounting, the cylinder head or the manifold joints . . . or th a damaged gasket at one of these points. Sometimes the fault lies where you might least suspect — windshield wipers, for example. If they are connected to the manifold in order to obtain vacuum power for their operation, check the hose. It may be punctured or loosely connected allowing air to leak into the manifold.

From L.S.: "In discussing those that appear to be, you overlooked the hose leading from the main line."

Our apologies. . .you're right. The flexible connection between the pump and the rigid fuel line can deteriorate, permitting leakage or clogging.

T. G. writes: "My radiator loses water during highway driving, but never in the city or around town. The pressure cap and thermostat are OK, new radiator hoses were tried, but the trouble continues."

Head gasket leakage when high speeds build up pressure could be the reason.

W. D. asks: "When my engine tends to overheat in warm weather, and the car is sluggish, could spark plugs settings he at fault? They have been in use now for some time."

It's possible, since incorrect plug caps can cause all sorts of poor performance symptoms.

From M. N.: "Last weekend, I saw a disabled car on the parkway with smoke pouring out of the left front wheel. Could this have been due to a burning brake lining?"

Perhaps — or it may have been caused by a front wheel bearing that ran dry of lubricant.

AT THE PARK — Iris Marchant (Barbara Murray) finds Sir Lancelot (James Robertson Justice) to be a far from willing subject for her physiotherapy treatment in this scene from the new Rank Organisation film, "Doctor in Distress" in Color and opening Tonight at the Park Theatre for a three day engagement only. On the same program "Some People", in color starring Kenneth More, Ray Brooks and Angela Douglas. One complete show starts at 7.30 p.m. "Some People" at 7.40 and "Doctor in Distress" at 9.25 p.m.

British Soccer Scandal

Accuse Six More Players

LONDON (AP) — Six more soccer players were accused by a newspaper Sunday of having accepted bribes to throw matches for a gambling syndicate.

The newspaper, The People, named three players last week whom it contended that thrown matches and won money on bets.

One of the latest players named is a former Scottish international goalkeeper. The group also includes a York City player whom the paper said was the chief man in the rigging ring for years.

The others, the paper said, now play for the Scottish club St. Mirren, Bath City and Walsall, Lincoln City and Bradford City.

The People wrote that a goalkeeper in the ring confessed that on one occasion he had great difficulty in making sure his team lost.

The players in the ring who, the paper said, often did not know which other matches were being fixed, were picked through Jimmy Gauld, ex-Carlton and Everton player.

FINED LAST FALL

Gauld was fined £60 last November on charges of attempting to bribe Oldham Athletic Club players to lose matches.

Among the latest named were Beri Linnecore, Lincoln City, and John Fountain, York City, both suspended by their clubs.

Also named were Peter Wragg, Bradford City, who denied the allegation, and Ron Howells, Walsall.

Earlier, a Sheffield bookmaker, James Thorpe, said at least two matches were fixed each week last season.

"Without fall last season I was told they would go," he said.

Thorpe added he had not received any information about fixes this season.

Garden Club Convener Appointed

LILY PLANTER

Everything's come up roses for Mrs. Lester, green-thumbed matron of the local Garden Club. "In my opinion" she says "getting there is most of the fun when it comes to club excursions. That's why we go Canadian National. With CN's Group Plans, the larger our party, the bigger the savings! Smaller groups of 5 or more members can save from 10% to 20%. And this is even over and above CN's Red 'Bargain' or White 'Economy Day Fares'" chirped Mrs. Planter. "Or we can save as much as 38% by chartering a CN coach. Then 60 or more of us can all travel together in air-conditioned comfort. For overnight trips, we charter our 'own' sleeping car. And Canadian National always takes such extra special care of our wild flowers."

Five North Americans Lead 57 Remain In Car Rally

By STEPHEN SCOTT

CALGARY (CP)—Five North American entries were in front of the fourth annual cross-Canada auto rally today after two of their chief European opponents were knocked out on a rugged 30-mile stretch of mountain road.

As the 57 remaining cars in the six-day Montreal-Vancouver rally started a muddy, dusty 16 hour run to Saskatoon these were the leaders.

Scott Harvey and Bob Mollman of Dearborn Heights, Mich., and Cleveland; and Maurice Carter and Ian M. Worth of Toronto and Lachine, Que.

Harvey and Mollman were in a manufacturer-entered Valiant while Carter was in a sponsored Chevy II.

Both arrived in Calgary after surviving a rugged speed test of 30 miles through the Cascade Mountains that awed even veteran rally men with no penalty points against them.

In a rally the car with the least penalty points, assessed for a wide variety of infractions including proceeding between points too fast or too slowly and not keeping to a set speed, is the winner.

Grouped in third place with only one penalty point were Klaus D. Ross and John Bird of Toronto in a manufacturer's Volvo, Lu Lalonde and John Jones of Toronto in a sponsored Chevy II and John Merriman and Paul C. Manson of Toronto in a leased, privately-entered Chevelle.

All five were in the running for the $1,000 first prize for the over-all winner and Merriman was leader for the $1,000 for the first privately-entered car.

Ann Hall of Huddersfield, England, a veteran rallyist, was the leading European in the rally, tied with Fredric J. Hayes of Toronto with three penalty points.

Behind her came Olivier Gendebien of Belgium with four points.

Art Carney, Lucille Ball, Bob Hope Hold Spotlight

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Matthews was a middle-aged widower, worried about his work, shut out of his children's busy lives, desperately lonely.

After a particularly frustrating day, he mistook poison for a headache remedy. Helpless and believing he was dying, he reviewed the day only to discover that the events he thought important were really unimportant.

That, in essence, was the plot of Sunday night's NBC drama, A Day like Today by Stanley R. Greenberg. It proved to be a most interesting hour, imaginatively produced.

Art Carney played the shy, colorless Matthews with enormous perception.

Lucille Ball and Bob Hope had an hour's romp on CBS Sunday night, a program in which most any standards was both good and bad.

They played Bonnie and Bill, Mr. and Mrs. America, the most popular TV couple.

All this would have been pretty gruesome in almost any other hands. Happily both Miss Ball and Hope can extract laughs from a stone.

Lisa Howard, ABC reporter, went to Cuba several weeks ago and Sunday there was a Cuban special — without commercial sponsors—about her visit.

Miss Howard met the Canadian camera crew could hardly do much tough probing. But even though much of the hour was an obvious Cuban attempt at propaganda, it was interesting to get a peek behind the sugar curtain.

CAMPBELLFORD — Bemersyde Chapter I.O.D.E. held their regular meeting on Thursday evening, April 16th in Christ Church Parish Hall with 19 members present.

In the absence of the Regent, Mrs. W. E. Kingston who was attending the annual Provincial meeting in Hamilton the meeting was conducted by the Vice-Regent Mrs. F. M. Rutherford.

Another invitation was received from the Campbellford Hospital Auxiliary to attend open house on Saturday, May 9th. The Chapter voted to also support the Girl Guides who are sponsoring Bicycle Show 'Tina in the Old Fashioned Days' on Tuesday evening April 21st.

USE FALLEN MONEY

In the group reports, two groups are using talent money to make their allocation, one group is holding an auction sale in July, one group has already completed its project by holding a fashion show which netted over two hundred dollars.

Mrs. E. Crydeman reported as Educational Secretary. It was decided by ballot vote to increase the loan given to students for higher education to $300, and also decided by ballot to dispense with the bursary for this year. In the administration of the loan, the maximum to each student will now be $300 per year but the loan is available to as many students as may apply, the only stipulation is that repayment must begin the first earning year.

A $50 scholarship was awarded to Northumberland Music Festival to be given for the highest mark for accordion solo.

Mrs. A. Whitfield reported for the nominating committee and gave a fine detailed report of the situation in Cyprus, stating that the situation is now quite side by side with the turbulent present.

Mrs. H. Locke reported that preparations are well under way for the annual birthday tea of the chapter to be held at the home of Mrs. J. Connor on April 30th.

Mrs. R. Douglas read minutes of a meeting held over thirty years ago which recalled pleasant memories for older members of the chapter.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. S. Hopping, group 3 in charge. Mrs. W. Fraser, convenor.

At the close of the meeting, lunch was served by group 2.

Castro Charges U. S. Marines Insult Cubans

HAVANA (AP) — Premier Fidel Castro charged Sunday night U.S. Marines guarding throwing rocks and shouting insults at Cuban soldiers along the frontier of the U.S. base at Guantanamo Bay.

He said these were provocations against Cuban sovereignty made with the full knowledge of the United States, and that he had protested to the United States strenuously. Call after 5. 70 John Street, Trenton.

Premier Castro spoke at a rally marking the 3rd anniversary of the defeat of the U.S.-backed invasion of Cuba at the Bay of Pigs.

He said the U.S. Marines at Guantanamo "have been ordered to provoke us, to insult us, to humiliate us, to make us react."

Castro added: "We are not going to react. We are not going to fall into the trap."

Castro said the Marines were "ordered to provoke us with the hope that we will react and that we will be the aggressors."

Lead Western Finals 2-0

Maroons Edge Quakers 7-5

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons withstood a third-period assault by Saskatoon Quakers Sunday for a 7-5 victory and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Western Canada Allan Cup final.

Elliott Chorley's goal with 72 seconds remaining snapped a 5-5 tie forged by Saskatoon when the visitors rebounded from a 5-3 second-period deficit.

The series shifts to Saskatoon for games Wednesday, Friday and Monday if necessary. Any remaining games will be played back in Winnipeg.

Defencemen Bill Johnson and centre Aggie Kukulowicz, paced the Maroons with two goals each. Ross Parke, Chorley and Al Johnson each counted once. Johnson scored on an empty net with 14 seconds remaining.

Don Smith, Herb Jeffrey, Frank Kuzma, George Hunchuk and Bob Kortje scored for Saskatoon.

The Tracks

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Northern Dancer, the little Canadian colt, will make his final start before the Kentucky Derby in the $25,000-added Blue Grass Stakes Thursday at Keeneland.

Trainer Horatio Luro does not plan to give Northern Dancer a race over the Churchill Downs track before the May 2 Run for the Roses.

Northern Dancer, a son of Nearctic-Natalma, made his last start April 4 in the Florida Derby and was an easy but unimpressive winner over most of the top three-year-olds in the East.

Foaled at E. P. Taylor's Windfields farm near Toronto, Northern Dancer has never been out of the money and has a bank roll of $216,365.

A field of eight or nine is expected to oppose the Dancer in the mile and one-eighth Blue Grass, the last distance prep for the Derby.

TOURS COURSES

GOODWOOD, England (CP) — Ralph Hubbard, clerk of this Sussex race course, set out on a three-week tour of courses in the U.S. and Canada to study ways to improve attendance at meets.

CROSSES OF NAILS

COVENTRY, England (CP)— The provost of Coventry Cathedral, Very Rev. H. C. N. Williams, will present crosses made of medieval nails from the blitzed cathedral to churches in Montreal, Washington and New York. The cross of nails, an idea begun in the Second World War, has become a symbol of Christian unity, to be set up in centres where active work has been done toward unity and international reconciliation through the church.

Nightly Fistcuffs May Be Childhood Hangover

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Jake and I have been married 12 years. He is a considerate man who loves his children, his home and me. A woman couldn't ask for a better husband. There is only one thing that bothers me. I think I have the answer figured out, but I want your opinion before I settle on it.

ANN LANDERS

Jake and I sleep in a big bed — what you might call a king-size. His always has been a restless sleeper, but lately he is more restless than ever. He has hit me a few times in his sleep. The next morning he doesn't remember anything. Last week he almost broke my nose.

I know Jake used to sleep with his brother Max when he was a kid and they fought all the time. (They still do.) I think when Jake hits me he is dreaming of his childhood and he thinks he is hitting Max. May I have your opinion. — NOT MAD.

DEAR NOT MAD — After 12 years I would hope your husband doesn't think he is still sleeping with his brother. But dreams often take us back a good many years, and it may well be that Jake is reliving his childhood. You are (to understate it) generous to give him the benefit of the doubt. Jake should be equally generous and buy you twin beds.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Today two friends dropped by and four women telephoned to ask, "What's new?" The last gal I talked to said, "Liz, you know everything! You're better than the newspaper."

This caused me to stop and take stock of myself. Am I the town Big Mouth? Is this why friends come over? Is this why I get at least five telephone calls a day? I hate to think so, but I'm afraid it's true.

I love people. I'm not vicious and I wouldn't call myself a gossip, but I just can't seem to keep news to myself. If I know something I have to tell it.

At the moment I dislike myself intensely for talking so much. Will you please discuss this in your column and express your views? — WHAT'S NEW.

DEAR WHAT'S — No one sees himself as a vicious gossip but by your own admission, you are a central clearing house for information. You do it because it gives you a feeling of importance.

I've said it before but I'll say it again — perhaps you will recognize yourself somewhere between the lines. Brilliant people talk about ideas. Ordinary people talk about things. Small people talk about other people.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Almost a year ago I made a $5 bet with one of my best friends. She said your column was on the level and that people really do have all those problems.

I said either you make up those letters or the people who write to you make them up because such things just don't happen.

To prove my point, I bet my friend $5 that I could make up ten letters and that you would fall for at least one. I knocked my brains out composing letters I thought would make great reading.

Well you didn't tumble for a single letter and now I have to pay the $5. Please tell me how you spot the phonies. — POORER BUT WISER.

* * *

DEAR WISER — Phony letters are like phony people. They have an insincere quality — contrived and unnatural.

Phony letters are overwritten, much as phony people overdo and overact.

A bank teller who handles money all day develops a sixth sense about counterfeits. I can spot a klinker in much the same way. Of course, I get fooled now and then, but I'll bet it doesn't happen very often.

* * *

Ann Landers' frank and informative new book, "Teen-Agers and Sex ($2.95) is now available at your book store.

BURNS SELF

ISTANBUL (AP)—Press reports from Marash province say a 16-year-old Turkish peasant girl burned herself to death Friday because her father refused to permit her to marry the man she loved. She poured kerosene on her clothes and set them afire in the main square of Pinarbashi village, the reports said.

Saskatchewan Tradition: Lengthy Terms of Power

By RON MacDONALD

REGIN A (CP)—Political parties generally have held the reins of government in Saskatchewan for lengthy unbroken periods.

The Liberals ruled for 34 years from 1905, when Saskatchewan became a province, to 1939 and for 10 years from 1934 to 1944. In the April 22 provincial election, the CCF is putting 20 unbroken years of power on the line.

In all but one past election the winning party has been given a substantial majority by the electorate. The Liberals won the largest majority in 1934 under the late James G. Gardiner when they took 50 seats to the CCF's five in a 55-seat legislature.

The Liberal party's first defeat in the province in 1929 came in a no-confidence vote that led to the resignation of Premier Gardiner, later federal minister of agriculture. He was succeeded by the late Dr. J. T. M. Anderson who headed a coalition of Conservatives and a few Progressives and Independents.

LOST EVERY SEAT

The Anderson government failed to return a man in the 1934 election and there has not been an aggressive Conservative elected to the legislature since, though a candidate with both Liberal and Progressive Conservative support won a 1953 by-election and sat in the house until 1956.

The second Liberal defeat was in 1944 when the CCF swept to power capturing 47 of the 52 seats.

The CCF's first bid for power was in 1934, when it won five seats. This increased to 11 seats in the 1938 election.

T. C. Douglas was CCF premier from 1944 to November, 1961, when he resigned to become national New Democratic Party leader and turned the reins over to Woodrow S. Lloyd.

In the last provincial election June 8, 1960, the CCF won 38 seats, the Liberals 16 and voting was deferred in the remaining seat. Since then the Liberals have won the deferred election in Athabasca constituency and taken seats from the CCF at byelections in Weyburn, Turtleford and Prince Albert.

PREMIERS ALL LIBERAL

In addition, J. Walter Erb, member for Milestone, left the CCF party and the cabinet May 2, 1962, protesting the government's handling of the medical care insurance plan. He subsequently joined the Liberals.

The Social Credit party had two members in the legislature from 1938 to 1944 and three from 1956 to 1960.

The province's administrations and premiers:

1. Hon. Walter Scott, Liberal, Sept. 5, 1905 to Oct. 19, 1916.
2. Hon. W. M. Martin, Liberal, Oct. 20, 1916 to April 5, 1922.
3. Hon C. A. Dunning, Liberal, April 5, 1922, to Feb. 26, 1926.
4. Hon. James G. Gardiner, Liberal, Feb. 26, 1926, to Sept. 9, 1929.
5. Hon. J. T. M. Anderson, Co-Operative, Sept. 9, 1929 to July 19, 1934.
6. Hon. James G. Gardiner, Liberal, July 19, 1934, to Nov. 1, 1935.
7. Hon. W. J. Patterson, Liberal, Nov. 1, 1935 to July 10, 1944.
8. Hon T. C. Douglas, CCF, July 10, 1944 to Nov. 7, 1961.
9. Hon. Woodrow S. Lloyd, CCF, Nov. 7, 1961 to present.

NEW PENSION PLAN FOR CANADIANS

Johnson, Mr. K Cut Output Of Bomb Materials

Simultaneous Actions Brighten Hope for Pact

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—A further improvement in Soviet - American relations should result from the newly announced plans of President Johnson and Premier Khrushchev to cut production of nuclear explosives, Washington officials said today.

The hope in government quarters here is that such moves, which have been building up for several months, will:

—Create a more favorable atmosphere for disarmament negotiations.

—Brighten the prospects for actual East-West agreement to bring the nuclear arms race under control.

—Initiate measures to discourage surprise attack.

NO BREAK THROUGH

Disarmament by international agreement, however, will require international inspection of Russia as well as in the Western countries, according to long - standing U.S. policy. So far, no breakthrough is in sight on this critical inspection issue.

The production cuts announced by Johnson and Khrushchev Monday, with cooperation from Britain and other main nuclear power, do not require inspection and as far as is known were decided primarily for internal reasons.

In the case of the United States, the president made it clear that the U.S. no longer needs to produce plutonium and enriched uranium — nuclear weapons materials—at the level to which it is capable.

ANNOUNCES CUT

What the president announced in a speech to an Associated Press luncheon in New York was "a further substantial reduction in our production of plutonium and uranium to be carried out over a four year period." The total announced as initial cut in his state-of-the-union message last Jan. 8. He said Monday that the cut he now has ordered add up to a 20-per-cent decrease in plutonium output and a 40-per cent decrease in the manufacture of enriched uranium.

The bringing production in line with need," Johnson said in his AP speech, "we reduce

Will Vote On Hospital Transfers

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—The minority Liberal government faces a confidence test tonight in the Commons over its controversial plans for veterans hospitals.

A Conservative non-confidence motion deploring the government's announced intention to transfer some or all of the 11 big DVA hospitals to provincial or local agencies will come to a vote at 8:15 p.m. EST.

The Liberal lobby will draw voting support from Creditiste and Social Credit MPs, whose spokesmen Monday generally approved of the local transfer plan. It takes all four opposition parties to topple the government on a confidence issue.

Former Conservative veterans minister Gordon Churchill and H. W. Herridge (NDP—Kootenay West), both First World War veterans, attacked the new policy as "shocking" and "disgusting."

Veterans' Minister Roger Teillet, a former RCAF officer who was a pilot in the air war in the Second World War, is expected to make a detailed statement today on the government's intentions.

SET OFF FIREWORKS

Mr. Teillet set off fireworks March 16 when he announced that his department intended to adopt a Glasco royal commission recommendation and turn its hospitals over to local control for use as general hospitals, provided special safeguards could be arranged.

This brought protests from veterans groups across Canada, who feared the quality of medical services available to them would suffer.

Chesley W. Carter, Mr. Teillet's parliamentary secretary, said Monday that first - rate treatment for veterans will remain DVA's first concern, whatever arrangements are worked out for more efficient use of the

Says Ontario Gas Storage Wells Will Be Given to Private Firm

TORONTO (CP)—Donald C. MacDonald, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, charged Monday the provincial government had made a behind-the-scenes deal with natural gas companies at the expense of consumers.

He was immediately accused by Mines Minister George Wardrope of getting "down in the mud—good and deep."

Mr. MacDonald said if underground gas storage wells in Lambton County were operated as a publicly-owned utility, gas could be sold in Ontario for between 90 cents and $1 per 1,000 cubic feet.

He said this would be significantly lower than the Union Gas Company's residential rate of $1.50 and much lower than the Consumers' Gas Company rate of $1.35.

He added that families served by Union Gas in western Ontario would save $14 to $24 a year and those in the eastern Ontario $71 to $91.

Mr. MacDonald said the government was in the process of handing over the remaining storage space up in Lambton County around Sarnia to a company formed by Consumers' Gas and Imperial Oil Limited. This will result in continuing extra charges.

He said Ontario Natural Gas Storage and Pipeline Limited, the subsidiary of Union Gas which handles its storage and transmission, said in a prospectus it anticipated a gross profit of $2.5 million and on a capital stock of $9,510,000.

This illustrates how profitable the gas transmission business can be, the NDP leader said.

Alberta gas can be delivered to Ontario for 33½ cents per 1,000 cubic feet in the off-peak summer season, he added. The consumer pays an extra 25 cents in the ultimate price for transmission and storage here.

Synopsis: It may be that some sections in the southwestern half will escape probably warmer than Monday but extensive cloud and later rain will maintain the cool damp atmosphere currently prevailing in southern Ontario. WARNS OF DANGER TO INEXPERIENCED — Lt.-Gen. Howard Graham, formerly of Trenton, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, reads through yards of ticker tape as heavy trading continued Monday. He warned there is a "danger that enthusiasm is becoming hysteria" on the stock market. He said many people are buying speculative shares when they could ill afford to do so. (CP Wirephoto)

Warning Issued by H. D. Graham As Stock Market Has Frantic Day

TORONTO (CP)—A sharp decline in activity marked early trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today, following the two busiest days ever seen on a North American stock market.

The exchange said that at 11 a.m., after one hour's trading, a total of 4,525,000 shares had changed hands, compared with 10,500,000 shares in the same period Monday and the 11,000,000 shares traded in the first hour Friday.

A note of warning had been sounded Monday.

"There is a danger that enthusiasm is becoming hysteria," Howard D. Graham, exchange president, said in an interview.

Many people were probably buying highly - priced speculative shares when they could ill afford to do so, he said.

Asked if trading would be suspended, Mr. Graham said: "I can't at the moment see cause for changing trading hours or doing anything of the kind . . . But this situation may change as it is always possible."

Analysts said that some of the High School Principal Committed

GUELPH (CP)—Donald Tutt, 52, principal of Fergus district high school, Monday was committed to trial by judge and jury on three charges of uttering grade 13 examination papers.

Mr. Tutt, who is continuing in his post at the school, is charged with forging the name of Jon Gregg Murray to his prejudice on an English literature examination paper envelope; with forging certain answers of his son's—Donald Bruce Tutt—French authors' examination paper with the intent that it should mislead the examiners of the Department of Education, and with forging certain answers of his son's French compositions paper.

The charges were placed last February after Murray had complained he received a mark of 36 in English literature in the final examination after having been an A student during the year. He had difficulty getting into the University of Western Ontario because of the low mark.

Mr. Tutt, who has been free on $1,000 bail since the charges were entered against him, was granted continuance of the bail.

Principal witness at the three-hour preliminary hearing Monday was Arthur E. Wilcox, a handwriting expert with the Attorney - General's Department, who said he examined a Grade 13 envelope.

TELLS OF CHECK

He outlined the handwriting of the words English literature and compared it with the writing reportedly that of Donald Tutt senior. I also compared the writing with the words Donald Bruce Tutt.

"The words English Literature and the numeral two were, in my opinion, written in the writing reported to be that of Donald Tutt senior."

Mr. Wilcox continued that he

Turkish Plan Opposed

CP from AP-Reuters

NICOSIA — Greek - Cypriot newspapers today quoted Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios as saying the insistence by the Turkish government on partition or federalization as a solution to the Cyprus problem was "completely unacceptable."

Local papers said Makarios made the statement Monday after conferring with United Nations mediator Sakari Tuomioja. The Finnish mediator called on the archbishop to inform him of the outcome of his talks with the Turkish government during the weekend.

Makarios was reported as saying the Turks had demanded 30 per cent of Cyprus as the Turkish share in a federal state. After a transfer of populations the two distinct Greek- and Turkish - Cypriot states would become partners in a federal union.

Makarios was quoted as saying: "We are prepared to line up all our forces to resist this Turkish plot."

TURK PARTITION IDEA

The disclosure of Turkish designs "clearly explains the pressent stand of the Turkish Cypriots who are trying to create a situation favoring the partition plans of Ankara."

The Greek-Cypriot papers in editorial comments accused the British government of encouraging Turkish government plans for partition and demanded the immediate withdrawal of British troops from the United Nations peace force.

Meanwhile, there had still been no progress toward breaking the deadlock between the United Nations command and the Turkish-Cypriots over the removal of Turkish populations in Nicosia in the vicinity of the Ledra Palace Hotel and the UN command headquarters. The Greek - Cypriots had accepted a plan drawn up by UN commander Lt.-Gen. Prem Chand Sharma, but the Turks were not immediately available for comment.

Monty Firmly On Side of Conservatives

LONDON (AP) — Viscount Montgomery, one of Britain's greatest generals, stepped into the campaign for election day Monday—allied firmly on the side of Sir Alec Douglas-Home's Conservatives.

The Conservative government Montgomery declared, in a luncheon address "is the one mostly likely to revitalize the British Commonwealth and restore its influence in world affairs and to insure that we remain a nuclear power and militarily strong."

In characteristic Montgomery language, the 76-year-old retired field marshal, declared:

"I hold the view that anyone who thinks Britain should not be a nuclear power must be crackers (crazy)—indeed absolutely crackers."

Provinces Will Get $180 Million Next Two Years

May Increase Federal Taxes in Next Budget

By ALAN DONNELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—In a double-barrelled announcement, Prime Minister Pearson has chartered a new retirement pension plan for all Canadians and promised provincial treasuries a $180,000,000 bonus over the next two years.

His statement to the Commons Monday made official what had been an open secret since last week: That the Ottawa and Quebec governments have reached a middle-ground compromise on their two pension plans. It would allow uniform pension terms to apply right across Canada.

The new scheme, expected to win assent from all provinces, would provide maximum monthly pensions of $104 after 10 years for a maximum monthly contribution of $13.20 shared equally by employer and employee.

The average wage-earner paid $3,600 a year could, after 10 years, retire at age 65 with a $75 pension after monthly contributions of $9—$4.50 from him and $4.50 from his boss.

Mr. Pearson's surprise announcement, however, was that Ottawa will relinquish a big new slice of personal income taxes to the provinces, giving them an extra $60,000,000 next year and double that aggount in 1966.

IT'S ADDITION

This largesse follows the $77,000,000 in additional provincial revenues provided this year, which was announced last November.

Altogether this involves a "substantial" sacrifice of federal revenues, Mr. Pearson said.

The money "will have to be recouped from some other source of taxation."

He didn't say where the added taxation might fall. Canadians probably will have a wait for next year's federal budget to find out.

In terms of the provincial share of the personal income tax pot, Mr. Pearson said provinces—on the basis of 25 per cent —will have 21 per cent next year and 24 per cent in 1965. The existing deal would have given them only 19 per cent in 1965 and 20 per cent in 1966.

The new deal will bring provinces only a whisker away from the 25-per-cent share which Quebec's Premier Lesage said last year they should get, and which he insisted on following the Quebec City federal - provincial conference early this month.

Mr. Pearson said the plan is necessary to meet the "priority" needs of the provinces, especially for education.

Premier Lesage, who following the Quebec conference

Problem Solved --Robarts

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP) — The "vexing" problem of pensions has been solved to Ontario's liking, Premier Robarts indicated Monday.

Mr. Robarts expressed pleasure with the Ottawa - Quebec pension compromise announced by Prime Minister Pearson, declaring that it "brings us a long way towards the national plan that we have sought."

The Conservative premier, who only last Friday described Ontario's pension position as "fluid," read a statement to the legislature in which he:

—Offered his government's "fullest co - operation" in making a national pension plan a reality, thereby putting an end to suggestions of his own making that Ontario would go it alone on pensions, and —Said Ontario welcomes the Liberal - governments recognition of provincial tax needs by its announced intention to give the provinces an additional two per cent of personal income tax revenues in 1965, with a further two per cent in 1966.

ONTARIO WILL GAIN

Mr. Robarts said Ontario will gain about $27,000,000 in 1965 from the increased share of personal income tax. The following year the province's extra share would be about $42,000,000, making a two-year total of $63,000,000.

The additional tax monies were needed by the provinces "if they are to carry out the responsibilities which fall to them and which grow constantly

Indiana Plant Busy Round Clock Turning Out Deadly Nerve Gas

It is nerve gas, a stealthy assassin that is odorless, tasteless and virtually invisible.

But a drop, breathed or soaked into the skin, can kill.

At the end of an assembly line laced with 40 miles of pipes, the liquefied gas is poured into rockets, land mines and artillery shells—destination secret.

The facility, housed in a former atomic energy installation now known as the Newport Chemical Plant, is the major U.S. supply centre for nerve gas. It has been in operation 24 hours a day for three years.

Details on the gas are secret, but a plant official describes it as "hundreds of times more toxic" than any commercial chemical.

An army publication says only that the gas can cause death within four minutes." But a congressional report says less than a minute's exposure can kill.

The army handbook adds that the nerve gas is so potent that, delivered even only on a small scale, its effect can approach that of the new weapons.

The nerve gas dispersed in a spray when its carrier explodes, is absorbed through the body's cholinesterase, a substance used in transmitting nerve signals for muscles to expand.

When this fluid is crippled, muscles continue to constrict and the body strangles its own vital organs. There is an antidote, atropine, but it must be injected quickly, and the gas gives no warning.

The U.S. operates other chemical production facilities at Edgewood, Md.; Pine Bluff, Ark. and Denver. Technicians are working on psycho-chemicals, which can cause panic or complete incoordination of the senses without killing.

Weston Defends South Africa's Apartheid Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Multi-millionaire industrialist Garfield Weston, defending South Africa's apartheid policy, said Monday it is ridiculous to give the vote to all Africans.

"Let's get this straight. This (South Africa) never was a black country," said Mr. Weston who has 6,000 employees in South Africa.

Mr. Weston, recently returned from a three-month trip to South Africa, said it is ridiculous to "try to force South Africa through the United Nations to give the vote to millions of colored and non-white people not ours and whose Christian ethics are completely absent."

Speaking at the annual meeting of George Weston Company Limited, Mr. Weston said the word apartheid "simply means that you segregate the blacks into their own areas."

RECORD IS BEST

The company reported the best quarter - year record in its history after earnings in 1963 increased by nearly $1,500,000.

Mr. Weston said the South African government's housing for black South Africans was as good as any public housing in England "and, believe me, every black piccaninny or black mammy is on the go on the government for a solution to any social problem."

He said the government is raising the living standard of black South Africans by five per cent a year and urged Canadians to visit the country for proof that news reports are exaggerated.

"In our company we've got white boys, Bantu boys and Bantu girls all working together and never once did I see a scowl on any one of their faces," he said.

Man Is Taken Handcuffed From Court

A Belleville man who demanded trial by judge, who later demanded a change of magistrate and who had to be restrained by police officers in magistrate's court was remanded on one week by Magistrate T. Y. Wills, city magistrate's court today, charged Frederick Eadsway, of Belleville, charged with April 1 assault of James Lorimer, was removed, handcuffed, to county jail after the court adjourned.

Called to the stand, Eadsway first demanded trial by judge and jury. When this was refused by Magistrate T. Y. Wills, who said there was no provision for full court trial on the charge preferred, Eadsway demanded trial before another magistrate. He gave no reason for his demand, however, and the demand was denied.

Bail was set at $300 cash.

Problem

ently heavier," the premier said.

Mr. Robarts, who three weeks ago vetoed declaring that Ontario would stay out of the proposed Canada-Pension Plan, said he was heartened by the changes made in the scheme through the federal government's negotiations with Quebec.

"These conclusions go a long way to meeting objections that we have made concerning what should be included in a national plan," he told the legislature.

At a press conference later, Mr. Robarts indirectly assumed part of the credit for the formulation of the national plan, although he indicated Ontario played no direct role in the negotiations.

Asked whether he thought such a plan could have been negotiated without the meetings the last two weeks if Ontario had accepted the Canada Pension Plan at the federal - provincial conference three weeks ago the premier replied: "No."

DOESN'T FIT

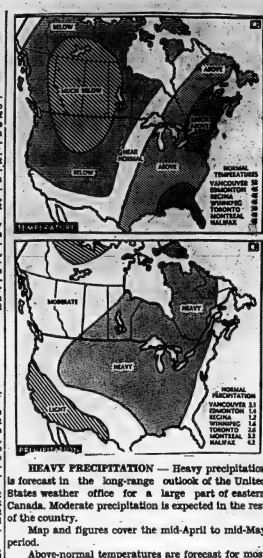
Mr. Robarts would not say whether Ontario would administer the contributory retirement plan itself, but he advanced arguments in favor of so doing.

He told reporters one school of thought holds that it would be better for Canada as a whole if Quebec were the only province to administer the plan provincially.

If Quebec alone stayed out of national administration, this would tend to isolate Quebec from the rest of Canada, he said.

At any rate, said Mr. Robarts, the question of federal or provincial administration was not a problem since it would not affect the initial character of the pension plan.

The revision of the Canada Pension Plan that pleased Ontario most was Ottawa's offer to make available for investment 100 per cent of the funds which would grow into the billions from employer and employee contributions. Ontario had demanded 90 per cent.



As far as Mr. Robarts was concerned, there was only one fly in the ointment—the pension plan would pay a disproportionate period of 10 years, granting full benefits a decade after it went into effect.

Ontario had asked for a 20-year transition period. Premier Robarts maintained it was not fair for a worker who had paid into the fund for only 10 years to receive the same benefits as a person who had paid into it for a lifetime. He also said the longer period would make integration with private pension plans easier.

However, the premier told the press conference Monday that while Ontario did not necessarily agree with the 10-year transition period, "still the whole scheme is not going to founder because it's there." On this point, Ontario likely would give in.

Aside from the details, Mr. Robarts was encouraged that any sort of an agreement had been worked out.

"I would say that I am particularly pleased that it is possible for us in this country, by discussion and negotiation, to adjust our thinking in order that we may devise solutions to our problems which will be satisfactory to all and which will leave us with a sense of national unity and a feeling of confidence that while we may have differences, they can be settled in the best interests of all."

HEAVY PRECIPITATION — Heavy precipitation is forecast in the long-range outlook of the United States weather office for a large part of eastern Canada. Moderate precipitation is expected in the rest of the country.

Accused Given Probation for Two Years

Previously convicted on a charge of indecent assault, Joseph Ralph Wells was given a two - year suspended sentence in Magistrate's court this morning, by Magistrate T. Y. Wills, who warned the man area from a small Newfoundland fishing village last fall, had apparently no unaware of the laws governing the offence, at the time he was charged.

The sentence is suspended on condition he sign a bond of good behavior, report monthly to a probation officer and go to live with his brother in Ameliasburg township. Wells may not leave Ameliasburg township for a prolonged period without the permission of a probation officer.

frantic excitement that had accompanied speculation. Wells on the two previous days was missing today.

"He's just like any other spree—eventually you have to go home and sleep it off," one said.

They did not expect the fall-off in trading to mean the speculative boom could be coming to an end, however.

DUE TO AVARICE

One veteran analyst said the activity Friday and Monday was due to "public avarice."

"The romance appears to be over, however, and we likely won't see any of the volume such as we've had in the last two days."

Prices of the speculative stocks that had marked the huge volumes continued to fluctuate, although many of the issues that had recorded large gains in the last two days were lower in today's early trading.

Monday's frantic trading came despite renewed warnings by speculators that they could suffer heavy losses.

Strong Attack Made Against Diefenbaker

MONTREAL (CP)—State Secretary Lamontagne accused Opposition Leader Diefenbaker Monday of making a last desperate bid for votes in Quebec by exploiting the "national unity crisis" and trying to provoke division.

The minister said Mr. Diefenbaker is playing the cards in the hands of Quebec separatists by opposing any government move designed to counteract injustices against French - Canadians and Quebec.

Speaking in French before the Montreal Reform Club, a Liberal organization, Mr. Lamontagne delivered the most scorching Liberal attack on the Conservative chieftain since the 1962 general election.

Mr. Diefenbaker had started a crisis in English-French relations while prime minister and in recent months he had sought to aggravate the crisis with anti-Quebec speeches across the country, but not in Montreal, the state secretary said.

"To hear him you would think that Mr. Diefenbaker wants to become the leader of English separatism in this country."

He defined "English separatism" as a fanatical attitude that Quebec should be a "colonial reserve" for French-Canadians and that no intolerable claims quo be maintained in English - French relations.

"Mr. Diefenbaker leads the Liberal government every time we have to render justice to Quebec or to meet the aspirations of French-Canadians," he said.

"The large majority of the Canadian population no doubt remains convinced that the unity of Canada is much more important than the specific personal ambitions of a politician and that last try, that of desperation."

Paul Russell New President Kinsmen Club

Paul D. Russell was elected to the presidency of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville for the forthcoming year at their regular meeting, held last night at the Shrine Club.

Mr. Russell has been an active Kinsman for two years and served on last year's executive in the capacity of treasurer.

He was born and raised in Belleville and resides here with his wife, Rosemary and their three children.

Since being called to the Bar in January, 1962, Mr. Russell has been a partner with A. Robert Temple, Member of Parliament for Hastings South.

He will be assisted in the guidance of the club by the following officers: vice-president Bill Andrews; secretary, Bob Swain; registrar, Ron Flalick; treasurer, Bill Lettingham and directors Bud Drury, Mac White, Bill Christie and Stu Meeks as bulletin editor.

Application for membership was received from Rev. James Smith of Belleville's Christ Church and Ralph Moore who is an assistant accountant with the Bank of Montreal. Mr. Smith is actually a transfer from Apex of Australia, which is an affiliate member along with the Kin Association in World Council of Young Men's Service Clubs.

Mr. Smith and Ralph Moore were welcomed by President Frank Walker and then the chairmanship of the meeting was turned over to Deputy Governor Roland Belanger, who conducted the election of the new executive with Kin Jack Hamil and Charlie Gray acting as scrutineers.

After the election Deputy Governor Roland and President Frank congratulated the new executive.

The Kinsmen Club of Belleville has been active in this area since its formation in 1933 and is well known in the community for its many charitable and worthwhile projects.

Orland A. Pinkston who spoke to the Rotary Club at its social evening at the Yacht Club.

Rotary Club Celebrates Social Night

In addressing the Rotary Club of Belleville at their Fellowship Night at the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club, last night, Orland A. Pinkston, Commodore, said the Bay of Quinte was like the four corners of New York, "while the four corners takes you to all parts of the city, the Bay of Quinte takes you to all parts of the country.

Mr. Pinkston said yachtsmen sailing west can reach Trenton and Toronto and by passing through the Trent Canal-system one can go to Peterborough and the Georgian Bay regions.

"Sailing east," he said, "you pass a multitude of coves, Kingston, the Thousand Islands and eventually enter American waters."

He stated that a yacht club, brought tourists trade to an area and said that last year a considerable amount of money was brought into Belleville by visiting members.

The Commodore read a clipping of the first minutes recorded of the first meeting held at the Yacht Club dated 1876. The club was revived in the early '20's and at that time accomodated about 13 yachts.

In 1951 the present club was formed and now is capable of handling a great number of yachts, power boats and sailing vessels.

In closing Mr. Pinkston explained the courses available for young boating enthusiasts both in the power squadron and yachting divisions.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. J. Marshall and thanked by J. B. Corke.

Following the speakers address, films were shown followed by an evening of social enjoyment and fellowship.

The following Rotarians dominated the head table with president, Ronald Cass, T. Y. Wills, Fred Yelland, F. Burrows, Les Smith, Dr. J. Marshall and J. McFarlane.

Prince Souvanna Claims Govt. Is Functioning

By ANTOINE YARED

VIENTIANE (AP) — Neutralist Prince Souvanna Phouma claimed today his coalition government continues to function despite the right-wing coup that unseated him two days ago.

Souvanna made the declaration from the balcony of his villa where right-wing military leaders still have him under house arrest.

U.S. State Undersecretary William Bundy arrived in Vientiane on a special mission for President Johnson to emphasize Washington's disapproval of the right-wing military units' grab for power Sunday.

Despite the rightists' troops ringing Souvanna's villa, the situation appeared to be returning to normal.

From his balcony Souvanna told reporters that King Savang Vatthana, whom he visited with the rebel leaders in the royal capital of Luang Prabang Monday, told him he did not approve of the coup.

Mayor Given Salary Hike, New Treasurer Is Appointed At Short Council Session

TRENTON — Trenton council met in one of the shortest sessions in recent months last night, going into session around 8 p.m. and breaking up around 10 p.m. Present were: Mayor James MacDonald; councillors Edward Todd, Duncan McDonald, Joseph Gould and C. V. Graham; clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry; town engineer Eric Aldersey; his assistant, Arie Hoorsweg; town solicitor, Roderick Campbell; accountant Douglas Jaggee; a delegation from the town's service station operators and reporters. Absent were councillors Reginald Weaver and Ross Burtt.

For the mayor, it was good news; council upped his annual "stipend" from $1,500 to $2,000. Councillors will continue to collect $1,000 for their services at the end of the year.

For Mr. Jaggee, it was good news; he was appointed town treasurer, thus taking the duties of the office off the shoulders of the clerk-comptroller.

For Mr. Campbell, it was bad news. His salary was increased to $4,200 retroactive to Jan. 1, 1964.

For the service station operators, it was good news, too. Council amended a recently passed "restrictive" by-law. Station operators may now close at will, or stay open to all hours, including Sundays.

Thanking council on behalf of the operators, Thomas Hincala was told by the mayor to "sell Trenton while you're selling, gas to out-of-town customers."

For John Q. Public, it was good news . . . of a sort. Council passed a tax levy by-law, by which the town may collect $1,520,617.70 by taxation, which when added to "other revenue" of $526,406.00 makes up the $1,883,018.20 necessary to run the town this year. The "good news" for the taxpayer is that the residential and commercial mill rates are lower this year than last . . . hence, taxes will be lower.

CHOOSE STREET NAMES

In other business, council, asked to choose names for nine streets in the proposed land assembly project between Sidney St. and Byron St. North, approved the names "Beacon, Seneca, Minola, Oak, Verona and Dale," and by passed such names as "Sunrise, Falcon, Park, Redwood and Alpine." The mayor was authorized by the councillors (who confessed they were singularly unimaginative last night), to choose three additional names today to make up the nine and get the list in the hands of the clerk-comptroller before the end of the week. "Verona" was the only name chosen which has historical implications in this area. Councillor McDonald recalled that a steamer with a similar name used to play Quinte waters.

And still on the subject of things historical . . . Councillor Graham will explore the possibility of the town contributing financially to the compilation of a history of Hastings County. Council's comment on the possibility of a history of the county being written by mark Canada's Centennial Year, 1967, were invited by council clerk E. Bateman.

Mayor MacDonald, still reeling the words of the poet, "woodman, spare that tree," challenged a suggestion made by Councillor Gould that three trees in one block on Dundas St. East be removed to make way for sidewalk set-back. Asserted that the trees were "diseased" anyway, the mayor refused to approve the project without further examination.

Councillor Gould not only thinks there are three trees too many on Dundas St. East, he also doesn't approve of a plan brought forward by the PUC to place eight or nine concrete hydro poles within two blocks on this street.

"Far too many to carry the wires," was his comment.

Perhaps the poles were necessary to eliminate "wire drag," suggested town engineer Eric Aldersey, but he will check with the PUC.

APPROVE RESOLUTION

Council didn't approve the suggestion brought forward by a Toronto law firm that the town assume responsibility for Orchard View Drive in the Sidor sub-division in west Trenton. While the town has graded this street and carried out snow removal here, council still doesn't feel it has "accepted" this street for the sub-divider The Toronto firm was anxious to have its client, who has recently bought a house on the street, to be cleared of any obligation to finance street construction, etc., by means of local improvement tax but council wasn't buying.

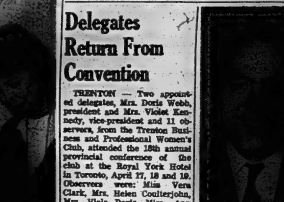
Council did approve a resolution brought down by the town council of Lindsay that the Ontario government be asked to permit municipalities to publish abridged financial statements for the benefit of the taxpayers. The present method of publishing statements in full was "costly," said the Lindsay body and so involved that it was understood by few ratepayers anyhow.

Council also approved a suggestion from the Ontario Department of Highways that a plan of reconstruction of the CNR subway on Trenton Street, be tentatively approved. Council would rather see the subway relocated, but CNR sharing of cost and government grants on this project, while being fairly generous when it comes to reconstruction.

What council intends to do about a comment from a Crookstown man, who recently visited Trenton and wrote to the Department of Highways regarding the traffic situation at the corner of Ontario Street and Dundas Street West is anybody's guess. The Crookstown resident referred to the corner as "a hot spot," "a real hazard to pedestrians," and said that a "child or elderly person" were "taking their lives in their hands to cross the street at this point."

OBJECTS TO PLAN

Councillor Gould said he didn't approve of a Trenton Parks' Board plan to construct an expressway to Dundas Street, in the vicinity of the Trenton Legion Hall. The councillor thinks the building might be in the way of a road the town intends to build here in the future, and he intends will check on the proposed location.



Council agreed to rent the magistrate's courtroom to the Department of Transport each Wednesday for a year. Here, drivers' examinations are held each week.

And council also gave the nod to having the wording of an agreement with Rayner Construction Ltd. of Toronto, changed. The company wants the agreement figures to read, "cost of material, $201,400; cost of labor, $380,406," in order to collect recompense for federal sales' tax. Since Rayner's work on Dufferin Ave., Sidney Street and Dundas Street East is costing $581,806 exclusive, council couldn't see what difference it made how the contract read.

Delegates Return From Convention

TRENTON — Two appointed delegates, Mrs. Doris Webb, president and Mrs. Violet Kennedy, vice-president and 11 observers, from the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club, attended the 18th annual provincial conference of the club at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto, April 17, 18 and 19. Observers were: Miss Vera Clark, Mrs. Helen Coulterjohn, Mrs. Viola Davis, Miss Ann Johnson, Miss Kathleen Patterson, Miss Isabelle McCrodan, Miss Eva Baker, Miss Verna Nelson, Miss Mary Casselman, Miss Gwen Mahon and Mrs. Anita Darling. From among 400 delegates and observers at the conference, Mrs. Davis won the first door prize, an AM and FM radio and three other Trenton ladies also won prizes.

Guest speaker at the Saturday night banquet was Margaret Hickey, public affairs editor of the Ladies' Home Journal who spoke on "The World We Want," and Miss Pauline Jewett spoke at the Sunday luncheon.

Douglas Jaggee, C.A., Trenton town accountant for the past two years, was last night appointed Trenton town treasurer.

NHL Arrogance

Windsor, Ont., is "blacked-out" when certain NHL hockey playoff games are televised over the CBC network.

This action is taken at the insistence of the National Hockey League. The figure-head president of that league, Mr. Clarence Campbell, is reported to have said, "If the CBC doesn't want to lease from the NHL, all it has to do is to run Westerns, or whatever else it chooses."

This leads the Windsor Star to describe Mr. Campbell's attitude as "quite arrogant"—and to suggest that "the plutocrats who own the NHL" may change their tune if the league's monopolistic policies are questioned under the Combines Investigation Act or by the Board of Broadcast Governors.

It is a pity that the Star lost its temper. Doubtless this can be attributed to the hockey fever which must have gripped Windsor as the result of the surprising showing of the Red Wings from neighboring Detroit. The Star's annoyance is understandable, but that does not make its argument sound.

There is no question but that "the plutocrats who own the NHL" have displayed their arrogance and their disdain for what is best for hockey on innumerable occasions. It just so happens, however, that in requiring the CBC to "black out" certain areas when it broadcasts NHL games, the NHL is well within its legal and indeed its moral rights. Professional hockey is a business, like any other. No business is under any obligation to give its products away free. The public has an unalienable right to the privilege of seeing NHL games on television. This phase, at least, of the NHL operations does not constitute a monopoly. It is no business of the Board of Broadcast Governors.

Having said that, we must add that we share the Windsor Star's dislike for the policy of the "black-outs." The blame, though, rightfully rests not on the shoulders of the NHL but on the CBC. It should dictate the terms of these sports broadcasts. If the NHL or other leagues do not like these terms, the CBC should tell the leagues to go fly a kite. In the end, the NHL is likely to suffer more than the CBC. It derives invaluable publicity from these games.

We are not at all sure, though, that any daily newspaper has a right to advise the CBC in this manner. Few papers have shown independence when dealing with sport. It is the one field in which newspapers still give away much of their stock-in-trade, advertising, under the assumption that they have to do it to keep their readers happy.

The arrogance of the NHL is firmly based on the servility of the CAHA, and publicity media, newspapers as well as broadcasters.

Very often, though arrogance generates its own punishment. At playoff times NHL teams play to capacity houses. It is very doubtful whether there would be any change in this situation even if TV coverage were available in the home club's locality. However, in really no comparison between seeing the game in the arena and seeing it in one's living room—the TV thrills are mild compared with those right in the rink. Thus when playoff games are "blacked out" ardent fans, who may have tried to get tickets and been unable to do so, may find they are being deprived of enjoyment without any reason. It is just possible that the fans may remember this, that the NHL may find its "dog-in-the-manger" playoff time policy will reduce attendance at regular games in coming seasons.

If it does, it serves the NHL clubs right.

"About a year ago, I was lunching with an old friend. Over coffee, we congratulated ourselves on having given up smoking, and we went on to tell each other how easy it had been and how smoothly we had drifted into the blissful, un-endowed state of the non-smoker. We agreed that we had achieved this without any hangover of the nervous disability and we smiled upon each other in mutual self-satisfaction. It was only then that I realised that, while we were talking, my friend was steadily eating his way into the earpiece of his spectacles and that I was endlessly fitting and most carefully refitting the cap of my fountain pen to the barrel."—Writer and broadcaster Kevin Fitzgerald.

"I think to some extent the career woman works against what you might call a climate of opinion; especially male opinion, because there is nothing nicer—you can imagine—than being a man with an intelligent wife entirely devoted to your comfort."—Mrs. Mary Stocks, economist, lecturer and broadcaster.

Mr. Charles J. Symons has a litter of silver fox puppies in his pen on Sinclair St. This is the first batch of silver fox puppies born in Belleville. How many are in the lot will not be known for some time as they will remain in the pens until carried out by the mother for. Fox puppies are difficult to raise and no one will go near the pen for about three weeks as the parent dogs are very nervous animals and to disturb them would interfere with the prospect of successfully raising the puppies.

Ottawa Offbeat
Diefenbaker's 'Champagne' Gave Embassy Staff Ulcers

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Not that it ever was any kind of an official secret, but now it's out in the open and public knowledge that another of the differences between Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker as Prime Ministers is their attitude towards beverages.

Dief, for years — but not always — hasn't liked anything stronger than tea, coffee or buttermilk.

Mike, it turns out, is partial to rye on the rocks.

One of the national news magazines revealed this recently when it reported that while he doesn't usually hold with spiking the mainbrace before the sun is over the yardarm, he broke his "not before noon, thanks," rule on a flight to Washington.

"Oh, well," it quoted him as shrugging, when a pre-lunch drink was served aboard the Government aircraft, "if every body else is, guess I will, too."

Small thing, true, except that in the Canadian Capital, where official entertaining is on such a high, wide and handsome scale, with more than 50 foreign embassies competing in hospitality, attitudes on social drinking can become important.

As they were, (it recently, if belatedly, was revealed), back in the Diefenbaker regime when the Prime Minister, as the Capital's social arbiter, put official entertaining on the tea and coffee standard.

It gave some people ulcers.

Dief had broken into the news as a "dry" when he served champagne instead of soft drinks at the Montreal reception he gave for the Queen on her last Canadian visit.

Then, just a couple of years ago, he flew out for an official visit to Washington where everybody thinks of starting work without a couple of jars of Guinness, and continuing the treatment throughout the long day to bedtime.

The Canadian Embassy there with a problem—how to manage a dry reception for the non-drinking PM.

Clearly, in soggy Dublin town, it would be the trickof-the-week, if not altogether impossible.

But diplomats are clever and invariably people in the Ambassador, Alfred Rive, since turned out to pasture, came up with a way out of this tight, social corner.

He would hold the reception in a big room at the Mayflower, with the PM at the dry end, and the oasis around the bend and out of sight from him.

This was it. So they rehearsed the reception—these rehearsals always are—never produced off the cuff—from the airport to the Embassy with innumerable dry runs, until they all had the drill down pat—including the necessary and now-you-don't business of the "L"-shaped room.

Then the Embassy roof fell in with a rocket from Ottawa, signed by Basil Robinson, at which time Dief was Undersecretary's liaison man with External Affairs and now Minister to Washington.

"Urgent: The most important thing to remember in the logistics of Mike Pearson's arrival and welcome is to get the luggage and champagne from the airport to the hotel ahead of the official party."

"PRIVATE STOCK"

The Embassy, of course, was stunned.

Here they were, driving themselves up the wall getting letter-perfect with all their craftily-laid plans for a dry reception — and the boss of the PM flying in with what obviously was his own private stock of vintage stuff.

Some prohibitionist, this Dief!

And didn't he know that Dublin had one of the world's finest wines stashed in its original cellars?

But there was Basil Robinson's signal from Parliament Hill's East Block, and the transmission had been confirmed and re-confirmed as "correct, repeat correct."

So they bustled an Embassy truck out to the airport with instructions to the driver to get the bags and the booze of the PM's plane and high-tail it, topspeed and to hell, with the traffic police, to the hotel.

But the truck was still there under the belly of the big plane, and the champagne still unloaded when the Embassy retinue with the PM aboard, left for the police-escorted official procession to the hotel.

Poor Ambassador Rive, sitting in his car behind the Prime Minister's limousine, sweating it out, convinced that all his carefully concocted calculations had blown sky high, and his staff failed in the mission that Ottawa headquarters had cabled was so urgently important.

It was only later when the unhappy truck driver was called on the mat to be chewed out for being so slow-footed that they learned the champagne had not been the PM's supposed private stock at all, but Gilbey's Champagne, then and still his Handy-Man-Around -the-Centre Block.

But it would never have happened if the previous PM, like the present PM, was a two-martini-on-the-rocks rather than a buttermilk-and-biscuits Chief Executive.

Strictly Personal
Why Do We Have Urge To Categorize?

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Nothing is more certain than that uncertainty makes us uneasy. We have an absolute need to put things "in their place," even if the place is where we want to put them, and not where they truly belong.

One of the most interesting experiences in communication I have had throughout the years is running into people, from time to time, who have never read my column and who know that I write one only by vague reputation.

Invariably, the first question they ask me is, "What sort of column do you write?" I answer, "It's hard to describe, really — it's just a daily column about whatever happens to interest me."

This reply bothers them, and they persist: "Is it about people? Is it about current events? What sort of material do you deal with? Is it funny, or serious, or gossipy, or what?"

When I tell them that it's about ideas and feelings that come to me on a variety of topics, they are uncomfortable and almost angry with me for being so evasive. What they want is some hard category into which they can place my writing, some label they can attach so that they won't have to think about it.

It is upsetting to them that I do not come out and brand myself clearly as a "Washington columnist," or a "round-the-town" columnist, or a "human interest" writer, whatever that may mean. The fact that I refuse to fit into any of these neat little boxes seems to them almost a willful perversity on my part.

Through this trivial, but nonetheless important, example, we can perhaps see more clearly the human need to classify, to categorize, to structure reality in such a way that everything loses fluctuating, and variable is filed away alphabetically — or buried, as they do on the pilot with a tombstone clearly engraved above it.

But since life is primarily a process, and not a static series of events, we violate the reality of things when we do this. Not only do things change, but ideas change, and even words change. The word "liberal," for instance, has changed its political meaning 180 degrees since it was banned in Germany.

Our psychological needs come before, and are more basic than our philosophical needs. Psychologically, we cannot stand the tension of uncertainty, contradiction, and the overlapping of categories that obtains in the real world — and so we force a strict and petty order philosophy to fit the contours of the mind. Whatever does not fit is rejected, restructured, or relegated to the limbo of the "unreal."

Gout Sufferers Should Avoid High Purine Foods

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: A member of my family has developed gout. We have just learned of it and we are very worried. We know it's a serious disease. We would like to know in how fast its progress is, and what can be done, including diet which we understand is very important. — A. B.

I think you are overestimating the seriousness of gout. You sound as though it is fatal or totally disabling.

Gout is serious but not that much, as a rule.

Gout has been known at least since the days of Hippocrates, the father of medicine.

Te body sometimes accumulates more uric acid than it should. In turn, chalky deposits of sodium urate form. A joint (the joint of the big toe is the commonest place, but others can be affected, too) suddenly becomes excruciatingly tender.

This is sheer misery while it lasts. After a while (sometimes a few days, sometimes longer) the pain disappears. But it always comes on again, without warning, and the agony is repeated.

For several hundred years, colchicine has been known as a drug which relieves the pain. Only in the last hundred years has benemid been found very useful in preventing attacks instead of relieving them afterward. So at long last we now have a lot of people going about their business free of these periodic bouts with gout.

The matter of diet is declining in importance. That does not mean that diet is without value, but that it is not as important as in the past.

The idea used to be that rich food and drink were the cause of disease. That now is doubted. It is a disturbance in uric acid metabolism the cause of which is not known. It affects 20 men for every woman.

Most doctors recommend that patients be at least moderately careful of their diet. Don't go overboard on rich foods. Avoid foods high in purines: the "organ meats", such as liver, sweetbreads, kidney, tongue; and, generally speaking the red meats, such as beef and lamb. Also avoid fish, such as herring, mackerel, sardines, anchovies, salmon, trout, haddock, sole; turkey, duck, goose, bacon; also avoid gravies, meat broths and soups and extracts, as well as lentils, beans, peas, sardines, rabbit and squab.

Chicken, lamb, ham, herring, salmon, tuna, whitefish, lobster, crab, are some which are of only moderate purine content.

Eggs, cheese, milk, nuts are low in purine, so you have a fair amount of choice in obtaining protein. Cereals, vegetables and fruits are either low or moderate in purine.

My advice for the gout patient is to let his physician set up a suitable continuing routine of medication to ward off attacks, and bolster this with reasonable diet.

If you can't eliminate the high-purine foods, avoid them when possible or else use them in moderation.

Dear Dr. Molner — Xray showed a small stone in my right kidney.

Would sleeping on right side cause stones to accumulate there? Being an invalid, I cannot lie on your left side very long, and must sleep on my right side.

Is there any truth to the rumor that cranberry juice will keep stones from forming? — R. F.

I doubt that sleeping on the right side would have anything to do with it. However, a high degree of inactivity can cause a change in the calcium balance of the body which may encourage stone formation.

The only virtue I can see in cranberry juice is that it has an acid ash, hence helps keep the urine on the acid side. Whether this is of any benefit depends on the chemistry of the stones, for there are various kinds.

Note to M. J. B.: I do not have a booklet on the subject which is bothered by "too much protein." On the contrary, the risk is that many people get too little protein.

"You Can Stop Sims Trouble!" is the title of my booklet explaining what sinus trouble really is, and how to help sinus sufferers to do something about it. For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Not Just Quebec's Problem

Montreal Gazette

In the last ten years the capital and current expenditures (exclusive of debt retirement) of the Canadian provinces have risen by 195 per cent. Their total net general revenue during the same period has increased by only 152 per cent. This has meant that from a surplus position of some $78 million in fiscal 1954 provincial finances have suffered reverses, to the point where a combined deficit of $350 million is likely for 1963-64.

These figures, compiled by the Canadian Tax Foundation, underline the serious disparity in which the provinces find themselves. Quebec's problems, though hardly unique in many of their own, are not unique; they form part of the financial plight of the provinces in general.

The explanation of this mounting crisis in provincial finances is not simply that all provincial expenses have been rising. The real answer lies in the fact that the demands for education, health and welfare, and transportation have so enlarged provincial responsibilities that about three-quarters of all that the provinces spend is in these fields alone.

Education claims 28 per cent of provincial spending. Health and welfare take another 28 per cent, with transportation and communications taking 20 per cent.

In none of these fields is any province likely to cut back its spending, or feel that it can do so. Education is not something that can be postponed. It is a now or never proposition so far as the young people are concerned. Health and welfare are more or less fixed costs, with little or no leeway for alteration. Transportation and communications are mostly a matter of highway construction and maintenance, and in a country with large distances such expenditures are difficult to restrict or postpone.

* * *

The problem then, so far as financial difficulty is concerned, is not simply Quebec's problem. It is the problem of the provinces as such. It simply is not possible for the provinces in ten years to have their spending increased by 195 per cent, and their net general revenue by only 152 per cent, with an increase of total debt between fiscal 1953 and 1962 by 78 per cent.

Carry figures of this kind forward even for the next five years and consider what the condition of the provinces will be. The revenues of the provinces are out of touch and out of date, in relation to the priority of their modern responsibilities.

Newspaper subscribers in Exeter, Ont. were surprised to find the Reverend Anthony Andrews delivering their newspapers. He had answered an advertisement for delivery boys, and had agreed to rise at 5:30 a.m. to deliver 200 papers daily for a weekly salary of $8.40. Mr. Andrews explained that the job enabled him to make contact with people he would never otherwise meet.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The edge was taken off the speculative boom—at least for the time being—as the volume on the stock market dipped to 4,526,000 shares at 11 a.m. today compared with 10,576,000 at the same time Monday and higher-priced penny issues eased.

PCE Explorations fell 10 cents to 78 cents, Bunker Hill seven cents to 68 cents, Glenn Uranium seven cents to 43 cents, Belleterre four cents to 94 cents and Central Porcupine 3½ cents to 13 cents.

Bankfield rose 4½ cents to 20 cents, Min-Ore nine cents to 50 cents, Rowan Consolidated three cents to 14½ cents and Aumaque, 2½ cents to nine cents.

The ticker was eight minutes late within the first 10 minutes of trading and had dropped behind 25 minutes at the end of the first hour.

Industrials inched higher with papers in the lead. B.C. Forest and Great Lake Paper both advanced ¼ and Abitibi, Consolidated Paper and MacMillan-Bloedel ¼. Algoma gained ½.

METALS SOFTEN

Falconbridge declined ¾, Noranda ⅝ and Geco Mines ¼ in softer senior metals.

On index, the exchange index advanced .08 to 140.71, industrials .08 to 150.42, western oils .19 to 80.58, base metals slipped .12 to 68.13 and golds were even at 150.42.

It was another wild day Monday.

The market was stunned when it learned 15,578,000 shares were traded during the first hour but it was discovered later in the day an error had been made in counting and the true figure was 10,576,000 shares.

Despite this, the pace was in some ways even more hectic than Friday as tired exchange officials tried to cope with the rush after working all weekend to catch up with essential data.

Central Porcupine again led the actives with a turnover of 2,860 shares, off 2½ cents to 13 cents.

Min-Ore rose 20 cents to 41 cents, Windfall 13 cents to 63 cents, Gulf lead six cents to 29 cents and Norgold six cents to 20 cents, all on extremely heavy volume. PCE Explorations declined 14 cents to 88 cents.

WARNING ISSUED

L-Gen Howard D. Graham, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, warned that "enthusiasm is becoming hysteria" and that many people were probably buying highly speculative shares "when they can ill afford to do so."

The industrial index closed ahead, although settling back from the high reached early in the afternoon.

Abitibi was a standout, up ½ to 15¼ after reaching 16 on a turnover of 65,270 shares. An official confirmed the company had handed International Nickel the mineral rights on 220 square miles of its property just north of Timmins on a split-the-profit basis if anything is discovered.

Consolidated Paper advanced 1¼ to 42¼, Canadian Westinghouse ¾ to 38, Bank of Montreal and Bank of Nova Scotia ½ each to 63¾ and 70½ respectively and Massey - Ferguson ¾ to 22½.

Hudson Bay Mining declined ¼ to 68 and Denison ¼ to 12¾ in senior base metals. International Nickel closed unchanged at 63⅛ after reaching 64.

The exchange Index advanced .12 to 140.63, Industrials .13 to 150.34, western oils .31 to 80.39, golds 1.50 to 132.21 and base metals fell .15 to 66.25.

Youth Convicted Of Car Theft; Remand Second

A Belleville youth was found guilty of car theft in magistrate's court today, and another was remanded one week on the same charge. David Fredrick Wilhelm, 18, of Belleville, pleaded not guilty to the charge, but was not represented by council and put up no defence. He was found guilty on the testimony of Constable William Armstrong, who testified he had seen Wilhelm driving the car in question, and of acting detective Dale Ashbury, who found a fingerprint identified as Wilhelm's on the steering wheel.

Robert Wayne Fowler, also of Belleville, was identified by Const. Armstrong as a passenger in the car. Represented by lawyer Donald Boyle, he admitted that he had been with Wilhelm before and after the alleged offence, but denied that he had been a passenger in the stolen car. He gave a detailed account of his actions about the time the constable claimed he was seen him in the car, but brought forward no witnesses to substantiate his story. He was remanded one week, to give the magistrate time to check the legal position of an unsubstantiated alibi.

A similar charge against Gregory Chambers, 17, was withdrawn.

Montreal Boy, 10, Writes Plea To Queen to Shun Quebec Visit

MONTREAL (CP) — Tempersaid David Berger was worried about Queen Elizabeth's planned visit to Quebec this autumn.

So worried, in fact, that he wrote the Queen and asked her to postpone the visit.

His letter, mailed March 16 to Buckingham Palace, read: "I am 10 years old and in Grade 5 in the province of Quebec. I have read in the newspapers that you are planning to visit us soon, but I also read that there are some evil people who may harm you. I do not want you to be harmed, and for this reason I would like you to postpone your visit."

The reply, written by one of the Queen's ladies-in-waiting and received by David over the weekend, read:

"I am commanded by the Queen to thank you for your letter about her visit to Canada. The Queen thinks it is very kind of you to worry about her safety but has asked me to assure you that she will come to no harm."

David, asked in an interview Monday night who would want to harm the Queen, said:

"It's that group that wants to separate Quebec from the rest of Canada.

"That group of people says that they are not being treated equally. I think that every body gets a good deal in Quebec."

Gives Reasons For Withholding Support of Plan

Canadian Insurance companies and insurance men, in withholding support to the proposed Canada Pension Plan, are doing so in the country's best economic interests, not because they are thinking of their own pocketbooks.

This was stated Friday night by Fraser Deacon, CLU, well known Toronto insurance man, as he spoke to the Bay of Quinte Life Underwriters at their annual ladies' night held at the Hotel Quinte.

"The reason we are not backing the pension plan is not because we are thinking of our own pocketbooks but because we know what happened to the Unemployment Insurance and Ontario Hospital Plans," he said. "We are thinking only of what is best for the country economically. This is serious business."

Speaking on insurance generally, Mr. Deacon emphasized the value of agents being sincere with their clients.

To the ladies Mr. Deacon said the most important part they can play is being a partner in the insurance business was to show confidence in their husbands.

President Sid Martin welcomed members' wives and guests, the ladies being toasted by Herbert Kerr. Mrs. Willlam Holway replied.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Stan Wiggins and thanked by Ralph Knowlton, who also on behalf of the local group made a suitable presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Deacon.

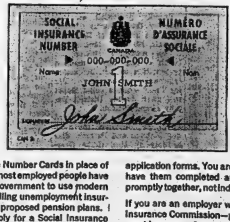
Denies Profit Made by Conservatives

TORONTO (CP)—Mines Minister Wardrope said Monday he knew of no Conservative members of the legislature who made money on the stock market Thursday after a press release was issued by the mines department concerning discovery of a fine copper-silver ore body north of Timmins.

Leo Troy (L — Nipissing) quoted a report in a Toronto newspaper (The Telegram) which said some Conservatives had made "handsome profits" because the release was issued half an hour before the opening of the market.

The report said some government members bought in at rock-bottom prices that morning, then cashed in their profits in the afternoon. Mr. Troy asked if there was advance information to some who made a killing.

Mr. Wardrope replied the statement had been given first by the company, Texas Gulf, to a weekly mining newspaper early in the morning for release at 11 a.m.



The minister said that when he heard of it he obtained the same release from the company in order to distribute it to members of the press gallery at Queen's Park. Mr. Wardrope could not say whether it was delivered to the gallery before the opening of the market.

Now persons employed in every walk of life are making application for a Social Insurance Number!

Your government is issuing Social Insurance Number Cards in place of the unemployment insurance numbers that most employed people have had until now. The new numbers will help government to use modern office methods for greater efficiency in handling unemployment insurance, and also other social benefits such as proposed pension plans. For these reasons, you are invited to apply for a Social Insurance Number, even if you are not a contributor to the unemployment insurance plan. Here's what you do:—

IF YOU ARE AN EMPLOYEE: Your employer will give you an application form for a Social Insurance Number. You can help most by completing it promptly and accurately and returning the form to your employer. He will send it to the nearest office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

IF YOU ARE UNEMPLOYED: If you are receiving unemployment insurance benefit you will complete an application form for a Social Insurance Number when you report to the U.I.C. in person or by mail.

IF YOU ARE AN EMPLOYER: If you are an employer registered with the Unemployment Insurance Commission—you will automatically receive application forms. You are asked to distribute them to your employees; have them completed and signed by each employee and returned promptly together, not individually, to the local office of the Commission.

If you are an employer who is not registered with the Unemployment Insurance Commission—please get in touch with your local Unemployment Insurance Commission office and inform them how many employees you have. The Unemployment Insurance Commission office will then send you application forms for each of your employees to complete. When all forms have been completed, you will return them to the Unemployment Insurance Commission. Your employees' Social Insurance Number Cards will be sent to you for distribution to them.

Your government asks for your co-operation in introducing the new numbers as quickly as possible. Apply for your SOCIAL INSURANCE NUMBER NOW.

REAVIE — MINAKER

Pink and white gladioli and white satin bows on each of the guest pews formed a background setting in Bridge Street United Church on Saturday, April 11, when Miriam Rose Allene Minaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Minaker, Belleville was united in marriage to Clair Aubrey Reavie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reavie, Tweed R.R. 1. The Rev. H. M. Davis officiated at the ceremony.

Traditional wedding music was rendered by the church organist Mr. Alec Brooks, who also accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Manley in two appropriate selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father was gowned in white organdie with the bodice featuring an overlay of lace highlighting the square neckline and long sleeves tapering to lily points. The semi-bouffant skirt was enhanced with an overlay bordered with Chantilly lace and appliques of lace and sequins. Her finger-up veil was held by a crown of seed pearls and crystal tear drops. She carried a bouquet of white roses mingled with lacy fern and stephanotis.

The maid of honour, sister of the bride, Miss Mary Minaker was gowned in pink organza dress with a bouffant skirt highlighted by a draped panel edged with Chantilly lace. Her short tulle veil was held by pink velvet roses and she carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations.

Mr. Robert Reavie of Napanee was groomsman, while Mr. Paul Dano of Belleville, R.R. 7 and Mr. Alex Flemmang of Belleville were the ushers.

A reception was held in the banquet room of Johnny's Restaurant, Belleville where the bride's table was highlighted with a three-tier wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom under an arch of pink and white roses and misted about the base with tulle and pink baby roses. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a pink dress of organza over taffeta with the fitted bodice adorned with 3/4-length Swiss lace, white and pink accessories and a corsage of baby pink roses and white carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a horizon blue crepe dress with draped side panel, flowered hat of beige and blue and a corsage of pink roses and white carnations.

For the wedding trip to points in the United States, the bride chose a novelty knit suit in brick red, black patent shoes and purse, black and white straw hat, a cream colored fur fabric and a corsage of white roses.

Guests were present from Belleville, Napanee, Tweed, Flinton, Pembroke, Ottawa, Toronto and Northport.

Previous to the marriage the bride was entertained at a presentation by the girls of the Bank of Montreal when she was presented with a canister set and at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Gwen Pincombe.

Mr. and Mrs. Reavie will reside at Tweed R.R. 1.

74 Surviving Thalidomide Victims Now 2 Years Old Face Normal Life Expectancy

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Though they are no longer in the headlines, Canada's 74 surviving thalidomide victims must go on living. Most of them, now about 18 months to two years old, face a normal life expectancy.

What can be done for the infants, born deformed after their mothers took the drug thalidomide during pregnancy, depends on the degree of deformity.

One of the three special centres set up by the federal and provincial governments to study the problems of these children, and to help them, is in Toronto's Crippled Children's Centre. It is a fascinating modern hospital set well back from a main road near Sunnybrook Hospital for war veterans. Its ramps and electric eye doors are designed to smooth the path of children in wheelchairs and on crutches.

Fourteen of Ontario's 24 thalidomide survivors are being treated there. They are the more severe cases, says Dr. I. W. Davidson, medical director. The others are being treated by family doctors and specialists near their homes.

PARENTS LEARN

The children do not live at the centre. They come only for special help, medical and psychological, and are sent home as soon as possible. At the same time, their parents are being taught how to teach and care for them.

"The parents are an excellent group, they are co-operative and have a good understanding," Dr. Davidson says. "But as each child grows older there will be more problems which will have to be met as they appear."

All of the treatment depends on the nature and extent of the deformity of the individual child. Some can be trained to use the deficient limbs they have. If the child's arms are long enough to reach his mouth, he can be taught to eat and to play. Surgical correction can help some so that they can be fitted with conventional artificial limbs. Some of the most difficult and tragic cases may have what is called flippers, misshapen growths, where an arm or a leg should be.

Basic training for any of the children begins with balance. Their bodies are not normally balanced, their deformities pre-vent many of them from developing muscles and muscular control in the normal thrashing, experimental way most babies do.

USE ROCKING BOARD

When necessary the children are propped in a sitting position at first. The next stage is to improve their sitting balance on a rocking board.

Then they can be put in a canvas seat slung on a frame, similar to an ordinary baby tending chair on wheels, in which they can rock a little and get used to being up.

If necessary, they can begin to learn to stand in the frame, when they are old enough. A child can be propped on small curved skis, like barrel staves. He can teeter, get accustomed to the height he will be, and possibly learn to move forward.

Once they show some balance, some of the children can be given artificial lower limbs. A kind of bucket grips the child's pelvis to attach the legs.

Only if a deficiency is great enough is demand it are artificial limbs used, Dr. Davidson says. The first replacement for an arm or hand will have sponge rubber mitts. When the child is about one, the mitt can be replaced with a hook which allows him to grasp objects, to hold and use them. If he has enough upper arm, a conventional artificial arm can be used.

MOTORS DO WORK

"Research is being carried out in the use of external power to provide movements in limbs. They are now powered by carbon dioxide. Tiny electric motors do the work, controlled by a valve system operated by the child. German and English children who are older are using them."

All of the work with the children is developing as they grow, as part of the program set up by the federal government to look into the problem of the thalidomide children and the whole problem of juvenile amputees and limb deficiencies.

This is one of three prosthetic research and training units set up, supported by federal and provincial governments," Dr. Davidson says. "We have a program of research and development of prosthetics for juveniles, a training program and sponsor refresher work for prosthetists."

The Toronto centre is in its second year of operation. It is a 105-bed hospital with, currently, about 110 day-care patients. Amputees are treated there, along with children afflicted with cerebral palsy, poliomyelitis, children who have orthopedic problems, some with cleft palates.

Life of a Politician Involves Learning Process Says Dr. Pauline Jewett

Members of the Belleville and District University Women's Club and their guests enjoyed a glimpse into the life of a politician at their April meeting last Friday evening in Education Hall, Bellevile General Hospital. Guest speaker Dr. Pauline Jewett, M.P. for Northumberland, delighted her audience with her witty and informative account of the "Life of an M.P. — in Parliament and Out."

Three main ingredients were necessary to be a successful politician, noted Dr. Jewett. The first, and perhaps most important, was enormous physical energy, since an M.P.'s working day usually lasted 16-18 hours. The second was a "tough skin," since a member was apt to hear more criticism than praise of his efforts and he must also be tough enough not to cave in to every whim and suggestion. The third was "some modicum of intelligence" and a certain facility of mind, for as M.P. was often required to switch his thoughts rapidly from one subject to another.

Though Dr. Jewett was a teacher of politics for several years before her election, she indicated that she had been amazed at how much she had to learn when she became an M.P. "I was in a full learning process from the beginning" she said. "An M.P. learns from his constituents and from the problems which come to his attention which he then generalizes."

UNOFFICIAL OMBUDSMAN

"The research work in my constituency is the biggest part of an M.P.'s life," said Dr. Jewett. This she had expected that most of her time as an M.P. would be devoted to national issues and problems, in fact 50% of it was spent in dealing with constituency matters and acting as "a sort of unofficial ombudsman" for her constituents. Though this often resulted in her dictating letters until 2 a.m. three evenings per week, the M.P. for Northumberland described this role of as satisfying, necessary and useful.

A second part of an M.P.'s life was the Parliamentary life. "One of the most interesting things in politics is to become part of a party organization. Nationwide parties are indispensable, because only through them can one create real understanding," declared Dr. Jewett.

The third side of an M.P.'s life involved belonging to organizations participating in radio and T.V. programs and fulfilling speaking engagements. Very seldom was there time to prepare adequately for these "outside" commitments, said Dr. Jewett, as she noted that Canadian M.P.'s had little help as compared with U.S. congressmen.

Despite the shortage of help, the long hours, the extra problems encountered by a woman politician and the oftentimes superficiality of politics, Dr. Jewett concluded that her life as M.P. was most satisfying and that many of her most enjoyable moments were those spent visiting her constituents in Northumberland.

Dr. Jewett was introduced by Mrs. A. Orsdell and thanked by Mrs. A. S. Lewis.

The business meeting chaired by Mrs. A. E. Pugh, preceded Dr. Jewett's address. The recipient of the scholarship committee, that of $300 scholarships and one $200 scholarship for this year was adopted. Mrs. A. S. Lewis, general convener, reported on the purchase of piano for the "Spring Fair" and exhibition of Mandy Macdonald paintings. Other business members at the fair was the club's only money-making project, and that the paintings on sale at the "Fair" made possible the club's donations to a University student, a student at Queen's and to the Nursing Students' reference library.

Mrs. W. N. Hurst urged members to be diligent in the sale of their draw tickets for the charming Mandy Macdonald oil painting of the 'Beach' at Picton.

Mrs. Pugh announced that the closing bridge party would be held on May 7 at the home of Mrs. W. N. Hurst and that the reading group would meet on April 30th at the home of Mrs. R. G. Wade.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Dr. A. Pringle and her committee.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

MAIL CALL

Question: We had dinner at the home of friends recently, and I was seated next to the hostess' eight year old son, who usually is allowed to stay up and dine with company. The child kept playing with his butter knife and roll, and at one point almost slid the butter into my lap. Without thinking, I took the knife away from him and told him it was impolite to play with food. The hostess joined in and told him to behave himself, but I could see she was embarrassed at my having had to speak to the boy. Was it impolite of me to do so? Should I have sat quietly and kept a close grip on my teeth? — Mrs. G. H., New York City

Answer: When the boy started to fiddle with the roll and butter, his mother should have quietly told him to stop. Perhaps she didn't notice you were taking away the knife and butter, in which case it was impossible for you to act in self-defense, but in a more diplomatic fashion. instead of accusing him of being impolite, you could have said, "here, let me butter that roll for you," and taken hold of the situation in a gracious manner which would have saved face — and feelings — all around.

Question: My girl friend and I — we're both twenty — are going to a resort. We ski, ice horseback riding and tennis. We've never been to this type of hotel before and we're not sure we should talk to other guests, entertain ourselves, or what? We'd appreciate your help. — L. W., Newark, N.J.

Answer: A resort usually is quite informal. Guests seated at the same table in the dining room usually introduce themselves and break during each meal. It would be rude not to. Naturally you'll find a common interest with others who share your enthusiasm for riding and tennis, so introductions and conversation occur spontaneously. It's better form, though, to be a bit reserved about speaking to people instead of being aggressive. If there's a social director — and usually there is — there should be many organized social gatherings at which it's perfectly permissable to speak with others without a formal introduction.

Dr. Helen Hogg Is First Woman President of Royal Canadian Institute

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — The first woman president of the Royal Canadian Institute is a grandmotherly star-gazer trying to fit the planets into a celestial jigsaw puzzle.

Dr. Helen Hogg, who has accumulated a hatful of honors and an international reputation during 28 years as an astronomer, is equally enthusiastic whether talking about her work with the stars or her grandchildren.

The infectious enthusiasm was evident as she reflected on her new job—the presidency of a 115-year-old Toronto-based organization devoted to the advancement of science.

"Aren't the pictures wonderful?" she said, smiling up at the portraits of some of her stern, bewhiskered predecessors in the board room of the institute's headquarters.

"The 86-year-old widow said she is eager to get on with the work of the institute. She will oversee the program of 12 lectures which brings scientists to Toronto to explain their work to the public.

She will work on its program of scholarships, high school essay competitions and new summer school for gifted students.

SHOULD START YOUNG

"We all feel the sparking a student's interest in doing science about the world around us is important. If your interest is caught young — by 12 years old, you can go far."

Along with her new role, Dr. Hogg will continue with a host of other tasks—research, teaching, writing a once - a - week newspaper col u m n reading about work in astronomy in half a dozen languages.

As professor of astronomy at the University of Toronto, she teaches undergrads from freshman to graduate, and is pleased that enrolment in this field has been increasing.

"Astronomy being a rather intangible science, it has seemed more reserved to people," she says. "They used to say, 'What does it matter what's way up there?'

"People will still say 'What is the good of spending billions of dollars to put a man on the moon?' but they don't question the desire to know more about astronomy.

"They say, 'You know, I wish I knew more about it' which is good. It's the way I've felt for years. I've been happy to devote 28 years—just that appalling!—to my field."

FOUND NEW STAR

When she is being a researcher, Dr. Hogg's bedcovers are at the David Dunlap Observatory in Richmond Hill 15 miles north of Toronto. There she photographs cepheid variable stars through the 74 - inch telescope.

She says she's glad her stars are only visible during warm weather because to look at pictures she spends nights at the dark of the moon perched on a platform she calls her owl's nest high up at the top of the observatory dome.

In the winter she pores over the photographs to catalogue the brightness, size, speed and color of her stars. The facts she gathers add to knowledge of how the cosmos behaves and. Last fall a new star was discovered in one of her photographs.

Reading papers published in other languages "is one of these jobs that has several good results," she says; it provides a "grand source" of topics for her column in the Toronto Star and lectures. Another result is a reference book which the University of Toronto Press will publish in September.

Another current job is membership on the advisory committee on science and medicine for the 1967 Montreal world's fair.

IN GREATER DEMAND

"I'm always getting put on committees," she says. "As soon as one gives up, another creeps up on me."

Her membership in other scientific societies will take her to three meetings between now and autumn, in Montreal, Charlottesville and Hamburg, Germany.

Dr. Hogg is a native of Lowell, Mass., who attended Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe College and Harvard, where she met the late Dr. Frank Hogg, came to Canada as his bride. He became head of the U. of T. astronomy department and director of the observatory. She still spends holidays at a family cottage on Lake Dora in Muskoka, Ont., where she and an 80-year-old helper won what her friends describe as a "pitiful" fight against poison ivy.

She has three children, including one radio astronomer, and five grandchildren.

"I love it! I would be fun to have grandchildren but I couldn't visualize how much I would adore a little people. They're not just grandchildren, they're my friends. I could talk to them as I do to my colleagues."

Dr. Hogg is a woman of other firsts. She has been a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada for 16 years, the first woman elected to its physical sciences section and, in 1961, the first woman president of the section.

In 1950 she brought an American Astronomical Society award to Canada for the first time. And she is a past-president of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada.

How is a woman made any difference to her career?

"In some ways I suppose it is harder. But a woman who does things that are a little different gets more attention then a man does for doing the same things."

FROM THE MAIL BOX

Dear Pegg Rogers:

Both my nine year old daughter and I have straight hair. We have been using a well-known home permanent wave package with great success. Recently, I saw a new "non-curly" permanent wave package advertised, which gives "body" to the hair without any danger of frizzing. My daughter's hair reaches to the middle of her shoulder blades, and she does not want to have it cut, while I wear mine much shorter in a page boy roll. Do you think I should experiment with the new non-curl permanent?

I have been dieting successfully for the past two months. I am very pleased with myself because I am losing weight and not finding the whole thing too difficult. I am over forty and as you can guess, with my loss of weight has come a slackening of muscles. As I cannot exercise strenuously, I was wondering about the new "exercise machines" that are in the mail. Is a cycle. The patient lies on the rower and the feet are rotated above the floor by the machine in circular pedals. I cannot afford massage or other courses at a beauty salon and I do not want to buy a useless gadget. What do you think? — Signed — M. H.

Dear M. H.: I would not suggest the new non-curl type of permanent for your daughter's long hair as I cannot see how it would be strong enough to give the added spring she needs. The weight of her hair would tend to straighten it. However, the new permanent might work very well for your hair as you would require little curl for a page boy style.

According to all the experts, have been using a well-known physical education and therapists, the effectiveness of the exercise machine for home use without supervision of the trained expert is still questionable. As you know, this column never pretends to give medical advice even in a general way.

From your description of the cycle machine, it sounds as though it puts the patient through the old and effective bicycle exercise, which is guaranteed to reduce the waistline. Personally, I would rather exercise under the direction of a physical training teacher. There are many "Keep Fit" classes in your city as, for example, at the Y.W.C.A. These are under the supervision of trained therapists. The classes are restricted to those who can supply a doctor's certificate. All enjoyable method of firming the muscles is regular swimming. Again, you will find swim classes or sessions scheduled on a regular basis at the "Y".

Check with your doctor to be sure that mild exercise is safe. Once you obtained his permission, I would invest my money in one or both of these classes. You will have more fun, it is safer and you will make new friends. After all, who wants to make friends with a machine?

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers in care of this paper.
